

THE LIFE OF RĀMĀNUJĀCHĀRYA

THE EXPONENT OF THE

ŚIṢṬĀDVĀITA PHILOSOPHY

BY

Madaville Govindāchārya

AUTHOR OF

with Rāmānuja's Commentaries, The Lives of the Saints, The Divine Wisdom of the Vedānta and the Vedānta (Questions, &c., &c., &c.)

Madras :

S. MURTHY & CO..

305, THUMBUR CHETTY STREET.

1906.

(Copyright Registered.)

MADRAS .

PRINTED AT THE KAPALEE PRESS,

305, THUMBUR CHETTY STREET.

INSCRIBED

(BY PERMISSION)

TO

His Highness, Sri Krishnaraja Wodeyar Bahadur

MAHARAJA OF MYSORE

BEING

A DEVOUT DISCIPLE

OF

SRI RĀMĀNUJĀCHĀRYA

THE LIFE OF RÂMÂNUJA AND OTHERS.

---

INTRODUCTORY.

After the Âzhvârs come the Âchâryâs. The former we have called "Saints," and the latter we shall designate as the "Sages." Both Saints and Sages possess the two-fold characteristics of "Knowledge" and "Love" i.e., Knowledge of God and Love to God. Whereas the Saints are pre-eminently of the order of Lovers of God, the Sages are of the order of Knowers of God. Both Saints and Sages are Servants of God.

We have written the Holy Lives of the Saints already. And now by God's grace, we write the Holy Lives of the Sages. These are headed by the Blessed Nâthamuni(gal), (ranking as the Eighteenth in the Hierarchic Table attached to our Lives of the Âzhvârs). The substance of the present work is the Life of Râmânuja.

---

CHAPTER I

NÂTHAMUNI.

A long time elapsed between the Âzhvârs (Saints) and the Âchâryâs (Sages). At the date 916 A.D. or when the Sage Yamunâchârya was born, Nâthamuni, his grandfather, was alive. We have in record, that Îsvara-bhatt-Âzhvâr was the father of Nâtha-muni; and Îsvara-muni was his (Nâtha-muni's) son. All the three together lived in Viranârâyana-puram<sup>1</sup> where exists the Holy Shrine of Mannâr Kôil; the Resident Deity, there manifest, being Mannanâr (= Lord Krishna or Râja-Gopâla).

God so manifest was their household Deity. One day, the father, son (Nâthamuni) and grandson went to the Shrine, and submissively petitioned of Mannanâr to permit them to undertake a pilgrimage to the North of India, where they were anxious to visit all those Holy Shrines to Himself, or at which He had incarnated<sup>2</sup> in various forms, in order to accomplish the threefold object of saving the good, punishing the wicked,

<sup>1</sup> This place is about 15 miles from Chidambaram (Chitrakûtam) and where the famous tank Virûnam (abbr. for Viranârâyana-puram) is situate. Sri-ranga-Nâthamuni is the full name of the Sage.

<sup>2</sup> Much has been written on the subject of Divine Incarnations in the works (1) Tattva-traya and Rationale of Image Worship by Pârthasârathi, Yogi (2) Our Bhagavadgîta, (3) Lives of Âzhvârs, and (4) Divine Wisdom of Drâvida Saints. We again call the attention of our readers to verse II. Lec. IX of our Gîtâ; and Vishnu-Purâna verse नृकारणात् &c. [v. 1. 51, and v. 9. 23 to 25] and state further that by "Incarnation" we do not mean that God who is everywhere and eternal, changes His place, nor at one moment He is in Heaven, and at another on Earth, nor does He undergo any change in His essence or substance. Râmânûja has explained this in his preface to Gîtâ thus — "He, being the vast Ocean of infinite Mercy and Condescension, Love and Bounty, willed to assume (material) forms similar to those of His creatures, without abandoning His own essential divine (immaterial) nature [Pp 8-9.] The same that we say of our Lords Matsya, Krishna, &c., the Christians say of Lord Jesus Christ. "We can no more" say they, "gaze upon His ineffable brightness than we can look upon the noon-day sun. Then God in His boundless Mercy shaded his brightness in the clouds of human nature—veiled His face, so that through the veil of human flesh, human deeds and human words, we might look upon God and live." [Epiphany. P. 6, Jan : 10th 1903] and establishing virtue in the land (vide Bhagavad-Gītâ. IV-8),—such Shrines as Mathura, Gôkula, Brindâvana, the Holy banks of Yamuna (Jumna), Gôvardhana, Dvâraka, Ayôdhya, Sâlagrâma, Badarikâṣrama, Naimisâranya, Nṛisimha-giri and others.

---

Lord Mannanâr deigned to give them permission to do so. They started forthwith with their families, and in the course of their holy peregrinations, they came upon a place called Gôvardhana-pura, situate on the banks of Holy Yamuna, and there paid their homage to Lord Kṛishṇa, known to the Dravidians as Yamunai-t-turaivan [vide Tiruppâvai by Śt Âṇḍâl v. 5]. The Lord and all the surroundings were so fascinating as to induce them to decide to spend the rest of their days here. Time agreeably sped thus. But on a certain night, Sage Nâthamuni had a dream in which Lord Mannanâr appeared and commanded his devotees to return to Vira-Nârâyaṇam.

The Sage was vividly impressed by this experience, and resolved to return to his Native Land. He accordingly submitted his desire to Yamunai-t-turaivan, who gladly accorded his sanction and honored the sage with the Holy tīrtha and prasâda.

Bidding adieu to the place, they bent their steps to the Purushôttama-Kshêtra, where Lord Jagannâtha is resident. After paying reverence to the Lord here, they next went on to Simh-âdri or Ahôbilam where Lord Nṛisimha sheddeth his saving radiance around, and thence they pursued their journey, till they arrived at the Sacred Hill of Tirupati, celebrated as the abode of Lord Śrînivâsa,—the abode on this earth which He is said to have particularly chosen as His centre for the salvation of mankind, after having alighted thereon from His celestial abode Śrî Vaikuntha, or what is called Paramapada, Param-âkâsa, &c. This locality again was so prepossessing that it bid Nâthamuni to dwell there permanently; but Mannanâr's commands imperiously required his return home. The Sage could not resist this; and so left the Holy Tirupati, and en route visited, among others, the holy spots known as Ghaṭikāchala (of Lord Nṛisimha), Hastigiri (or Kanchi of Lord Varada-Rāja), Tiruvahindra-pura (—near modern Cuddalore—of Lord Dēva-Nāyaka), Tirukkôṭṭalūr (of Lord Trivikrama), Śīrangam (of Lord Ranganātha), Tirukkuṇḍandai (—or Kumbhakōnam—of Lord Ârâ-v-amudu or Sârungapāṇi); and finally returned to his native place Vīra-Nārāyaṇapuram. Here the sage received an ovation from the holy inhabitants, and was conducted in procession to Mannanâr. The Lord was highly pleased and made His wishes known to the assembled community that thenceforward, they must look upon the Sage as His specially blessed devotee, provide him with suitable lodgings, and all other necessities of life; and take such other care of him as his favourite deserved. All this they gladly did. And Nāthamuni(gal) made a flower-garden for the Lord, and employed himself in its care, serving the Lord with the offerings of garlands, scents, lights; and in suchwise usefully spent his time in the company of wise and holy men, in the cultivation of Divine Knowledge and its propagation.

One day, there came a party of Śrī-vaishnavās from the uplands (or the table-lands to the north of Trichinopoly), to visit Mannanâr, and they were heard to sing the sacred Hymn, “Ârâ-v-amudu” or the Decad: V-8 of St. Nammāzhvâr’s Tiruvāy-Mozhi, and ending with the 11th verse of the same, in which it is said “This Ten out of the Thousand, sung by Kurugûr Sathagôpar.” Nāthamuni, hearing this, begged of the visitor to repeat the “One Thousand.” But they said they only knew this fragment of Ten and no more. On being again asked whether any one else knew the same, or whether there were written records preserved of the same, they confessed that they knew nothing whatever of it. The sage dismissed them with the usual holy Tīrtha and Prasāda from Mannanâr.

Nātha was anxious to trace out the rest of the Prabandha (the Drāvida Hymns of the Saints are so called); and surmised that they might in all likelihood prove recoverable in the Kurugu Land (=Āzhvâr Tirunagari near Tinnevely). He travelled south to this place, and paid due honors to St. Nammāzhvār, and Lord Polindu-ninra-Pirūn (or Ādinātha) and set about inquiring for the missing Prabandha. He met Parāṅkusa Dāsar, a disciple of Madhurakavi(gal)<sup>1</sup>; and asked him for information. He said:—‘Sire! Not only the Tiruvāy-Mozhi of St. Nammāzhvār but the Prabandhas as well of the other Āzhvārs have almost been forgotten, as a very long time has elapsed since the days of their composition. My Āchārya, St. Madhurakavi(gal), has left this message that whosoever will concentrate his mind, fixing himself in a Yoga-posture before St. Nammāzhvār’s (Holy Image) and repeat the ten-versed Hymn, the Kaṇṇinu-Śruttāmbu, twelve thousand times, all the time devoutly dwelling on the Holy feet of the Saint, will place himself en rapport with the Saint, who will then bless the devotee with the vision of himself.

Nāthamuni was rejoiced to hear this. He fell at the feet of Parāṅkusa-Dāsar and implored him to teach the (Mantrā-like) Kaṇṇinu-Śruttāmbu. Dāsar finding Nāthamuni a fit soul for the communication, taught him this Decad; and Nāthamuni with due preparation and in all austerity, sat down in meditation for the term required, and duly invoked Nammāzhvār by the twelve thousand-times-repeated Mantra, as enjoined.

Entitled as he was to an extraordinary revelation, by the qualifications he possessed of a true disciple, viz.: ‘Faith, virtue, devotion to God, serenity, wisdom and courage<sup>2</sup>’, Śrī, the Universal Lady of Mercy, commanded St. Nammāzhār to appear to Nāthamuni. As if a voice came from Heaven, the holy Image of the Saint opened its mouth and asked Nāthamuni the object of his invocation. Nāthamuni submitted to him his prayer: to recover the lost knowledge of the Prabandha. Thereon the Saint was pleased to dictate to him—i.e., present to his spiritually opened sight, like the sight Lord

<sup>1</sup> See his life in our Holy Lives of the Āzhvārs.

<sup>2</sup> आस्तिको धर्मशीलश्च शीलवान्वैष्णवश्चुचि । गम्भीरश्चतुरो धीरशिष्य इत्यभिधीयते ॥

[Pāncharātra]

Krishṇa gave to Arjuna<sup>1</sup>—the Holy Tiruvây-Mozhi of 1000 verses, as well as the 3000 verses of Hymns sung by the other saints who appeared before and after St. Nammâzhvâr; and in addition taught him the holy Doctrine of the Three Rahasyās [Vide P. xxi-xxii of Intro: to Lives of Âzhvârs], as well as the secrets of Yoga (or the physio-psychological way of approaching God.)<sup>2</sup>

Nâthamuni(gal) felt himself blessed; and remained in Tirunagari absorbed in the services of Âzhvâr and Âdinâtha. But lord Mannanâr again appeared to him in a dream, which was to the effect that what Nâthamuni(gal) learnt should be rehearsed before him. He communicated the dream to Lord Âdinâtha and Âzhvâr, whereupon he was permitted to return to his native place and was further enjoined to spread the instruction he had received, among such Śrivaishnavâs as were fitted by their spiritual character, viz, virtues such as śama and dama (or conquest of the senses and the mind).

Nâthamuni(gal) bent his steps homewards and on the way visited many Holy Shrines and learnt much of the traditional lore connected with them, and finally reached Vîranârayana-puram. Here he went to Lord Mannanâr and as commanded in the dream duly recited all the Prabandhâs, he had now received, before Him.

The Lord after thus giving audience to Nâtha thought to Himself thus —“That the souls may have life, We provided them with bodies and senses; We gave them Sâstras to guide them in the right direction; We ourselves often took upon Us flesh (incarnations); and yet Our work (of wholesale salvation) remains incomplete. The Prabandhâs of the Âzhvârs are a valuable means by which to effect this regeneration. They

<sup>1</sup> [Bh Gītā. XI]

दिव्यददामि ते चक्षुः पश्यमे योगमैश्वरम् Divine knowledge is thus often lost and often recovered.

Cp Bh: Gī. IV-1 to 3. Also Vêdas are often lost, recovered, or revealed again and again —

युगान्तेऽर्हताः वेदान्सेतिहासान् महर्षयः ॥

<sup>2</sup> See note on Yoga further on.

therefore ought never again to be allowed to fall out of use. So thinking, He commanded Nāthamuni(gal) to set them to music and in this manner disseminate Holy Knowledge.

In obedience to this command, Nāthamuni(gal) set the Holy Prabandhās to music—celestial music, it is written—with the help of his nephews Kīzhai-akatt-Āzhvān and Mēlai-akatt-Āzhvān; and the Prabandhās being now like the Vēdās, associated with the three-fold intonation of Uḍḍitta, Anulḍitta and Svarita, spread from that time onwards far and wide in the land.

King Chōla is said to have ruled in those days in a place called Gangai-konda-chōzha-puram, when two courtesans came to him. One could sing according to the mode called dēva-gīna (celestial mode); the other according to the mode called manushya-gīna (human mode). Each thought she excelled the other; and the object of their approaching the king was to have the dispute settled between them as to who actually was the better. The king ordered a council to meet, before which the singers were made to perform their parts. The dispute was decided in favour of the manushya-gīna; and rich presents were bestowed on that performer, while the other was considered to have failed.

The lady of the dēva-gīna thought thus:—"My method of singing, these manlings cannot appreciate; and I shall consecrate the same therefore to the dēvūs (celestial beings)." So she went from one Holy Shrine to another, everywhere displaying her art to the Deity therein manifest. She in due course reached Vīra-nārāyaṇapuram and as was customary with her she went to the Shrine of Mannanār and there sang her song in the audience of our sage Nāthamuni(gal). He heard and understood her mode; and mightily pleased, vouchsafed to her as a mark of his appreciation, the tīrtha and prasāda of Lord Mannanār. She now purposely retraced her steps to king Chola and spoke thus:—"There is one soul, at least, O King, who can understand the beauties of my dēva-gāna. He is by name Nāthamuni(gal), the blessed votary of Lord Man-nanār at Vira-nārāyanapuram."

The king's curiosity was roused. He sent messengers to Nāthamuni(gal), begging him to deign to visit his court. He on his side, on receiving the invitation, thought thus:—"We have set the Blest Prabandhās to exquisite music. Let us visit the king's court, and take this opportunity of making these known to the world." Thus he directed his steps to the king's court. On his arrival, the king rose and welcoming the Sage with every mark of honor, offered him a suitable seat. Whereon the Sage blessed the king, and inquired as to his object in inviting him. The king said:—"Holy Sage! canst thou distinguish between the dēva-gāna and the manushya-gāna of these minstrels?" The Sage then requested that the performance be given before him. When this was done, he addressed the king thus:—"Ye men have ears for the manushya-gāna only. Only the Dēvas can understand the other." "But", the king respectfully asked, "how, Sire, can we be made to hear it?" Thereon the Sage directed that the 400 kinds of tāla (rhythm) be marked, and explained to the king the rate of each. The king understood from this explanation the regular harmonical progression and symphony which this method lent to the dēva-gāna music, which produced in him a bliss never before experienced. It is also related that a pair of cymbals was placed near a consecrated post, and the dēva-gāna was sung, when it was found that the post began to melt. They stopped the music, and when they attempted to lift the cymbals, they stuck to the post; and when they began the music and lifted them, they came off. The king went into raptures over this, and falling at the feet of the Sage proposed to reward him abundantly. But the Sage, to whom even the offer of Lordship over Worlds was no temptation, politely declined the presents offered; and blessing the king, returned to Vira-nārāyanapuram.

Eight disciples had our Sage:—(1) Uyyokkondār, (2) Kurukai-k-kāval-appan, (3) Nambi Karuṇākara Dāsar, (4) Ēru-tiru-vuḍaiyār, (5) Tiru-k-kaṇṇa-maṅgai-āṇḍān, (6) Vāna-māmalai Dēvi-y-āṇḍān, (7) Urup-pattūr-Acchān-pillai, and

(8) Sokattūr-Āzhvān. They were disciples of the description given in Jaya-Samhita (of Pāñcharātra) :—

“ He indeed is a true disciple
 Who owns, sole for the Guru’s sake,
 All riches—all wisdom—
 All works—his body itself !”

Such deserving disciples then, Nāthāmuni(gal) initiated into all the Holy Mysteries of Religion, taught them the Divya-Prabandhās, and left a legacy of works, like the Purusha-nirṇaya, and Nyāya-tatva treating of Sublime Truths of Religion, beginning with God, the Lord of the Kosmos ; and also a work on Yōga (or the art of communion with God), called the Yōga-rahasya. He himself retired from active habits of life and became immersed in the contemplation of the Blessed Deity fixing His resplendent Form ever before his mental gaze.

This samādhi state of the Sage came to be known to the outside world and finally reached the ears of king Chōla. To see the wonderful Sage and pay homage to Lord Mannanār as well, he left his capital and, accompanied by his consorts, reached Vīra-Nārāyaṇa-puram. There he saw Nāthāmuni(gal) absorbed in Yōga (meditation) and, lost in respect and wonder at this unusual sight, was quietly retracing his steps. But the sage took them for Lord Kṛishṇa and His Holy Consorts ; that they had been pleased to visit him. Thus fancying in his delirium of Yōga, he ran after them. Uyyakkondār and others, his disciples, observing this divine hallucination, pursued the Sage and meeting him at Gangai-konḍa-Chōzhapuram besought an explanation from him as to the apparently insane nature of his conduct. He told them that in his eyes, they appeared as Lord Kṛishṇa and His Consorts and this vision threw him into a frenzy of love. The disciples reminded him that service to God and the Godly were the highest aim, and that when this demanded waking life on his part, he was not to allow himself to be ecstasized in this manner to the prejudice of such service. He came to himself and returned to his Divine Service at Lord Mannanār’s.

Matters went on thus for a certain length of time, and the Sage became more and more absorbed in his illumination. On a certain day he called in his disciple Kurugai-k-kāval Appan, and commanded him to learn the Eight-limbed Yoga<sup>1</sup>, and taught him the same

The Sage now called his other intimate disciple Uyyak-koṇḍār and asked him also to practice the Yôga method. But he humbly answered the Sage:—"Holy Sire, while I still carry the corpse with me, how is marriage possible?"<sup>2</sup> It will be time for me to consider the matter when I am about to give up my body." "Then", said the Sage, "employ thyself in the dissemination of the Śāstras and the Prabandhās."

<sup>1</sup> This Yôga is not on the lines of the Yôga as taught by Patañjali, inasmuch as the latter is repudiated as un-Vedic in the Brahma Sūtra:—"Etena Yogah pratyuktah" [II-1 3], and inasmuch as it postulates God as but the instrumental cause of the Universe, thus detracting from the omnipotence of the God-head, and at the same time looking upon God as but the Means of procuring Kaivalya, or realization of one's own soul, not as the End itself to be aspired after. The True Eight-limbed Yôga of the God-aspirant (bhakta) is described in Pp: 119-120 of the 1st Volume of the Bhagavad Vishaya, Telugu Edition, 1871, Madras; but we can subjoin here only an abstract of the same. The Eight are (1) Yama, (2) niyama, (3) āsana, (4) prāṇāyāma, (5) pratyāhara, (6) dhāraṇa, (7) dhyāna, (8) samādhi. The lower four are external processes, the upper three are internal; (1) and (2) are as described in the Vishnu-purāṇa VI, 7 = Celibacy or continence; Harmlessness; Truthfulness, Non-covetousness; Non-acceptance of gifts, Scripture-reading, Purity (outer and inner), Contentment; Austerities (such as fasts); Inclining the mind to God. (3) is Postures (āsana) described as Padmāsana &c., which help to produce comfort, attention and steadiness of mind, [as described by Vasīsthā and others]. (4) is the regulation of breath (Prāṇāyāma) divided into Rechaka, Pūrāṇa and Kumbhaka [as described in the Vāyu-purāṇa]. These processes help to steady the wandering mind (5) is Sense-conquest (Pratyāhara), or making the senses obey the mind, not the mind the senses, as described by Parāśara [Vishnu-Pu. VI, 7] (6) is fixing (Dhāraṇa) the mind on the Pure Person of God [as described by Saunaka]. (7) is concentration, (Dhyāna) or the continued future of the mind on one subject, [as described in Vishnu-Pu VI, 7, 91] And this is of five kinds. (8) is absorption or immersion, (Samādhi), or realization of God [as described in Vishnu-Pu. VI, 7, 92].

<sup>2</sup> Marriage means Union (i.e. Yôga) with God. This is not possible so long as the body hangs on the soul like a corpse. The God-ward always look on the body as a detestable corpse to be cast away as soon as possible. Read, "Mey kundamāka virumbuvare, &c.," [4th Tiru-vandādi, verse 75].

The Sage now called his son Īsvara-Muni and said.—
 “Son, thou shalt have a son. The name ‘Yamunai-t-turaivar’, thou shalt give him.” And he commanded his disciples Uyyakkonḍār and K. Appan to communicate in due course to this would-be son, all the knowledge of the Sāstras and the Yôga he had imparted to them. Leaving his instructions thus, he resumed his Yôga.

Time passed. King Chola had gone out into the country with his followers on a hunting excursion, and he happened to pass by Vīranārāyanapuram on his journey back. Our Sage’s young daughter watched the grand cortege, with bows arrows, female attendants monkeys and what not. But to her it all seemed like a vision, which, running up to her father, she described as if two men with bows, a woman and a monkey called at his place and inquired for Nāthamuni(ga!) and went their way. And our Sage at once construed this (in his Divine-filled imagination) as if Lord Rāma himself, with His brother Lakshmaṇa following Him with bows and arrows (as His bodyguard), with Queen Sītā between them, condescended to visit him,—as described in Rāmāyaṇa [III. II.] .—

“ Rāma went foremost of the three,
 Next Sītā followed, fair to see,
 And Lakshmaṇ with his bow in hand
 Walked hindmost of the little band ”

Forthwith he started from his Yoga-seat and went in search of this Holy Band, and asking those whom he met on the way, for traces of their journey. They said “ Go this way, go this way,” evidently fancying that he was in search of the king and his retinue. He increased his speed and arrived in the vicinity of Gangaikondā-S-puram; and asking the residents there to direct him further on the way where the Holy Band went, they said they had not seen any. He looked farward and far out and sideways, and seeing nothing of what his heart yearned for, heaved a deep sigh, wept and swooning away, fell on the ground and departed from this world.

परन्तु वैष्णवलोकं नित्यानन्दं सुखावहम् ।
 तत्र संवाहिनीं दिव्या विरजावेदसंभवाम् ॥
 सर्वे हिरण्मयास्तत्र सर्वे वेदमयाश्शुभाः ।
 अप्राकृतमयानित्या पुनरावृत्ति वर्जिता ॥
 एकान्तिनस्सदा ब्रह्मध्यायिनो योगिनो हि ये ।
 तेषां तत्परमं स्थानं यद्वै पश्यन्ति सूरयः ॥

The disciples and the son, of our Heaven-departed Sage, received the tidings of this extraordinary translation and could not bear the pain of separation; but fate must be submitted to by all. So they travelled to where the Sage was lying in state, and after prostrating themselves before the dead body, duly cremated him according to the Brahma-medha ritual prescribed in the Vedas. Returning home, all the rest of the ceremonies were duly performed by Īṣvaramuni(gal), the son. And Kurugāval-Appan selected a place near where his Master was accustomed to sit in Yoga, and steadily practised Yoga. The Sage is said to have lived 540 years.<sup>1</sup>

The memorial verse to him runs thus :—

व्योम्नः परस्तात्सविधं समेत्य लक्ष्म्या नियोगात् कुरुकाधिराजः ।
 समन्त्ररत्नद्वयमाह्वयस्मै नाथाय तस्मै मुनये नमोस्तु ॥

<sup>1</sup> Adam lived 930 years and so on. Read the Chronological index to the Old Testament. See Genesis V. 5.

CHAPTER II.

UYYAKKONDĀR AND MAṆAKKĀL-NAMBI.

Uyyakkondār is the same as Pundarikāksha(r)<sup>1</sup>. Uyyakkondār is a name which has an interesting story connected with it. Once on an occasion, Vangi-puratt-Ācchi, the father-in-law of Nāthamuni(gal), sent a request to his son-in-law to send his wife (i.e., Ācchi's daughter), Aravinda-Pāvai on a visit. Nāthamuni(gal) sent her, escorted by Pundarikāksha(r), his trusted disciple. Some of the dependents of Ācchi looked down upon him as of an inferior caste, he being a pūrvā-sikhī (that is, of that class among Brāhmins, whose custom is to wear a tuft of hair right on the crown of the head); and therefore they fed him on stale food. But he never resented this treatment. He, on the other hand, considered it as the greatest blessing that was conferred upon him. He returned home, and pressed by Nāthamuni(gal) to narrate all that took place at Ācchi's residence, related with joy the happiness he derived from eating stale food; when asked how it could be so, he answered that it was certainly so on the principle explained by St. Tondaradippodi-Āzhvār.—

“If but their broken bread the saints will grant Indeed it shall my nature purify.”

[Tirumālai, verse 41.]

On hearing this, Nāthamuni(gal) embraced his disciple and exclaimed: “Thou art my saviour.” Thus Uyyakkondār means: he who practised the highest precepts of religion taught by his Master.

Such was Uyyakkondār or Pundarikāksha. He had many disciples under him with whom he was happily engaged in the delightful study and exposition of the Utterances of the <sup>1</sup> Born at Tiruvallarai, A.C. 826, Vide No. 19. Hierarchic Table, in our Lives of Āzhvārs.

Holy Āzhvārs. The chief of these disciples were five, viz , (1) Maṇakkāl Nambi, (2) Tiruvallikkēṇi Pānperumāl Arayar, (3) Sottaip-pūsi-Sendalankārar, (4) Srī Pundarīka-dāsan, and (5) Ulagu-perumāḷ Nangai. Of these disciples, Maṇakkāl-Nambi or Srī Rāma-misra(r) was the greatest, inasmuch as he bore to his Guru (Uyyakkondār) the relation of Lakshmaṇa to his Master and Brother Sri Rāmachandra<sup>1</sup>. This was so much the case that when the Guru's wife Āndāḷamma died, Rāma-misra did all the menial services that thus necessarily devolved on him in the household of the Guru. In illustration of this implicit servitude to his master, it is recorded that on a certain occasion, he accompanied the two daughters of his Guru on pilgrimage to a bathing place. They were returning and the damsels shrank at a small stream in their path, because it was sloughy. Rāma-misra saw the situation and immediately coming to their rescue, stretched himself at length across the channel, and let them walk over on his back ! The Guru heard this incident, and drawing the disciple to him with exclamations of joy, touched his head with his feet—a favour not bestowed on all indiscriminately. "Is there any thing more that I can do to thee ?" further asked the Guru. "What more can I ask," said the disciple, "than that, having already attained my highest ambition, viz , that of serving at your Holy Feet, this service should be continued to me for ever" ? Uyyakkondār was overcome with this exemplary attitude and in his irrepressible wish to do to his disciple the highest good, commended to him once more for meditation the Dvaya-Mantra<sup>2</sup>, the efficacy of which has been described thus in the Pāñcharātra :—

अतीतानागतज्ञानं मात्मतत्त्वप्रकाशनम् ।
 सर्ववेदार्थविज्ञानं सर्वशाल्यार्थदर्शनम् ॥
 मानसंवाचिकं पापं कायकंच त्रिधाकृतम् ।
 द्वयस्मरणमात्रेण नाशयति सुनिश्चितम् ॥

<sup>1</sup> अहं सर्वं करिष्यामि जाग्रतस्वपतश्च ते । [Rāmāyana]

<sup>2</sup> Vide page xxii. Introd to The Holy Lives of the Āzhvārs.

Uyyakkondār's sojourn in this earth was now approaching its end and Rāma-misra(r)<sup>1</sup>, reverently broached to him the subject of who after him was to bear the apostleship for their Blessed Dispensation. "Well, my son," said he, "I had hoped to carry out myself the behests of my Holy Master Nāthamuni(gal), communicated to me when he was passing away, viz., to expect the arrival of a grandson for him, (i.e., son to Īsvara-muni(gal)), to whom to impart all the Mysteries of our Faith, naming him Yamunai-t-turaivar, as my Guru willed; but Providence has willed it otherwise. This duty therefore devolves on thee, the next and my most trusted disciple, and thou therefore wilt bequeath our mysteries to posterity in the Holy Ṣottai line of descent." So delivering the message, Uyyakkondār left his body, seating himself in the Padm-āsana posture, and uniting his heart with the Holy feet of his Āchārya, Srī Nāthamuni(gal).

Neither Rāma-misra(r), nor his brethren, could bear this pang of separation, but gradually they recovered and girded themselves to carry out the last services and sacraments for the departed; which they did with all due ceremony and solemnity. The memorial verse dedicated to him on the occasion is thus recorded:—

नमःपद्मजनेत्राय नाथश्रीपादपङ्कजे ।
न्यस्तसर्वभरायस्म त्कुलनायायधोमते ॥

Rāma-misra was now, with his disciples, engaged in the work of furthering his holy mission, all the time in eager expectation of the hoped-for holy son to be born to Īsvara-muni(gal). This happy event came about in the month of Āḍi under the asterisk Uttarāḍa. Joy overspread their countenances, and they forthwith went about administering to the child all the sacraments fit for the occasion, through the medium of the father, ending by naming the child Yamunai-t-turaivar (according to the wishes of Nāthamuni) and observing all the needful preliminaries prescribed for the Vaishṇavas according to the Pāñcharātra text:—

<sup>1</sup> Vide No. 20, Hierarchic Table to our Lives of Āzhvārs.

वैष्णवैश्चैवसूक्तैश्च कुर्यात्संमार्जनं शिशो ।
 तस्य दक्षिणकर्णे तु जपेद्दशाक्षरं द्वयम् ॥
 मूर्ध्नि हस्तं विनिक्षिप्य जपेच्च द्वादशाक्षरम् ।
 नाम कुर्यात्तत्पश्चाद्द्वैष्टव्यं पापनाशनम् ॥

Who was this holy child, but Yāmunāchārya<sup>1</sup> (the Sanskrit synonym); Ālavandār (the Tamil name),—the famous forerunner of Sri Rāmānuja, who was to come<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> We were much amused to read in Svāmi Dayānanda Sarasvatī's Satyārtha-Prākāśa, Yāmunāchārya transmuted into Yavanāchārya who—it is further naively added—is “born of a Greek or Moslem family”!!! [Vide p. 62, English translation by Durgā Prasād of Lahore, 1900]. And again in page 73, it is written:—“The first teacher of this faith (Vaishnavism) was Sathakōpa, who according to the Bhaktamālā written by Nabha, was of the Doom (low caste) tribe. For, it says that the Yogi Sathakōpa used to make and sell winnowing fans (विक्रीयार्थं विचचारयोगि), that is to say he was born of the tribe of Kanjar. When he had wanted to read with the Brahmins or to hear their Scriptures, they must have treated him with contempt. He then might have coined new things against the Brahmins and their Scriptures such as the forehead mark, cauterising the forearms with the discus, &c. His disciple was Munibahan, born of a Chandul or low caste family. He had a disciple, named Yavanāchārya, born of a Moslem or Greek family. But his name was changed to Yāmunāchārya.” Our readers have only to read the Lives of Āzhvārs written by us and this life of Yāmuna, and then he may more than smile at the ridiculous account given by Dayānand.

<sup>2</sup> This is very much parallel to John the Baptist preceding Jesus. Vide No. 21 Hierarchic Table in our Lives of Āzhvārs, Born 916 A. C. at Kuppangalī, one mile from Kāttumannār-koil.

CHAPTER III.

ÂLAVANDÂR.

Such was the advent of Âlavandâr, which had been foreseen by his predecessors;—an advent destined to inaugurate a system of thought which was thenceforward to grow, amplify and vivify the nascent religious sense in man. Âlavandâr signified literally: “He who has come to reign” i.e., to reign in a system of religious thought, which was to glow in man’s heart uplifting him to God in love.

Duly were performed, as he grew, the sacred rites of anna-prâsana, chaula and upanayana; and the life of the student began in earnest. Âlavandâr would attend the school for a day and stay away at home. Questioned by his fellow-students as to the cause of his absence, he would tell them:—“Ye are learning the same things again and again.” Questioned by his parents, he would say:—“They are reading the same thing over and over; but I have learnt it all already.” A precociously clever boy thus, Âlavandâr was; and he was excused regular attendance at school. He finished his student’s career rapidly; and the next stage of life, wedlock, was duly entered into. By this time the end of Îsvara-muni(gal) drew near, and he bid farewell to all with the consoling reflection of having left a model son for the service of the world. The noble son had all the sacramental routine for his departed parent strictly gone through; and now set out to fulfil his own vocation.

Grammar, logic, philosophy and allied subjects were taken up And he studied them assiduously under Mahâ-bhâshya-bhaṭṭa. There was at this time an Âkki-y-âzhvân, residing in the court of the monarch of the country as Pandit and royal chaplain. He was thus, in his own opinion, the head of all the literary men in the country, from whom he assessed tributes as a recognition of his suzerainty. The tribute was dasabandham or one-tenth of the income of each learned man. A demand for this was sent out to M-bhaṭṭa, who thereon was troubled in mind. On Âlavandâr inquiring and being told all the circumstances of Bhaṭṭa’s discomfiture, he received the demand-notice and tore it into pieces in the presence of the royal messengers who had conveyed it. They returned and narrated the occurrence to Âkki, who again sent men to Bhatta to know whether it was a new poet or a man of letters, who had dared so to affront him. Âlavandâr again interfered between his teacher and the men and sent them back with the answer :—

“ नवयंकवयस्तुकेवलं नवयंकवलतन्त्रपारगा ।

अपितुप्रतिवादिवारणप्रकटाटोप विपाटनक्षमा ॥”

Âkki had felt his pride already piqued and now the second message set him aflame with rage. “Is there a scholar to oppose me?” cried he frantically, and appealed to his king for protection and redress against the insult he had received. It was not Mahâbhâshya Bhatta, but an insolent boy of his party, who had thus insulted him,—was of course the report of the men. The king now despatched some messengers with a written command to the boy to come to his presence; but the proud boy as unceremoniously destroyed the royal mandate, and let the messengers depart. The king was duly told of the indignity so offered. He reflected a moment and thought to himself that it must be no ordinary person who could command courage to slight even royalty; he would therefore send envoys with escort and letters—a formal invitation—to the extraordinary boy to come and grace the royal court with his august presence. This was appropriate to him, and so the boy accepted the invitation and arriving, alighted in the royal hall of audience with all honors paid. All assembled to receive the curious visitor. Âkki of course was present to witness the prodigy, of a boy come in this style, and feverishly fearing what the next event would prove to be. His fears were well-founded however, for it was like a bomb bursting before him, when a scrap of paper was thrown by the distinguished visitor before the royal pandit. It was at once a gauntlet and challenge. The scrap contained this famous verse :—

आशैलादद्रिकन्याचरणकिसलयन्यास धन्योपकण्ठा

दारचोनीत सीतामुखकमल समुल्लासहेतोश्च सेतो ।

आच प्राच्यप्रतीच्य क्षितिधरयुगलादर्कचन्द्रावतंसा

न्मीमांसाशास्त्रयुग्मभ्रमविमलमना मृग्यतां मादृशोऽन्यः ॥

---

‘ Find, if you will, than me a second soul,
 Who wots entire all Vedic dogmatics,
 In all the stretch from Um(ā)-tread Himālay,
 To Râma’s bridge—the joy of Sitâ’s soul—
 Or East to West, which mountain ranges bound,
 With sun and moon in turn, their crests adorning.’

On reading this, Âkki’s wrath grew · turning to the king :—
 “ My royal patron !”, implored he, “ permit me to argue this boy out of his intolerable vanity, and crush him before ye all.”
 The king gently asked the boy if he was capable of standing a combat such as his pandit would give. “ Most certainly, your Majesty ! give me leave,” answered he, “ but you will not be capable of judging between us and deciding as between the winner and the loser ; nor can we own to you our mutual victory or defeat. Appoint, pray, judges versed in the matters of our contention ” “ Well said,” agreed the king and selected fit umpires to adjudge the issues of the intellectual contest pending. It was an unparalleled and exciting scene. And so the king and his consort both took their seats to watch the interesting proceedings.

The queen saw the boy and with her keen insight and penetration decided to herself that he was going to be the victor. “ My lord ! she said, addressing the king, “ if this boy wins not, throw me to the dogs.” “ If he wins,” exclaimed the king in his turn, “ I will part with half my kingdom for him.”

Anon, Âkki spoke :—“ Vain stripling ! No drawn contest between us is needed. A mere trick suffices to put thee down before this august assembly, “ witness ye all !” he said to the assembly, and turning to Âlavandâr said : “ if thou, proud boy, shouldst say ‘ yes ’ in any matter, I will prove the ‘ no ’ of it ; and vice versa, ‘ yes ’ to thy ‘ no ’ ; and the winner in the end shall touch the head of the loser with his foot.”
 “ Agreed,” promptly retorted Âlavandâr ; and without further ado, made three short statements and challenged Âkki to negative them if he could. Listen, proud pedant, to these and disprove if thou canst:—

- (1) त्वन्माता न वन्ध्या = =Thy mother is not a barren woman
- (2) राजा सर्वभौमः = =This king is paramount.
- (3) राजपत्नी पतिव्रता = =This queen is a good wife.

Âkki was simply stupefied, as he could not dare to disprove these facts; and therefore kept helplessly silent.

They now entered the arena of literary debates; and here also Âkki was beaten. Âlavandâr addressing his opponent said:—"As for the victor touching the head of his victim, O Pandit!—for that was our agreement—I shall desist from so base an act, though agreed to by thyself and in consideration of thy grey hairs and thy eminent status as Guru in the Royal household." On hearing this declaration, the learned assembly applauded Âlavandâr's attainments and noble demeanour and worshipped him with the honors of a Brahma-ratha (=a triumphal procession, &c.)

The Queen was overjoyed to find that her insight had not belied her as to the results of the combat and drawing the conqueror-hero to her breast exclaimed:—"Yennai Âlavandîro i.e. 'Didst thou come to fulfil me'? Âlavandâr thus means: "He who came to fulfil" i.e., (1) fulfil his spiritual mission on earth, and (2) fulfil the queen's prevision of his success. With the king, the queen,—Âlavandâr with her—entered the inner apartments, her joy knowing no bounds.

The monarch, true to his promise, invested Âlavandâr with half his kingdom. In royal bliss thus did Âlavandâr and his holy wife, who by this time joined him, remain.

CHAPTER IV.

ÂLAVANDÂR'S SPIRITUALIZATION.

Râma-Misra was watching silently the eminence which Âlavandâr had reached so rapidly; and when he heard of Âkki's ignominious defeat, and Âlavandâr becoming a king, his joy knew no bounds and he danced with flags in hand. He now thought of carrying into effect the commission he had received, of making Âlavandâr the future Apostle of the Faith. So, he went to the palace, but the guards obstructed his entrance. He found his way however into the kitchen where contracting friendship with the cooks,<sup>1</sup> he ascertained from them the potherbs that pleased Âlavandâr most. Tûdûvalai, தூதுவலை or தூதுவலை<sup>2</sup> he daily took to the kitchen for a period of six months; and yet no notice was taken of it. Wearied, he stopped away for a few days. Âlavandâr finding his favourite dish missing from his dinner so suddenly, enquired of the cooks the reason. They informed him of an old Brâhmaṇa having, for six months uninterruptedly, brought the green herb and having stopped the supply for a few days. "If he should return again," commanded the king, after chiding them, "inform me at once." Râma-misra thought he would try again, and so put in his appearance with the favorite vegetable, after some interval. The king was immediately informed; and he ordered the venerable man being conducted into his presence. When he duly arrived, the king rose, and making obeisance, seated him with every mark of respect, and asked how he may reward him for his services,—by money or by lands. Misra said:—"Good king, these riches I do not need from thee; for I have precious riches, amassed by your ancestors, to give thee; and I shall show thee where they lie treasured up. Till I put thee in possession of these, let me be admitted to thy presence without hindrance by the guards at thy gates." Âlavandâr was taken out of himself by this unexpected revelation, and placed his men under instructions to admit the worthy visitant freely without caring for ceremony.

<sup>1</sup> In Hindu households in India, caste, and they must be holy people, the cooks must be of the same caste holier than the rest of the household. as the employer, or above their hold.

<sup>2</sup> A thorny shrub bearing edible fruit.

Misra now began to teach Âlavandâr the Bhagavadgîtâ,—the essence of all the Upanishads. As Âlavandâr listened attentively through the eighteen books of this Sublime Poem, his spiritual sense was awakened, and a craving caused in his heart to realize God, as is spoken therein. “How shall I realize Him?” asked he of his Âchârya. “That is taught in the Great Charama Slôka<sup>1</sup>”, promptly responded the teacher and taught its significant mysteries. The more Âlavandâr meditated on these, the more they entered deep into his heart. The saving Grace taught therein made him more and more inclined to surrender himself to God, and more and more cultivate the sense of resignation to His will. His soul bent more and more to Him with the nourishment the teachings gave, just as the ripening grain-stalks bend as they receive more milk. As days passed, his love for the Merciful grew warmer and warmer; and as this love increased, his attachment to other things became weaker and weaker. The Teacher watched the spiritual progress of his disciple, and thought the time was ripe for leading him to where his promised patrimonial wealth lay hidden. He led him therefore to the Holy Shrine of Srîrangam, where, pointing to God reposing therein in the serene glory of His presence, to all worshippers accessible, he said:—“नचज्ञानस्यसङ्कोचं नचैवयमगोचरम् । तस्माद्रङ्गं महापुण्यं कोनसेवेतदुद्दिमान्”.<sup>2</sup> i.e., “Who will not worship Rangam, the most Holy,—if he be wise ? for doth not wisdom blossom here and keep Yama (death) out of sight ?” This is your trove, your heritage, and my trust, which I here discharge on this auspicious day.”

Âlavandâr, with the spiritual vision with which he was by God's Grace endowed, saw in the Holy Image of Ranga the Treasure of the Universe enshrined ; and exclaimed, with (a) feelings of remorse in his heart for past days, which had been spent without this Blessed Vision, and (b) feelings of bliss overflowing in streams of loving tears, at the fascinating sight he enjoyed :—‘ O Blissful God ’ exclaimed he, ‘ many days have I lost in the vain pursuits of the world. I mourn for this. Now I have seen Thee reclining on Thy Sêsha.<sup>1</sup> I serve Thee for evermore. I find myself reclaimed from the death of worldly enjoyments, and initiated into the life of Thy service.

<sup>1</sup> The 66th verse Bk. XVIII, Bh Gî Vide p. xxii, Introd: Lives of Âzhvârs.

<sup>2</sup> Srîranga-Mahâtmya, I, 80.

“नेत्राणिमित्राणि धनानिनाय पुत्राश्चदाराः पशवोगृहाणि ।

त्वत्पादपद्मप्रवणान्मवृत्ते भवन्तिमर्वेतिक्कूलरूपा ” ॥<sup>8</sup>

*‘ Lord ! lands and friends and riches,
Sons and wives, cattle and houses,—
To him who has thy service tasted, Hateful objects become they.’*

After this, a determination came to him to renounce the world, and don the robes of the Sanyâsin, inasmuch as the love of the world and of God were incompatible with each other. Thenceforward he devoted himself to divine contemplation and service.

Âlavandâr's spiritual fame attracted to him many disciples, of whom the following were notable.—Periya-Nambi, Tiruk-kôttiyûr-Nambi, Periya-tirumalai Nambi, Mâranêri-Nambi, Tiruk-kacchi-Nambi, Âlavandâr-Âzhvâr, Tirumâlai-y-ândân, Vânamâmalai-y-ândân, Taiva-vâri-y-ândân, Îsan-ândân, Jiyar-ândân, Tiruk-kurugûr-Appan, Tirumôhûr-Appan, Tirumôhûr-misrân, Taiva-p-perumâl, Vakul-âbharâṇa-Somayâjiyâr, Tiruk-kurugûr-dâsar, Tirumâl-iruñjolaï-dâsar, Vaḍa-madurai-piran-dâr, Âlkonḍi-ammangi, twenty in all. They were all learned and became evangelists as well of the Faith.

<sup>1</sup> For a lucid description of the symbolism conveyed by this name and representation of the Godhead, the readers are referred to p. 31 ff. Esoteric Hinduisim, Part I. Wilson says in his Vishnu purâna:—We have in the text a representation of one mode of dhyâna or contemplation, in which the thoughts are more readily concentrated by being addressed to a sensible emblem, instead of an abstract truth.”

<sup>8</sup> Brahma Purâna, 8, 32.

Maṇakkāl-Nambi (Râma-misra), who had five disciples, viz, Âlavandâr himself, Taivattuk-k-arasu-Nambi, Gomathattut-tiruvinnagar-appan, Sirup-pullûr-udaiya-Pillai, and Vaṅgi-puratt-âcchi, was now to deliver his last message to Âlavandâr. "To Kurugai-k-kâval-appan has been entrusted another Mystery, viz, the Yoga (i.e., the process by which to know God,—not merely to conjecture or believe—by deep introspective meditation), which thou shalt learn from him," said he to Âlavandâr, and explained, when the latter asked why he could not himself impart the Mystery :—"My Guru Uyyakkondâr to whom your grand sire Nâthamuni(gal) wished to impart this science, expressed* himself as unworthy to receive the same in the words —"When the corpse lieth, where is wedlock?"<sup>1</sup> I did not therefore receive the science. Nâthamuni entrusted it to his other intimate disciple K. Appan. Learn it from him. And I am now going to depart; to my disciples, give all learning and instruction, and make Srîrangam your capital, and pass on to posterity the Faith bequeathed to us by Nâthamuni, your spiritual as well as bodily grandsire." So delivering himself, he passed away, with his heart fixed upon the holy feet of his Guru. His memorial verse runs thus :—

त्वत्पादपद्मप्रवणात्मवृत्ते भवन्ति सर्वे प्रतिकूलरूपाः ।

"अयत्नतो यासुन मात्मदासमलर्कपद्मार्पणनिष्क्रयेण ।

यः क्रीतवानास्थितयौवराज्यं नमामि तं राम ममेयसत्त्वम् ॥"

Time passed with Âlavandâr happily in the work of propagating the faith and writing works, of which those that are extant are the Stôtra-ratna, Siddhi-traya and Âgama-prâmânya, —the bulwarks of the Visishtâdvaita-Vedânta. At this stage he bethought of visiting Kurugai-k-kâval-appan. Accompanied by his disciples, he proceeded thither and finding Appan was absorbed in Yoga, approached the sanctuary with the utmost caution and reverence, and planted himself by the wall on the other side of which Appan was seated. Withal, Appan exclaimed :—"Is there one of the Soṭṭai-race (i.e., descendant of Nâthamuni) standing there?" Surprised and with fear, <sup>1</sup> Corpse means body, Wedlock means the union of soul with God or Yoga.

Âlavandâr ventured to speak thus:—"Holy Sire, yes, I am a most humble scion of that race; my name is Yamunai-t-turaivar (Yâmunâchârya). I am come here to do thee obeisance." So saying, he went forward and fell at Appan's holy feet. Rising, after being blessed, he asked of Appan, how despite caution on his part, he had been discovered by him. To which, Appan said:—"Son, when God is with me, He so loves me as to be listless to all else; even Srî, His Spouse, is unable to withdraw His attention while He is so engaged; but now He looked away from me three or four times. I concluded thence that none other than a child of Sottai race was close by." At which account, Âlavandâr was delighted; and entreated Appan that the Yoga-Mystery might be revealed to him, as directed by his Guru Manakkâl-Nambi; for he had come in quest of it. "Certainly it is intended for thee, son," said Appan, "But I can only impart it at the moment of my death. That moment comes the next Pushya-month, Guru-pushya-yoga, Abhijin-muhûrta. Take this scrap on which the time is noted so as to put thee in mind of it. Come precisely at that moment." Prostrating to Appan, Yâmunâchârya returned to Srirangam.

Adhyayan-ôtsava, or one of the great annual festal celebrations, in connection with the Holy Temple here, came round. It is the festival when all the 4000 Prabandhas of the Âzhvârs are sung antiphonally. In the course of this recital, the Araiyar,<sup>1</sup> or the chief chorister of the Temple sang the verse of Tiruvây-mozhi<sup>2</sup>, viz. Kaḷu inai (X. 2. 8), in which occurs the passage:—Naḷamino namaṅga! uḷḷir etc., meaning:—

'Speed, good souls, to Ananta-Śayana,<sup>3</sup>
Remind We this—speed, oh speed.'

<sup>1</sup> Tîru-v-aranga-p-perumâl Araiyar, son of Yâmunâ. It may be noted here that while Yâmunâ was a Gruhi, he had four sons: Teyvattuk-karasu-Nambi, Pillai-arasu-Nambi, Sottai-Nambi and Tiruvâranga-p-perumâl. The son of the first of these sons is Sri-sailupârna or Periya-tirumalai-Nambi, the maternal uncle of Râmânûja (vide Râmânûja's life).

<sup>2</sup> See our Âzhvâr's Lives, pp. xxii, 205 and 222, and our Divine Wisdom of Drâvida Saints.

<sup>3</sup> The Holy Shrine of Ananta-pûdum-Nâbhî (Trevandrum, Travancore).

This passage reiterated by Aṛaiyar was taken by Yâmunâchârya as a sign that a shrine so dear to Saint Nammâzhvâr<sup>1</sup> viz., Anantasayana, was one, which to visit became imperative on him. He immediately rose and, placing his disciple Teyvavâri-y-âṇḍân in charge of his matham (monastery), went on a pilgrimage to Anantasayana, where he visited the Lord Śeṣhasayana by way of the three-doored sanctum. Some time passed thus. He suddenly remembered the scrap given him by Appan, and calling for it found to his surprise that it was the very moment he ought to have been with Appan for receiving the Yoga-Mysteries. With sorrow indescribable, he chid himself for his forgetfulness and wished, in his agony, for a Pushpaka-vimâna<sup>2</sup> to waft him instantly to Appan! Helpless and in sheer anguish he left Anantaṣayana and started back for Śrîrangam.

In Śrîrangam, meanwhile, Teyva-vâri-y-âṇḍân was unable to bear the separation of his Guru, Yâmunâchârya, and consequently became ill and wore away daily. Physicians were brought by his friends to examine the patient. They all declared that some deep mental affliction was at the root of his illness. But asked the friends: "Is it wordly affliction of any kind,—may be woman—gnawing at your heart?" "No affliction," said he, "troubles me, but affection which I have for my Guru; hence, if I am conducted to him promptly, I may hope to live." Despairing of his life, the friends laid him on a stretcher and carried him towards Anantaṣayana. As they proceeded on their journey, Âṇḍân daily picked up strength and revived sufficiently to be able to go on foot. At Karaimanai river-side, the Guru and the disciple met. The latter fell flat on sighting his Guru,—overcome by joy. The Guru, finding him thus lying motionless, addressed him thus: "Śrî Râma was a Master, hence He had the power to make his brother Bharata carry out his behest, (viz., to stay at Ayodhya till he returned from his exile in the forest); but I seem no such master to thee, as I am powerless like Rāma to exact obedience from thee." This sarcastic remark penetrated deep into the heart of Āndān, and he felt that by transgressing the commands of his Guru to remain in Srīrangam, he had disobeyed him. Speechless therefore he lay.

<sup>1</sup> See his life in Lives of Âshvârs.

<sup>2</sup> A aerial vehicle such as that used by Râmachandra for his journey from Lanka to Ayodhya [Râmâyana.]

The Guru taking compassion—his anger at the disobedience of Āndān abating by this time—said :—"I believe, son, thou desirest to re-establish with me the relationship of master and disciple If so I bid thee rise." On hearing this, Āndān rose, trembling with fear and stood dumb. The good men standing near remarked that Āndān's temperament was like that of Lakshmaṇa, who said that his separation from Rāma would be like taking the fish out of the water [Rāmāyaṇa II. 53. 31 ]. Yāmunāchārya hearing this said :—"Āndān ! disciples constituted like thee are rare. I am proud of thee. But oh, much distress I find in thee. Take courage." So saying, he softly stroked him and bid him go and visit Anantasayana. "Thou art my Anantasayana. I know no other", burst out Āndān, opening his mouth for the first time. Yāmunāchārya was struck with the extraordinary character of his disciple and taking him to be for one who answers the description :—

"येनैव गुरुणा यस्य न्यासविद्या प्रदीयते । तस्य वैकुण्ठदुग्धान्ध्रद्वारका स्तव एवम् ।"

"That Teacher is all who Faith bestows on his disciple

He is Vāikuntha itself, the Milk-sea and the Dvāraka <sup>1</sup>."

led him back to Srīrangam, which they all reached in due course.

In the company of his faithful followers, Yāmunāchārya was here engaged in the prosecution of his spiritual mission ; but a thought now began to harass him that to carry on the good work he had begun, no competent soul was yet found among his disciples.

<sup>1</sup> Vāikuntha is Parama-pada or the Spiritual Universe, Milk-sea is the centre which in the Maternal Universe, God has made for Himself, and which is the source of all Incarnations (like the Milky Way or the Nebula, said to be the source of all Systems). Dvāraka is the place where Krishna, one of the Incarnations, established Himself on earth and in India.

CHAPTER V.

RÂMÂNUJA.

His birth and studies.

Yâmunâchârya was thus troubled in his mind as to a competent successor to whom to hand on the Torch of Faith for posterity. His disciple Nambi or Mahâpûrṇa<sup>1</sup> had proceeded to The Holy Mount of Tirupati to live there for a time in the service of the Lord seated therein (Venkaṭâchala-pati). He had two sisters, Bhûmip-pirâṭṭi and Periya-pirâṭṭi, or Bhû-dêvi and Sṛî-dêvi. The elder Bhû-dêvi was married to Âsûri Kesavaperumâl, the performer of many Yâgas,—residing at Sṛiperumbûdûr.<sup>2</sup> Sṛî-dêvi<sup>3</sup> was married to Kamalanayana-bhaṭṭa of the Vattâ-manî clan, residing at Mazhalai-mangalam.

Of Bhû-devi<sup>4</sup> was born Râmânuja, the Great Reformer and Religionist of the 12th century,<sup>5</sup> just as Râma was born of Kausalya and Krishṇa of Devakî. Of him it is written :—

अनन्तः प्रथमं रूपं लक्ष्मणश्च ततः परम् । बलभद्रः स्तृतीयः स्तु कलौ कश्चिद्भविष्यति॥<sup>6</sup>

*“It is the First Ananta that became Lakshmana next,
And Balabhadra next, again the One next in Kali.”*

And this One was the Great Râmânuja born in the Kali Age, as the Spiritual Sun to dispel the darknes of sin and ignorance, reigning rampant as said in the verse :—

श्रुतिर्नष्टा स्मृतिर्लुप्ता प्रायेण पतिता द्विजा ।
अङ्गानि च विशीर्णानि हा वृद्धो वर्धते कलि ॥<sup>7</sup>

<sup>1</sup> See No. 23, Hierarchic Table, Lives of Âzhvârs.

<sup>2</sup> Near Madras.

<sup>3</sup> Also called Dyutimatî.

<sup>4</sup> Also called Kântimatî.

<sup>5</sup> See No. 27, Hierarchic Table to our Lives of Âzhvârs, (A. C. 1017).

<sup>6</sup> Yâdava-guṇa-mâhâtmya, I, 32.

<sup>7</sup> Bharuṣhyot-purâna.

*"The Scriptures are lost, and so the Traditional Laus,
The twice-born have become degenerate,
The allied sciences as well are wrecked,
Oh, how Kali (Iron age) gours in power!"*

To Harita Rishi was also, by God, foretold the coming of the Great Luminary, Rāmānuja, as follows:—

मदंशो यो महावीर्यं शेषाख्यो धरणीधरः । जगता सुपकाराय तव वंशे भविष्यति ॥<sup>1</sup>

*In thy line, Harita! will be born Śeṣha himself—
My Own—for worlds' Salvation.*

Thus then was ushered into the world a Great Saviour, in the fulness of his own age.

Tirumalai-Nambi<sup>2</sup> (the disciple of Yāmunāchārya) got tidings of this birth, and forthwith proceeded to Srī-perumbûdûr (10 miles from the station of Tiruvallûr, Madras Railway), to visit the child. Seeing his friend Âsûri Kēsava, he congratulated him on the auspicious event and said:—"Friend, I see the blessed child. He is above his kind. The light in his face indicates this. He possesses, in embryo, all the qualities which shall make him a sage, learned and wise. Name him therefore Lakshmaṇa as he will be to God as Lakshmaṇa was to Rāma. Lakshmaṇa (Ilaiya-perumāl) is incarnated as Rāmānuja, (Ilai-Âzhvâr) As the illustrious child grew, the several sacraments binding on the Brâhmanas were duly administered till he came to be full sixteen years of age; and by that time, he had passed through the student's course, viz. the learning of the Vedas and all that appertains to that study. He was now married; or as the Vaidikas say, he duly entered into the Order of the Householder after Brahmacharya. He left his home in search of a competent teacher who would teach him the Vedānta and found one in Yādava-prakāṣa, living at Tiru-p-putkuzhi in the neighbourhood of Perumāl-kôil, or Kānchīpuram (Conjivaram); and here he joined other students learning under that teacher.

<sup>1</sup> Bhūtupurī-māhātmya, III, (104-5).

<sup>2</sup> Called Śrī-saila-pūrṇa, the maternal uncle of Rāmānuja.

Meanwhile, Kamala-nayana-bhaṭṭa at Mazhalai-mangalam,<sup>1</sup> became the father of a boy, the mother being his wife Sṛī-devī as noted. Tirumalai-Nambi receiving the news, hastened to the place and congratulating Bhaṭṭa on the happy event, foretold that the child was one of great promise; he would grow to be very wise and good and unworldly, and an ardent Champion of Religion. He was to be named Gôvinda.<sup>2</sup> All the Samskâras (sacraments) were regularly administered in his case. He came of age and also entered the order of the householder. Hearing of his cousin-brother studying under Yâdava-prakâsa, he gladly joined him to prosecute studies in his good company.

In the course of their readings, Yâdava came across the passage:—सत्यं ज्ञान मनन्तं ब्रह्म [Taitt. Up: II, 1. 1] and he explained it in a way most repugnant to the spirit of the passage itself. For the passage means:—

“Brahman (God) is Truth (sattyaṃ), Knowledge (jñānam), and Infinity (anantam).”

But Yâdava said that the attributes of Truth, Knowledge and Infinity could not co-exist in Brahman, inasmuch as broken-horn-ness, horn-lessness, and full-hornness, could not co-exist in a cow, for example; i. e. a cow cannot have broken horns, no horns and be fully horned at one and the same time; and therefore Brahman cannot simultaneously possess various attributes. Brahman with attributes was therefore a logical impossibility. Râmânuja protested with his teacher that this Upanishad passage could not be thus misinterpreted and so tortured as to suit his own imaginary Brahman. Challenged by the teacher to furnish his own explanation, Râmânuja argued thus:—“To begin with, a sentence cannot mean otherwise than what it is intended to mean. “That Brahman is Truth etc.” is what is evident in this passage. It does not run thus:—“Brahman is not Truth,” so as to make Brahman devoid of any attribute, thus reducing It to a non-entity. And then, if there is Brahman, It must have attributes ; for an attributeless Brahman can have no existence (truth). A thing must be some-thing, not no-thing. And thirdly the attributes Truth &c. are not inconsistent with each other so as to preclude their co-existence in Brahman, such as the inconsistency of light and darkness co-existing in space for example. The attribute Truth is meant to show that Brahman exists not at one moment merely, and ceasing to exist beyond that moment. Brahman is Truth is therefore intended to establish Brahman's existence in eternity, or Its eternality in time. Brahman is Knowledge is next intended to establish that Brahman is Spirit, for Knowledge means Thought. Thought means Intelligence, Sensateness and so on. And thus Knowledge is an inseparable adjunct of Brahman, for otherwise Brahman would be no Spirit, but simple non-intelligent or non-sensate or non-thinking stuff like lifeless matter. Brahman is Knowledge therefore establishes that Brahman is Spirit or Life. Brahman is Infinity is next intended to establish that Brahman is without limits or conditions, or Its infinity in space and mode. Truth therefore is the term which characterizes Brahman as Eternal, distinguishing It from what is non eternal ; Knowledge is the term which characterizes Brahman as Spirit or Life, distinguishing It from what is non-spirit or non-life ; and Infinity is the term which characterizes Brahman as Infinite, distinguishing It from what is non-infinite (or conditioned by space-limits or mode-limits). And these attributes and infinite others can co-exist in Brahman without mutual contradiction, as redness, softness, perfume &c., can harmoniously co-exist in the flower. The analogy of the cow is not appropriate in this case ; the analogy of the flower as quoted, or the sun having light and heat 'co-existing, are appropriate. And therefore to try to postulate an attributless Brahman, or a Brahman in whom different attributes cannot co-exist, is neither logical nor consistent with the affirmatory character of the Vedic passage in question." Yādava after hearing this, simply said in disdain : "Thou, to argue with me ?" and kept silent.

<sup>1</sup> Now known as Madhura-mangalam (near Conjivaram.)

<sup>2</sup> Or Embâr, No. 31 of Hierarchic Table in our Its Lives of Azhvârs.

---

On another day, Râmânuja,—disciple as he was—was anointing his Guru Yâdava with oil; when Yâdava took into his head to descant on the Vedic verse:—

तस्य यथा कथ्यासं पुण्डरिक मेव मक्षिणी [Chhând, Up I, 6, 7]

‘Brahman,’ he said. ‘(or He who is the Golden-hued in the Sun), has his eyes red like the posteriors of the monkey.’<sup>1</sup> When Râmânuja heard this, he felt a pang shooting across his heart to find that he should hear noble Vedic passages thus abused and ill-treated by Yâdava. His grief was so keen that a hot tear stole in to his eye, and dropped on the lap of Yâdava, as Râmânuja was bending over him to rub his head with oil. The drop scorched Yâdava. He started and looked up. Seeing Râmânuja troubled, “What ails thee?” asked he. “I am grieved,” he said, “that beautiful Vedic lines are so awkwardly construed.” “What is thy interpretation, then?” angrily vociferated Yâdava. “Sir,” cried Râmânuja, “can you not see that ka means water, and pibati means to drink. Water-drinker is thus kapi, the sun, or the lotus-stalk. Âsa is to open (vikasane) or to rest (uparasane). Pundarikâ is the lotus. And therefore God in the Sun is He whose eyes are like the lotus which blooms under the balmy beams of the sun, or lotus which rests on its stalk below? It is to repudiate God to deny Him Person; and when Vedas postulate such a Personality, it is doubly to repudiate Him by reading blasphemous smiles into the Vedas, where reverential gravity and grandeur are intended. Such constructions betoken nothing short of heresy.” Yâdava heard this irresistible oration of Râmânuja, and flared up saying:—“Haughty youth! if thou canst not abide by my instruction, thou must leave me.” Râmânuja spoke not a syllable in reply, but took his departure.

The surprising intelligence of Râmânuja, his original ways, and divinely disposed heart, all combined to set Yâdava

<sup>1</sup> Unfortunately, even Sankara, who preceded Yâdava, persists in this offensive interpretation though as a Vedic scholar he could, if he had liked, seen through the blinds. He however adds a clause in his commentary that this illustration is not meant in derision.

thinking ; and his cogitations landed him in vice inasmuch as he believed that Rāmānuja was a rival, who would any day be his superior in learning, subversive of his philosophy of advaita (monism) ; in short an oddity who may injure his reputation as the teacher in the land, and a possible revolutionist whom it was expedient to put an end to.

Thus thinking, he called together those disciples who were after his ways and said : “ Look, all of you do quietly subscribe to my views, but this Rāmānuja alone is adverse and perverse, and entertains opinions opposed to mine. He is likely to become our declared enemy. Can you devise some means by which to do away with him ? ” They suggested many ways of disposal, but none of them recommended itself to Yādava, as it meant sinning, for which Śāstras declared that one must expiate and suffer ; and secondly in whatever way Rāmānuja was to be done away with, that must be above suspicion. After much consultation and deliberation, they pitched upon a plot, viz., to invite Rāmānuja back into their fold, treat him as their best friend—as one without whom they could not live—and then they would start on a holy pilgrimage to Vārāṇasi (Benares) and there drown Rāmānuja in the Ganga (Ganges) river, near Maṇikarnikā-gbāt—the ostensible object being pilgrimage, the real one being Rāmānuja’s death—death which, taking place in the Holy Ganga, would be counted as an affair of merit, which they thought would not involve the actors in sin ! What travesty of spiritual ethics, by Yādava !! A veritable whited sepulchre he must have been.<sup>1</sup>

Into a hellish conspiracy such as this then, Yādava and his accomplices entered, even as Duryodhana did as regards Dharmaputra and his brothers, whom he had contrived to kill in a wax-house. They therefore invited Rāmānuja to join them as without him they said they felt uncongenial, and begged of him to prosecute his studies as he willed, undisturbed. Some time passed thus.

<sup>1</sup> Probably Yādava’s moral (im-moral) sense took refuge in his pantheistic theory of Māya, or illusion of the world, which thus seems to provide no strong motive for strenuous effort after holiness.

Yâdava now announced his intention of going on a pilgrimage to Kâsi (Benares); and making due preparations, started on the journey with Râmânuja of course, Govinda-bhaṭṭa, Râmânuja's maternal cousin, following Govinda somehow got scent of the evil designs of Yâdava on Râmânuja. The other disciples too had their suspicion that Govinda might divulge and defeat their machinations. They took care therefore to keep him and Râmânuja apart as far as possible. They had now arrived at the Vindhyâ-range of hills, and while crossing a valley, Râmânuja stopped a little behind for purposes of nature. And Govinda contrived to tarry with him. The others were a little in advance. Govinda took advantage of this seclusion to disclose to Râmânuja the designs of Yâdava in as few words as possible and advised him to escape. So saying he left Râmânuja.

Râmânuja taking the hint, left the main path and turned aside, soon hiding himself in the wilderness of the Vindhya. He roamed about in the jungle aimlessly, the fierce sun beating upon his head, and stones and thorns hurting his feet, drawing forth blood. Wandering away thus into unknown regions for some time, he was fagged out; and hungry, thirsty and footsore, was unable to advance further. "Only greatest sinners," he cried, "deserve this fate. Hence it is written:—विन्ध्याटवीष्वतो यस्तु शुष्ककोटरवासिनः । कृष्णसर्पाहिं जायन्ते ये हरन्ति वसुधराम्॥<sup>1</sup> e. g. "Those who steal others' land are born in the waterless wilds of the Vindhya, as dark snakes lodging in dry anthills." He was bewildered, not knowing where to go and what to do. He looked round for help, mind-troubled and heart-sick. While he was in this state, all on a sudden burst upon his sight a Fowler and His Wife.

God has defined himself as One who can have no joy without His faithful ones: (नाहमात्मानं माशसि मङ्गलैः स्थापुभिर्विना); and One who incarnates with bow, arrow, sword and even a wife, to befriend His faithful in times of peril: (सदार स्तर्वसुलभ खड्गबाणासनेषुभृत् । आपन्नाभयदानार्थं माविरास जनार्दन ॥<sup>2</sup>. Seeing them, Râmânuja heaved a sigh and was comforted at the thought that some one had come or been deputed by God to succour him in his distress. Rāmānuja accosting them asked who they were and whither they were going. "We are Fowlers coming from Siddhāsrama in the North and are wending our way to Satyavrata-kshētra<sup>1</sup> in the South," said they. "May I accompany you to that Holy shrine?" asked Rāmānuja. "Most willingly", said they, "follow us." They leading, Rāmānuja trudged on, till Vindhya was now out of sight, and the sun was setting. Rāmānuja performed his evening prayers. And as it was getting dark, all the three sat down under the shelter of a big tree, and were sinking into the soft embraces of sleep. The Fowler's wife addressing her husband said:—"Dear, can you get me a drink of water to allay my thirst?" "Wait a little," answered the husband, "directly it dawns, I promise to find you close by a beautiful pond, full of cool and fragrant water." Rāmānuja overheard this conversation and thought: "Oh, if only it were in my power to do this kind service now, at least as a requital for their kindness to me! But I am in unknown regions." And he dozed away in such reflections.

<sup>1</sup> Vishnu-Dharma, 62, 31,

<sup>2</sup> Brahmânda-Purâna.

The night had now nearly worn away, a flush suffused the East, and a morning breeze gently began to blow. Rāmānuja rose with thoughts of God in his breast, and offered up his morning prayers. After this he looked round for his Guides, in order to pursue the journey, but to his amazement he did not find them. He called for them aloud and searched in every direction, but all to no purpose. He proceeded a few steps in alarm, not knowing whither he was going. But by this time the sun had appeared above the Eastern horizon. Rāmānuja could see his surroundings better; and he heard peoples' voices. He took heart and, a few steps more, discovered a pleasant garden, a pond<sup>2</sup> and a few men standing by. "What a contrast this day is with yesterday," gladly cried he, astonished. "What country could this be? Is there any town close by?" he asked himself.

<sup>1</sup> The purāṇic or legendary name of Conjeevaram.

<sup>2</sup> This is called Sālar-k-Kinar, still existing and from which water is daily brought to Lord Varadarājasvāmi for ablution.

The people gazed at him wonderingly, saying: "Art thou mad, Brâhmana? Dost thou not see before thee the bright Punya-kôti-vimânam?" At this Râmanuja looked up and saw the high Gopuram (or cupola) of the Temple of Lord Varadarâja, the worshipful Deity of Kâñchîpuram. He was struck dumb with delight and astonishment. It now dawned upon him that He who had directed his steps in the Vindhyan wilds was no other than God himself, who not only guided him but miraculously transported him over a distance of nearly 1,000 miles in a night !! Like the joy that thrilled Sîtâ when she heard of Râvana's fall, like the joy that ravished Râma when he heard Hanumân say: "I have found Sîtâ", like the joy of Hanumân when he entered the Madhuvana on his return from Lanka, was Râmanuja's joy after the wonderful adventures he had recently passed through. He simply fainted away with delight, especially when he reflected how God descends to the weak and helpless, even as Saint Parâmkusa fainted when he reflected how Krishna, though God, submitted to be bound by a rope by Yasoda! Charmed into ecstasy, he cried:—"To Arjuna, O God! Thou revealedest Thy Beatific Form,<sup>1</sup> but to me Thou hidst Thyself under the guise of a Fowler I took Thee for a mere Fowler and I beseech Thy pardon for taking Thee for an ordinary creature. Even as Arjuna besought Thee, so do I:—" Krishna! Yâdava! Achyuta! Overlook it, if taking Thee for friend, I called Thee by names such as these, unmindful of Thy Greatness as God; remit, O God! any slight I may have, unwarily shown Thee, while we moved together, sat together and ate together and joked together, as equals"<sup>2</sup> Râmanuja was thus drowned in rapturous delight after the wonderful experiences he had. Out of sheer joy he fell prostrate, rose, fell again, shed tears of joy, was bathed in perspiration—in short, felt his whole being divinely transported beyond himself. From that day on, he carried water daily from the holy well (śālai-k-kīṇar) to the Lord Varadarâja.

<sup>1</sup> Bhagavadgîtâ, XIth Book.

<sup>2</sup> Bhagavadgîtâ, XI. 41, 42.

CHAPTER VI.

YĀDAVA, GOVINDA AND RĀMĀNUJA.

Yādava-prakāśa and his disciples, finding that Rāmānuja did not follow, stopped and waited for him for some time. Govinda came up however and joined them. "You have come, but where is Rāmānuja?" asked Yādava. "I never stopped with him," said Govinda in reply, "I walked my own way, and so I am not aware of what has become of him. Yādava sent his disciples in search, but they returned unsuccessful. "What could have happened to the poor youth, Oh!" thus did they all feign grief. Baulked thus in their intentions, they continued their journey sullenly to on Kāsi.

They duly arrived there. It was the month Māgha, and they went to bathe in the Holy Ganga. While bathing, Govinda found a Śivalīṅgam (phallus-stone) floating up into his hand. He showed this to Yādava, who said:—"You are a most fortunate man. Gangādhara (Śiva) himself has appeared to you. From this day you are most dear and venerable to us. Your name from this day shall be.—" Ullangai-konaṇḍa-Nāyanār (he who brought in his palm)." They all now started homeward for Kāñchīpuram, visiting on their way Jagannātha, Ahobilam and other shrines. Before reaching Kāñchī, U. Nāyanār took leave of Yādava, saying he would instal the Śivalīṅgam in a suitable place and then join them. Yādava permitting, Nāyanār went to his birth-place Mazhalai-Mangalam, and there with the help of the learned men of the place installed the Śivalīṅgam, and remained in its staunch service. Kālahasti is a place sacred to Siva. It is written that this Siva appeared to Nāyanār in his dream commanding him to join his Temple-service at Kālahasti. A dream was dreamt by the Temple-authorities of the place also, commanding them to proceed and bring Nāyanār with honors. They did so, and bringing Nāyanār in festive fashion, made him the dignitary of their temple, investing him with the signet-ring and other insignia of that office.

Yâdava-prakâsa, as already said, had arrived at Kâncî. Here to his astonishment he found Râmânuja, who he had believed had been lost in the jungles. He feigned joy however at seeing him and said:—"Our grief at your loss in the Vindhyan wilds, was very great; at seeing you now, it has given place to boundless joy." Râmânuja narrated to him how he lost sight of them as they were much in advance, how he lost his way; and how while wandering sick and sore in the mazes of the forest, a Fowler broke upon his sight suddenly; and how He guided his steps so that to his wonderment, he found he had traversed a great distance while he thought he slept under a tree, but waking up to find he had been brought to Kâncî. This account made Yâdava to stare at Râmânuja in combined fear and wonder; whom he now looked upon as a being not of the ordinary run of mankind; not to be despised but looked upon as one deserving reverential regards; and feeling remorse in his heart for his evil intents towards him. He could not therefore but turn his hate into love for him; and therefore invited Râmânuja to grace his school with his presence and to complete his studies if he so willed.

While these events were passing at Kâncî, two Sri Vaishnavas<sup>1</sup> of Kâncî travelled to Srîrangam, to pay their devotions to Ranganâtha, which they did and then went to Âlavandâr (Yâmunâchârya), the great apostle of the Faith who was there teaching at the time<sup>2</sup>. After due exchange of courtesies, Yâmunâchârya asked them for any news of an interesting nature at Kâncî. They related to him how a youth Râmânuja by name, born at Bhûtapuri (Srî Perumbûdûr) came to Kâncî to read Vedânta under a uni-staffed<sup>3</sup> Sanyâsi, Yâdava-prakâsa; how in the course of their readings, differences rose between them as regards interpretations of Veda-texts,—Yâdava contending for a quality-less God, and Râmânuja for a quality-full One, and so on—, and how, on a certain the Advaita School, and the Tri-staffed to the Visishtâdvaita school. The staff is made of bamboo sticks.

<sup>1</sup> Devout followers of Vishnu.

<sup>2</sup> Vide his life.

<sup>3</sup> Uni-staffed Sanyâsins belong to

day, a certain blasphemous exegetic by Yādava of a Veda-passage excited and pained Rāmānuja and drew forth burning tears from his eyes, which accidentally falling on Yādava's thigh scorched him like fire; how on his challenging, Rāmānuja gave his beautiful interpretation that the passage meant that God's eyes resembled the lotus opening under the sun's rays, and how this and other disputations of the sort led to their separation; Yādava's plot on his life and the rest of events, adventurous and miraculous, which followed thereafter in succession.

Yāmūnāchārya heard this account with rapt attention and exclaimed :—

असन्त एवान्नाहि सम्भवन्ति हसन्तिकायामिव हन्यवाह. ।

अत्रैवसन्तो यदिसम्भवन्ति तत्रैवलाभ स्तरसीरुहाणाम्॥

"The bad are legion like fire-sparks in a furnace.

But the good, if found in the fire, are like lotuses therein."

So saying he felt a great longing to immediately go and see Rāmānuja. He repaired to the Lord Ranganātha and taking leave of Him, left Srīrangam with his followers. On his way, paying honors to God Nāyanār and the Three First Āzhvārs at Tirukkôlūr<sup>1</sup>, reached Kāñchī in due time.

Tirukkacc'ā-nambi,<sup>2</sup> on hearing his Āchārya coming, gathered together the holy people of Kāñchī, and with Srī Sathagôpa, Tirtha and Pravāda of the Holy Temple of Varadarāja, went forward to meet and welcome him. Yāmūnāchārya received the Holy gifts of God, and seeing Tirukkacchi-Nambi, his disciple, lying prostrate at his feet for joy and veneration for the Guru, lifted him up with affection and inquired :— "Gajēndradāsa!" art thou steady at thy fanning service to Lord Varada?" "By your grace, Sir, The Lord is accepting my humble services," said he. And then they proceeded together to the Temple, where Yâmunâchârya paid due honors to the Lord Varada.

<sup>1</sup> See Lives of Āzhvārs.

<sup>2</sup> No. 36, Ibid, Hierarchic Table. Here read pp. 3499, Vol. VII. Bhagavadvishaya :—Āmudalvan.

<sup>3</sup> A Sanskrit name for Tirukkacchi-Nambi.

While he was thus employed, Yâdava-piakâsa came on a visit to the temple, with his followers. Yâmunâchârya saw them, and asked who among his followers was Râmânuja. They pointed him out. "That bright and glorious central figure," said they, "possessing those fine shoulders, broad and long, like Râma Himself,—that is Râmânuja." Yâmunâchârya drank him in with his eyes, and sent his prayers after him, as the host was moving away.

Yâmunâchârya now mounted up to the Central Shrine of Lord Varada (called Hastigiri) and standing before the Deity sent up a prayer to Him thus:—"O Great Lord! grant me a boon. Thou art Vara-da (Boon-Granter), for यस्य प्रसादकलया बधिर शृणोति पङ्गुः प्रधावति जवेन च वक्ति मूक । अन्धः प्रपश्यति सुतं लभते च वन्द्या तं देव मेव वरदं शरणं गतोऽस्मि ॥ i.e. 'By thy favour, the deaf hears, the lame runs, the dumb speaks, the blind sees, and the barren bears. I have sought Thee.' Grant me then, that this Râmânuja shall become the bearer of the Torch of our Faith." An urgent call from Srîrangam now obliging Yâmunâchârya to return immediately, he found no leisure to do anything more, nor time even to say something to Tirukkacchi-Nambi, about his wishes and future plans. To Srîrangam thus he returned.

CHAPTER VII.

RÂMÂNUJA—CONTROVERSIES AND MIRACLES.

Yâdava-prakâsa was conducting his Vedânta classes as usual. It so happened that the princess of the then Râja<sup>1</sup> of the dominions, to which Kânci had then belonged, became obsessed with an evil spirit (brahma-rakshas). The Râja was endeavouring to find an able exorcist of demons. He was told that Yâdava was well versed in such lore. The Râja sent men to invite him. They went and told him the state of affairs with the princess and that he was wanted. Yâdava said to the men:—"Go ye back and tell the spirit. "Yâdava commandeth thee to leave the princess." They returned and delivered the message: "Yâdava commandeth. Leave thou the princess," they demanded of the spirit. "Go back," bellowed the rakshas, "and tell Yâdava from me, to depart from this country." The Râja's men ran to Yâdava again and delivered this message from the rakshas. Yâdava now went himself with a troop of his disciples, and stationing himself before the obsessed princess, began to mutter potent magical incantations and showing his fist, bid the devil depart. But the devil (i.e., princess) stretched its legs and pointing them towards Yâdava said, in sovereign contempt of him:—"Thinkest thou Yâdava! that I do not know thy magic and magical formulæ? Knowest thou not I am a brahma-rakshas? Neither thy mantra nor thy person can be efficacious as against me. Thou hast no knowledge of me, nor hast knowledge of thyself. Get thee gone." "But," put in Yâdava, "hast thou knowledge of me, and of thyself as thou boasteth?" "Learn then from me," retorted the rakshas, "thou wert a guana in thy past birth, living in the holes of the bank of the Madhurântaka tank. A batch of Sîrî-Vaishnavas were travelling to Tirumalai (Tirupati) on a holy pilgrimage. They stopped at the tank, cooked, ate and left the place. They had left the leavings of their food, and had spilt some water. Thou didst then scamper to the place and ate of that food and drank of that water. This fortuitous merit brought thee to this present janma (birth) of thine as a Brâhmaṇa with learning. As for myself, I was a Brâhmaṇa in my past birth. I began to perform a Yâga (a Brâhmanic sacred ritual), but there were omissions in the regular chanting of the mantias, and the acts connected therewith. And hence the râkshasa-janma has devolved on me. Seest thou how I have knowledge, and thou hast not"? "Very good," said Yâdava, "tell me then who will make thee dislodge from the princess?" "There," said the devil, pointing with its hands folded in fear and worship, "in thy ranks there is that angel from Heaven incarnate among men, whom thou hast the glory of counting as thy student, and whose name is Râmânuja. At his bidding I must flee<sup>1</sup>" Yâdava turned to Râmânuja and begged of him to command the evil spirit to leave. Râmânuja did so. "But I will not", it said, "unless, O Holy soul, thou place thy Holy Feet upon my head." Râmânuja did so. "I now salute thee Holy Râmânuja," said the spirit in a loud tone, "I am leaving the princess." "But stay," said Râmânuja "how shall we know that thou hast left?" By this sign" replied the spirit, "into that asvattha tree yonder, I shall enter, the evidence thereof shall be the breaking of a branch." And so it happened. The Râja was overjoyed, and loaded them with presents and honours. Yâdava-prakâsa showered plaudits on Râmânuja and glad at least that his prestige was somewhat saved by his noble disciple, returned to his retreat.

<sup>1</sup> Virarâjendra and his successor Parakesari Varma; as also the Western Chalukyas were about this time in possession of Conjeveram [South Indian Inscription Vol. II. p. 117 ff.]

In Srîrangam, Yâmunâchârya was in the meanwhile conducting his expositions of The Faith, of which the Four-Thousand Prabandhas<sup>2</sup> constituted the chief documents. When he came across St. Nammâzhvâr's verse (Tiru-vâi-mozhi IV. 10. 5) which proclaims that there is but One God, "On whom, all ye, O Laingas, Sâmanas and Sâkyas<sup>3</sup>, shall believe", he felt more anxious than ever to find a capable successor; and still more fervently prayed to Lord Varadarāja to wean Râmānuja from the heretical associations of Yādava, and appoint him for The Faith. In answer as it were to his ardent petition, a crisis was preparing.

<sup>1</sup> Cp. Luke IV. 33—35. And in the synogogue ..an unclean devil &c. Also Luke X. 38 ff.

<sup>2</sup> See our Āchār's Lives

<sup>3</sup> Laingas = Saivas, Sâmanas = Jâinas, Sâkyas = Bauddhas.

For, Yādava was one day explaining the Vedānta-texts सर्वं खल्विदं ब्रह्म,<sup>1</sup> and नेह ना नास्ति किंचन,<sup>2</sup> as if they meant that soul (man) and God were identical. The first passage means —All this indeed is Brahman, and the second means —There is not the least diversity here. According to Yādava, the first passage meant that all this Cosmos is God; the second passage meant that all the diversities that are seen in the Cosmos are illusory. Râmānuja took objection to these interpretations and said that the cosmos can never be identical with Brahman (God) nor can it be proved unreal. For the first passage all this indeed is Brahman meant that the cosmos is permeated with His Spirit, i.e. full of God; in other words the cosmos has no existence independent of God; it exists by His will. He is its Creator, Preserver and Destroyer. He is its Ruler and rules by His immanence. And the second passage meant that the diversity is of the cosmos and real inasmuch as it is sustained by the Unity of God; that therefore whoso sees the diverse cosmos as severed from God sees not aright. There is but One God, neither two nor many. In Him is all. That is the meaning of the text. Cosmos is not denied inasmuch as its existence is eternal substantially, though it exteriorly undergoes adjectival change. It is an axiom that nothing can come out of nothing: ab nihil nihil fit. The cosmos is real. It is in God, who is thus one only, not many. This passage is thus an assertion, not a negation, of the cosmos.

<sup>1</sup> Chhândogyu Upanishad. III. 14-1.

<sup>2</sup> Brihadâranya. Up. VI. 4-19.

<sup>3</sup> A Christian writer says - "To say that man, with all his passionate tempers, his deceitful ways, his foul imaginations, his hard uncharitable thoughts, is God, is the fatal and destructive error which for so many centuries has been leading India ever further along the path of decadence." [Epiphany. p. 146 Vol. XXII. 1904] We Viśiṣṭādvaitins say exactly the same thing, but which the Christian knows not yet.

As obstinately as Yâdava preached his pantheism, so obstinately did Râmânuja rebut him. Yâdava got enraged at last. "No more can you read with me, Sir" he cried, "you must henceforth find your own congenial teacher."

Râmânuja was glad to leave this teacher of impossible and absurd pilosophy. Straight home went he, and informed his mother Śrî-Dêvi of all that happened. "Enough of thy studies, son!" said she; there is Tirukkacchi-Nambi who is in great favour with Lord Varada-Râja. Seek his advice and service, and abide by his will. That will do thee all the good." Râmânujâ at once sought T. Nambi and besought him to employ him in divine services in the Temple, even as Lakshmaṇa besought of Râma.—

क्रियतामितिमावद् [Râmâyana III 18. 7.]

"Râma! say. 'do,' and I am thy servant."

S. Nambi said:—"Lord Varadarâja much likes the water from the Śîlai-well you were once bringing him. Fetch the same daily and serve Him." Thus therefore did Râmânuja employ himself.

---

CHAPTER VIII.

ÂLAVANDÂR'S LAST DAYS AND LAST WORDS.

We shall for a moment turn to Srîrangam Yâmunâ was aging now. He became ill. Tiruvarangapperumâl Aṛaiyar<sup>1</sup> approached him, followed by Yâmunâ's disciples Tirukkôṭṭiyâr-Nambi<sup>2</sup> and Periya-Nambi<sup>3</sup>. The latter prayed to him to give them the best salvatory advice. Yâmunâ spoke thus:—"Good souls, look upon the shrine of Ranganâtha as your very life; the Great God enthroned in that shrine as your Saviour; make Tiruppânâzhvâr,—the Panchama Saint<sup>4</sup>—who is the beloved of this Great God, your ideal for loving contemplation. This holy Saint is to God Ranga (of Srîrangam) as Kuumba-rutta-Nambi<sup>5</sup>—the potter—is to God Venkatêsa (of the Tirupati Hill); as Tirukkacchi-Nambi—the Vaisya<sup>6</sup>—is to God Varada-Râja (of Kâncîpuram). This Saint, to you, sire," addressing Aṛaiyar, "is your very soul." And continued:—"What is dear to you, Holy Sire, is dear to me; the means of your salvation, are my means as well. Aṛaiyar, prostrating to Yâmunâ said: "Sire, you now seem to talk as if you are envisaging truths as exist in Nitya-vibhûti (=Eternal or Unvarying Cosmos=Heaven). It makes me almost envious to study you thus." "Sire", Yâmunâ said, "how can you be envious of me, if I go to Nitya-vibhûti before you do? Can great and good men like you be envious of others' fortune? So, if I leave you all in advance, reconcile yourselves thus." Now to all his disciples, he administered general instructions thus:—"Hear me, sons! A prapanna is he who has absolutely resigned himself to God. If after professing so, he should still entertain doubts as to whether his soul is at all in the safe

<sup>1</sup> Vide No. 22 Hierarchic Table, Lines of Âchvâras

<sup>2</sup> Vide No. 24. Ibid.

<sup>3</sup> Vide No. 23. Ibid.

<sup>4</sup> See his Life and foot note to page 137 Ibid., and our recent Lecture on the Panchamas.

<sup>5</sup> See Venkatâchala Mâhâtmya. He is called Bhîma, the potter.

<sup>6</sup> The third lower caste from the Brâhmana.

keeping of God, that very doubt is proof of his want of trust in God. A true believer in God is only he who feels quite sure of his soul's safety in His arms, and that his body is a temporary form begot by Karma,<sup>1</sup> ceasing when Karma ceases. A prapanna is thus one who has intellectually divested himself thus of all concern, either as regards his soul or his body, both being in the keeping of two divergent determining agents. This resigned attitude of the mind constitutes the true prapanna (believer). Dwell on the sense contained in the Holy Name Nârâyana, as it contains the sum of all divine wisdom. It is

<sup>1</sup> Karma means act. This is the inherent will in the soul. This will is subjective. This shapes out an objective, for which matter is associated with. Like God, Soul is eternal, like the eternality of God's attributes,—because of God's eternality. Karma, or will which is innate in the soul, is eternal with it. A Christian might say: 'that this dogma puts a limit to God's power, inasmuch as Karma or soul is something which He did not make, and therefore circumscribing the sovereignty of God. Karma becomes therefore another "Unknown God", containing in itself possibilities for the soul's future, and therefore the soul can strive for itself without or independent of God. In short, by the dogma of Karma, God is made dependent, if not altogether rendered nugatory. Karma therefore is incompatible with an independent sovereign God.' To this we say, that Karma, by itself as a fact inherent in the soul, eternal with it, and as operative on the destinies of the soul, is all that, by virtue of an eternal God eternally so willing. If God is capable of willing something in time, his capability is all the more greater, when He can will things from all eternity. This is called the nitya-sankalpa power of God. With this basis then of God's eternal will, there is nothing contradictory or interfering with God's paramountcy. If the Christian in order to invest God with all-power, demurs to Karma being owned by the soul, is he then prepared to transfer all Karma to God, and in order to maintain that God must create soul, Karma and all in time? Then the soul is exonerated of all personal responsibility. It has neither merit nor demerit, rewards and punishments are not for it. A non-eternal will, as creation supposes, therefore derogates from God's power rather than enhance and glorify it, as when He is endowed with eternal will. Time-limitations on God is thus as bad atheism, as that of identifying man with God, postulated by monism. Karma in soul, not originating in time, and its being so by God's eternal will, reconciles at once, soul's responsibility for his acts (Karma), and God's supreme power to rule over this state of things as long as He may please, and reserving to Himself the power which may be called grace, by which to annul Karma in toto, and gather His flock to Himself. Eternal Karma therefore is compatible with sovereign God's Oneness, His unrestricted Power and His unconditional Grace. To call in question therefore the power of God to eternally order things is to limit Him. To endow Him with eternal will is to truly conceive of His Infinite nature. If it still be contended that Karma, even when eterthem is to serve Him, and what pleases them pleases Him. Find your temple of bliss (bhoga) in the Turumantra, your temple of flowers (pushpa) in the Charamasloka and your temple of bounty (tyāga) in the Dvaya<sup>1</sup>. I echo but what our Saints have said before." On hearing these, T. Araiyar said :—"Oh, Sire, after your departure to Parama-pada (= Heaven), what matters it, if worms, like us, die ?" Yāmuna, hearing this, made no reply to such a token of affection ; and fearing lest such praise inflame his pride and destroy humility.

T. Araiyar, Periya-nambi and others went to the Temple and there in the presence of Lord Ranganātha stood revolving in their minds as to what had transpired. Periya-nambi and others said they had decided to give up their lives, if Yāmuna passed away, for they could hardly bear such separation. Ranganātha read their thoughts and a voice came :—"I conjure you all not to think in this wise. You must abide by My will as to how long it may please Me to keep men on earth and when I may choose to dismiss them from there. Take Araiyar for your guide after Yāmuna's departure." They all heard this divine mandate, and speeding to Yāmuna related to him the extraordinary occurrence. He said :—"I echo the mandate. Grudge me not that celestial bliss into which I am about to enter, nor grudge the service which Ranganātha will demand of you for some time to come after me. But if overcome by grief at having to leave me, you persist in your intentions to give up your lives on my account, it will be most hostile to the will of our Masters, Uyyakkondār and others, that a continuous succession of spiritual teachers of your faith shall be maintained. Do not then lose heart. Resigned to His will, live on." They were still unpacified. To put heart into them, the Master continued :—"Know these truths again. Endeavour to see no difference between God and God's saints. In God's saints, God Himself is present. On the other hand, know that when you do a service to your disciples, you shall take no credit to yourselves for doing it. The credit belongs to the Masters of whom know you are the accredited agents. And when you serve God, think your services are transmitted to Him by the Saints and Sages, whom you succeed. Further, when you dispense to your disciples, let the motive for such dispensing (i.e. imparting instruction or bestowing gifts &c.) be not one of selfishness (i.e. for a return from them of money, or satisfaction of a worldly end). If a spiritual preceptor has such motives, and if he ever consider himself superior in the midst of an assembly of holy men, he deserves to be discarded." The disciples were still dejected, and the Master again continued his discourse thus:—"Fix your hearts on Lord Ranganâtha. He is your sole End and Aim. Enough, if the first thing you do every morn is to lay a flower at His feet. Here are three objects for your worship:—God, the Guru, and His Faithful. In the middle of these three terms centres the ideas of the first and the last terms. This centering in a Guru who is sensibly present, will be your means to cross the sea of this world. I consign you then, dear disciples, into the hands of T. Araiyar." T. Araiyar now addressed the disciples:—"Hearken to the parting words of our Master. Take courage. I also lay it upon you not to think of dying, because the Master leaves us. If you break these commands, you shall forfeit both the Land of Bliss and the Union with the Blessed. After hearing these assuring words of Araiyar, Yâmunâchârya found peace in his soul.

---

<sup>1</sup> Consult our Lives of Āshvāras and Divine Wisdom of Drāvida Saints for explanation of these mysteries.

Yâmunâchârya recovered somewhat; and took his bath of health. For joy, they made great feast and in a body proceeded to the Temple to pay honors to Lord Ranga,<sup>1</sup> accompanied by Yâmunâ. The curtain across the sanctum was drawn aside. The congregation was full. Yâmunâ stood silent for a while before the Deity with folded hands, and then spoke thus.—"Strange, is this Heaven? Am I among the Celestials, the Angels?" As he uttered this, the garland of flowers from Lord Ranganâtha's neck slipped and dropped on the ground. T. Araiyar promptly picked it up and put it on ÂĻavandâr's neck, saying:—"I suppose, sire, your wishes are now fulfilled." Dismissed by Ranganâtha<sup>1</sup> with tirtham and prasâdam, they all returned to Âlavandâr's monastery. Here, after seeing every one partake of holy food, Âlavandâr prostrated before them all and asked forgiveness of them all for any wrongs. "How can you do wrong, Sire, and what is there for us to forgive?" So saying, T Araiyar raised him up in reverence. The master now took his food, and went on saying many precious things, knowing that his end was fast approaching.

<sup>1</sup> Ranga is abbreviation for Ranganâtha.

Something more was yet in store, before God was pleased to take to himself this Pioneer of the Visishtâdvaita Faith. News reached Kâñchî of the critical state of Yâmunâchârya's health. Two S̃rî Vaishṇavas hastened to S̃rîrangam to visit the sage, perhaps for the last time. Yâmunâ received the visitors with great earnestness and asked them to tell him how things were going with Râmânuja. They informed him that owing to an altercation between Yâdava and Râmânuja, the latter had severed his connection with him and was employed solely in the services of Lord Varadarâja. "God has granted my fervent prayers then, and be He praised", cried Yâmunâ, elated with joy. He called Periyānambi (=Mahâpūrṇa) to his presence and said:—"Here are glad tidings for us. Râmânuja is happily disconnected from Yâdava. Go forth at once to Kâñchî and bring him to me." Mahâpūrṇa immediately left.

But Yâmunâ in the meanwhile got worse, despite his will to live till Râmânuja's arrival. And all the disciples were made uneasy, and hoped against hope that the Master might live. It was the month Vaiyâṣi, and the usual temple-jubilations of the season were proceeding. The avabhṛita<sup>1</sup> (closing) day came; and Yâmunâ went to the Temple, and paid his last worship and homage to Ranganâtha, whom, as well as Saint Tiruppânâzhvâr, stationed at His feet, he devoured with his eyes from toe to top, and top to toe. Receiving tīrtha<sup>2</sup> and prasāda,<sup>3</sup> he returned to his monastery; and gathered together all his disciples and temple-authorities round him. He fell prostrate before the assembly, and once more craved their pardon for all his faults. In one voice they cried:—"Holy Sire, why speakest thou of faults?" He now addressed them thus:—"I beseech ye all to take care of the venerable Aṛaiyar. O ye officers of Ranga's Shrine! I pray to you to conduct all the several items of worship, such as mantrapushpa<sup>1</sup> to Lord Ranga, punctually; and distribute holy food to all your gurus and holy souls of the place, and to all pilgrims coming from all quarters to visit the Shrine." "These must be his Last words," thought all, sorrowing much in their hearts. Turning to Yāmuna, they said:—"All shall be done Sire, as you wish." Śrī Yāmuna now assumed the padmāsana<sup>2</sup> posture, held his breath, and fixing all his mind and heart on the Holy feet of his Āchārya<sup>3</sup> Maṇakkāl-Nambi, commanded the disciples to repeat loudly the Brahmavalli,<sup>4</sup> Bhṛiguvalli,<sup>5</sup> Puruṣa-sūktā,<sup>6</sup> Archirādi,<sup>7</sup> Sūzhuṣumbu<sup>8</sup> &c. And as the moment Abhijit (midday), coupled with Śrāvana constellation arrived on the sixth day of Vaiyāsi, and as trumpets began to blow, the Holy Sage was elevated to Nitya-vibhūti (Eternal Realms).

<sup>1</sup> Ablution after a sacrificial ceremony.

<sup>2</sup> Water consecrated to the Deity during the worship and distributed to the devotees.

<sup>3</sup> Flowers, food &c, offered to God and distributed to the Faithful,

How ĀḤavandār was interred.<sup>9</sup>

Tiruvāranga-p-perumāl Aṛaiyar and others fell to the ground senseless with grief at this bereavement which was so hard to bear. But they had to perform all the services for the departed; and rallying therefore to the task, they bade the

<sup>1</sup> See any work on Yoga.

<sup>2</sup> Spiritual preceptor and guide; called also Guru.

<sup>3</sup> See Taittirīya Upanishat.

<sup>4</sup> See Chāndogya Up. and one of the 18 Rahasyas of Lokāchārya.

<sup>5</sup> Tiruvāṇ-mozhi, X, 9-1.

<sup>6</sup> We had thought of omitting the details of this last sacrament administered on Sanyāsins (monastics) But thinking that an account may be of much interest to Oriental Scholars, we have translated the same as best as we can. Also it is a study in Indian "Magics" which may be interesting to thaumaturgists.

son of the Sage (i.e., son before he took the robe of Sanyâsin) to do what was necessary.

They sprinkled water over the place (sthala-suddhi) after sweeping; constructed a fore-poled mantapam (booth or bower)<sup>1</sup>, and adorned it with festoons of darbha (sacred grass), and sengazhu-nîr flowers; silk hangings were hung and chûmaras (chorries or streamers) were arranged in tassels. To the four posts were tied young plantain trees with bunches of green areca-nut at the capitals. Fruits of different kinds were hung from the canopy, and a flag hoisted at one corner. To the four faces, East, South, West and North, were hung respectively festoons of tender foliage, of palâsa, aśvatthā, khaddira, and udumbara. Paddy grain was spread on the floor (of the bier), and pûṇa-kumbha (water-filled vessel) was planted in its midst, and four others at the corners. Twelve more vessels were placed outside the bower, at different corners, repeating the Twelve Holy Names, Kêśava &c. Their necks were wound with kusa, dûrvā, darbha, viṣṇu-krañtha, and various flowers; these were worshipped after repeating the Dvaya-mantṛa along with the names of the guru-paramparâ (the apostolic series), and with the Twelve Holy Names, Kêśava &c., they were consecrated. Leaving the vessel in the Îśânya-quarter (North-East) called the San̥karshaṇa-vessel, the four others were taken up, and with them they laved the body of the Sage after the pañc-âmrita (the five articles of milk, butter, honey, curds and cocoanut-water) ablution was over, repeating the Purusha-sûkta all the time. The gentry of the place (mudalis) now took up the remaining twelve vessels outside the bier, and ablutions were performed with these after presenting the assembled magnates with rolled betel and nut (pân-supâri) and obtaining their permission, after dextro-ambulating them. The place at the outer-door was next cleaned with cow-dung, and over the space so consecrated, rice grain was spread. A mortar and pestle were brought and sacrificially washed with water, and new pieces of cloth were tied to them. Turmeric was placed in the mortar. Dāsīs (or maid-servants) stamped with the holy Chakra and Śaṅkha—thus consecrated to Viṣṇu—draped themselves in washed garments and decked themselves according to the occasion, and going round the Holy Trivikraman Street, approached the door; and prostrating before the holy assembly, with their leave, the Mṛu-god-representing pestle was taken up, and repeating the Twelve Holy Names, the turmeric in the mortar was pounded, called Srī-Chūṇa. Now came Aṛaiyar and others. They drew on the paddy a figure of earth with its nine divisions (bharata-khaṇḍa &c). At the eight corners of this space were placed eight vessels filled respectively, with holy powders, holy unguents, holy scents, holy flowers, holy lāja (fried rice), holy milk, holy curds, and holy water; and decked with the buds of daibha, aśvattha &c, repeating Dīya-māṇtra all the while. To the East, they placed a winnow-basket filled with huskless lāja; to the West a vessel filled with Srī-Vaiṣṇava-foot-washed water; to the North, money and other presents to be distributed to the Srī-Vaiṣṇavas; to the South, a golden platter filled with the garland, raiment, &c., worn by Lord Ranganātha. Then prostrating to the sanctified image of the Sage, they went round it, and rehearsed Tiru-p-pallāṇḍu, Kaṇṇinun-siruttāmbu, Śūzhi-visumbāṇi mukil.<sup>1</sup> Aṛaiyar then went round the holy streets of Srīrangam with music, chanting the Tiru-viruttam and coming back to the monastrey, sang the finishing hymns. Then the eight vessels of holy milk &c, were emptied over the Sage's body, which was then adorned with Lord Ranga's gifts of garland, raiment and other things. They all then distributed among themselves as prasāda, the remnants of all that was offered to the sage, and earnestly gazed at his figure so as to distinctly retain it in their hearts for ever afterwards. They then threw themselves at the Sage's feet which they devoutly pressed against their eyes, hearts and heads, and now completely overcome, gave vent to their grief which they could not control, by torrents of tears trick-

<sup>1</sup> The bier of the Âryans.

<sup>1</sup> See our Lives of Āzhvārs

ling down their cheeks, and sent forth loud lamentations. The worthies of the place pressed round the mourners, and by kind words assuaged their grief. They then lifted the bier, the Sage seated in it, on to a stretcher (or litter), which they bore reverently on their shoulders, and carried in splendid procession in the streets, conches blowing, music discoursing, and men and women setting up a sacred dance. The Prabandhas were recited in the front, Veda-pârâyaṇa bringing up the rear. White cloths were laid in the streets in front of the procession, the members of which bore sugar-cane sticks in their hands, and carried bright vessels filled with water on their heads. As the procession wended its way, lîja flowers and scented powders were broadly showered over all, the vestal virgins of the sanctuary bearing torches aloft and leading. Châmaras (chowries) waved on either side, and white cloths were brandished in the air.<sup>1</sup> And to crown all, bugles and trumpets proclaimed as it were:—"The Great Sage Âlavandâr, the Defender of our Faith, has gone forth to Heaven." After thus peregrinating the Holy Streets, the Sage was carried to Tirukkaramban-turai, a spot close by the South bank of Coleroon (Kolladam) river in the North, and there purifying the spot with the unused water of the Sankarshana vessel (kept in reserve), all the sacramental ritual enjoined for Sanyâsins (monastic order)<sup>2</sup> was gone through punctiliously. The Sage was now duly installed in a cavern made in the ground. We shall leave the elders and dignitaries of the temple thus busy, and turn for a moment to events which were in the meantime transpiring in Kâncî.

---

<sup>1</sup> Cloth is folded at one end and held in the hand, the other end flourished in the air, producing a circle or the figure of an umbrella.

<sup>2</sup> Consult Fatidharma-Samucchaya by Yâdava

---

CHAPTER IX.

ĀLAVANDĀR AND RĀMĀNUJA.

We saw Mahâpūrṇa sent to invite Rāmānuja to Śrīraṅgam to join the holy fold of the Faithful. He duly reached Kāñchī, and delivered the message of his Āchārya to Kāñchī-pūrṇa, in whose holy company, he duly paid his devotions to Lord Varada-rāja; and taking the path leading to Śālan well,—from which Rāmānuja was bringing his customary water for the service of Lord Varada—he went on reciting his Āchārya Yāmuna's hymn:—

स्वभावाविकानवधिकातिशयेति त्वं नारायण त्वयि नम्यन्ति वैदिकः ।

ब्रह्माशिवश्शतमख परमस्वरडित्येतेपि यस्य महिमार्थविविषस्ते ॥ <sup>1</sup>

“Nārāyaṇa !, who, in Vedas versed, will dispute Thy Natural Greatness and Sovereignty vast ; for know they not that Brahmā, Śiva, Indra and celestials all, are but as drops of foam upon the Ocean of Thy Glory ?”

Rāmānuja was coming from the well and he heard this recitation. Not only was his attention arrested by it but was so struck with its beauty, sense, pathos and literacy,<sup>1</sup> that he anxiously inquired of the reciter (whom he did not know yet, of course) who was its worthy author. “Whose could such words be save my Āchārya Yāmuna-muni's ?” readily responded Mahâpūrṇa. “I must then visit this great soul,” said Rāmānuja. “I shall certainly take you to him,” replied Pūrṇa, jubilant at the success of his mission.

The tiru-manjapam (holy ablution) water, Rāmānuja duly delivered at the Shrine; and he submitted to Lord Varada his great wish to visit Yāmuna; and taking His leave as also Kāñchī-pūrṇa's, he immediately proceeded in Mahâ-pūrṇa's company and by forced marches, reached the Kāveri river. They saw from that distance great crowds gathered, and employed evidently in very serious work. “What is all the bustle about ?” asked Rāmānuja anxiously of some way-

<sup>1</sup> The beauty of this can only be realized by those who can understand the original. It suffers in the translation.

farers They said that Yâmunâ was no more. This news made Mahâ-pârna and Râmânuja distraught, and the shock prostrated them and struck them senseless. Recovering somewhat, they wept inconsolable tears, as all their plans were foiled, and hopes blasted. An irreparable loss, it was. Mahâpârna found Râmânuja disconsolate, and fearing worse consequences, forgot his own grief for the moment in order to pacify Râmânuja, in the manner, it is said, that 'in the sword-cut, the sorrow-sting is forgotten.' Recovering breath somewhat, he exhorted him thus: "Take heart, Râmânuja! knowest thou not the saying:—श्रेयासिबहुविघ्नानि भवन्तिमहतामपि। अश्रेयसिप्रपन्ने तु कापियाद्विचिन्ताकाः i.e. "Obstacles to virtue attack even great men; but when vice sets in, obstacles flee somewhere!" and raising Râmânuja in his arms, led him by the hand to where the Sage Yâmunâ was lying in state. "I have at least been able to see this," said Râmânuja, and drank as it were, with his eyes, the Holy Figure; but as he scanned it up and down, he discovered to his surprise that three of the five fingers of the right palm of the Sage were closed. He turned round to the assembly and questioned them about this strange sight. "We never marked this before, Sire," they said. Râmânuja reflected for an instant, and imagining that the Sage might have some ardent wish in his mind unsatisfied, which he probably so indicated, asked the bystanders if they were aware of any specific wishes of the Sage expressed to them at any time in the course of his religious talks with them. "We are not particularly aware of any such directly," they said; "but indirectly we know that he often used to say that he wished very much to see three things perpetuated. Firstly, gratitude must be shown to the memory of Krishna-Vyâsa and Parâsara. Secondly, a tribute of love should be paid to St. Nammâzhvâr. And thirdly, Vyâsa-Sûtras or Brahma-Sûtras must be commented on to bring out the real Viśishtâdvaita sense contained in them." <sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Viśishtâdvaita means, organic monism; in other words,—if it may be so called,—a Trinity in Unity. Read our Bhagavadgītâ with Râmâ-

nuja's commentaries, Pro. M. Rāṅgācārya's Srī-Bhāṣya, and Dr. Thibaut's Introduction to Vedānta-Sûtras, Śaṅkara bhāṣya.

Râmânûja heard this and said :—" O Holy Sage," addressing his Figure, "if this is thy mind, I promise I shall carry it out, provided I have the health, provided thy grace is on me, and provided God grants my prayers." No sooner this was said than the three bent fingers of the Sage opened out, as if to say : 'aye' ! The whole assembly was witness to this miracle, and in one voice they all declared :—" Sire, doubt not that the Sage's grace is fully on you ; the very power and glory of his spirit will enter into you ; you are the next fit successor to him for the evangelical work of our Faith. We all anoint you here for the task." Râmânûja lovingly and steadily gazed at the Holy Figure of the Sage, and contemplating Him to his fill, pressed His feet to his heart and eyes, and bathing in the river—as the last service rendered to the departed—took leave of Mahâ-Pûrṇa and started immediately back for Kâncî, not caring to visit Lord Ranga, on account of the sore disappointment which had been caused. It is chronicled of Râmânûja that he often used to express to his holy assembly that if he had but been permitted for one single day to be in the living company of Śrî Yâmunā, he would have constructed a staircase to Heaven and procured free admission to all thereto.

The magnates of the place then did the remaining part of the interment, conducted with due obsequial liturgy and in due course raised a cenotaph (brindāvanam)<sup>1</sup> and mantapam<sup>2</sup> over the site. Memorial verses were thus sung :—

श्रीराममिश्रसच्छिष्यं बन्देत्त्वार्यकोविदं ।

वादादवाप्तराज्याद्यो विरक्तोयामुनोऽभवत् ॥

यत्पदाम्भोरुह्म्यान विध्वस्ताशेषकल्मष ।

वस्तुतामुपयातोहं यामुनेयंमामितम् ॥

सिंहासनाशभव मीश्वरयोनिसिन्धुमुक्तामणि महितनाथमुनीन्द्रपौत्रम् ।

प्रज्ञाविशेषजलधिं प्रतिवादितुलज्ज्ञानिलं हृदय ! चिन्तय यामुनार्यम् ॥

<sup>1</sup> An ornamental short pedestal with a basil plant planted on top.

<sup>2</sup> A stone pavilion over (1).

CHAPTER X.

RÂMÂNUJA AND KÂNCĪ-PŪRṆA.

Râmânuja, with a heavy heart reached Kâncĭ, and recounted the events he had first witnessed, to Kâncĭ-pŭrṇa. Pŭrṇa mourned much over the loss of his Āchārya, aggravated by the thought that all the projects they had formed in their minds were thus frustrated; but reviving, comforted Râmânuja by saying—"Lord Varada is all-knowing and all-powerful. Let us submit to His will. He will make good our loss by appointing you in his stead, for our Faith." So saying, he conducted Śrī-chĭrṇa-paripŭlana,<sup>1</sup> and Tiru-v-adhyayana<sup>2</sup> for his Āchārya.

Râmânuja again employed himself as before in the Tiru-manjana<sup>3</sup> service to Lord Varada, and as friendship and respect for Kâncĭ pŭrṇa deepened, he found much spiritual worth in this staunch devotee of Lord Varada. One day, Râmânuja earnestly begged of him to become the sponsor for his soul. "Come, Holy Râmânuja!" said Pŭrṇa, "You desire this of me, because you think I am worthy of such position, but know that I am an unworthy non-entity, whom Lord Varada has perhaps chosen to think of as some body. And you are evidently intent on acting on the principle:—

किमप्यत्राभिजायन्ते योगिनस्सर्वयोनिषु।

प्रत्यक्षितात्मनायाना नैवाचिन्त्यंकुलादिकम् ॥<sup>4</sup>

'Yogis (or spiritual men) are born among all castes; and no caste-odious shall hold in their cases, for they have seen their souls' Lord

This dictum holds good as regards our soul-relation, but it cannot be applied as regards our external conditions of birth and social polity as ordained by the Scriptures (Vedas).

<sup>1</sup> The ceremony of the turmeric-powder (vide p. 53), applied to the face.

<sup>2</sup> The funeral ceremonies of the Śrī-vaishnavas, when the Prabandhas are recited antiphonally, and a great feast is given.

<sup>3</sup> Carrying water-pots for ablution-ceremony to the Deity.

<sup>4</sup> Bhavadr̥ṣya-Samhitā, I, 44.

You shall not therefore externally profess to me bonds which militates against the typical social system of Varna<sup>1</sup> and Āsrama.<sup>2</sup> Yours is Brāhmaṇa-body and mine a Vaiśya-body, and as long as these last, we must respect temporary distinctions for the sake of the safety of our social fabric, which we cannot violate without injury.

<sup>2</sup> Varna=the four typical castes of Brāhmaṇa, Kṣatriya, Vaiśya and Sūdra. Āsrama=the four typical orders of life, viz., Brahmacharya (Student), Grihastha (householder), Vānaprastha (anchorite), and Sannyasa (monastic). A recent speech by Mr. N. N. Ghose at the Hare Anniversary Meeting (1904) is important as bearing on the vexed question of caste in India, which the Christian will not understand. He said:—"The division into castes cannot be understood by any one who does not realise that all Hindu institutions were inspired by one principle. It was not political expediency, not social convenience, not the happiness of the greatest number, not the development of fighting capacity. Material good was a subordinate end. The ruling principle was the spiritual evolution of man, the perfection of character, realisation of the self. For the purposes of spiritual evolution, a segregation of classes and occupations was considered necessary. The Brāhmins, for instance, were to be devoted to religious work and meditation and the function of teaching, and so on with other castes. It was no mere division of labour that was thus accomplished. It was an institution meant to prevent the spiritual degradation of men by the mixing up of finer and coarser spiritual natures. The four leading castes were marked off from each other by characteristics that could not be mistaken. The division was not arbitrary. All experience shows that men are not equally endowed on the spiritual side. Then it has to be remembered that the law of Karma was one of the root conceptions of the caste-system. Men were born into a particular caste by their Karma of a previous life. Men of lower castes could go up to the higher in another life if they had made spiritual progress enough in this life. No mere intellectual qualifications or material conditions would raise a man to a higher caste. Each man was born into the caste for which he was destined by his own susceptibilities. There was room enough for advancement and usefulness within the limits of his own caste. But he was not to be permitted to spoil his own breed by marrying in a lower spiritual plane, or spoil the breed of a higher caste by marrying on a higher plane. Modern life may make it difficult or impossible to carry out these ideas. But in them is to be found the interpretation of an ancient system which has puzzled and provoked men whose ideals are different from those of our ancient ancestors. Not muscles and intellect, not happiness, not political ascendancy, but spiritual perfection and purity were the only end." The warning voice against promiscuous intercourse and admixture of castes is found in the Bhagavad-Gītā I, 40 to 44; which may be read by all the devotees of this Holy Bible, and laid to heart before venturing to anathematize the caste-institution of India.

Râmânuja admitted the legality and expediency of the caste system, and yet he felt it ought to be disregarded in special cases where such spiritually advanced souls as Kâñchi-pûrṇa's were concerned. He therefore resolved the next day to invite Pûrṇa to his house for a repast. "Accept, Sire, an entertainment in my hut," prayed Râmânuja. "Most gratefully", said Pûrṇa, not to disappoint him. Râmânuja was rejoiced at the prospect of obtaining the remnants of food eaten by a spiritual elder, albeit he belong to a low class in society. Going home, he ordered his wife to prepare a sumptuous meal for a distinguished guest. And he himself bathed, performed all the ceremonies ordained for the householder, carried the daily-service-water to Lord Varada, and performing worship to his household Lord, also Varada, left home to bring his guest to his door. He went by the South Street, and turned West towards the retreat of Pûrṇa. But Pûrṇa had already left his place, taken another direction, prayed to Lord Varada as usual, and doing his daily services there, had proceeded to the cottage of Râmânuja. Here, not finding him, he begged the wife to give him food immediately as he had to return to the Temple for urgent service. She did so, and he left. She then pushed away the leaf, from which Pûrṇa had eaten, by means of a stick, purified the place with water and cowdung and considering herself impure by this act, bathed again. Râmânuja finding Pûrṇa absent from his cloister had retraced his steps to his hut, and finding that his wife had bathed for a second time, asked her why? She said :—"Sire, your Ṣāttāda (non-Brāhman) guest came and having eaten is gone. Being a low caste man, I have purified the place where he ate, and have myself bathed." "Ignorant woman!" he cried in anger "what hast thou done! How thou hast frustrated my plans!"

"What shall I do next?" Râmânuja pondered, "what I had wished has failed. Perhaps it is God's will that I should not violate caste restrictions even in special cases. Be it so." And he again betook himself to Pûrṇa's cloister "Sire! pardon me for constraining you to do a thing against your will, but now do me another favour. I have a few doubts in my mind. I beg of you to have them solved by Lord Varada, whose beloved worshipper you are." "Willingly I shall submit them to Him," he promised Rāmānuja. That night, when all the formal duties of the temple were over, Mahāpūrṇa stood before Lord Varada in silent contemplation, hands folded. "I think thou hast something to ask of me," Lord Varada said. "Yes, Most High! Rāmānuja has a few doubts, which he has asked me to submit to you and obtain answers,—some doubts, he has not told me what." "I know them," said Varada, "he is asking me these doubts, in the manner I myself once asked Sāndīpani<sup>1</sup> for knowledge. He knows the sweets of God-service by birth-right, and knows my will and acts up to it.* He has learnt many things and in many quarters. Now he has six doubts in his mind. Here are the six answers thereto.—

1. I am the Supreme Truth (para-tatvam),
2. I and souls are different (bheda),
3. By faith shall men reach Me, their salvation.
4. Thought of Me at time of death (antīma-smṛiti) is not compulsory (on My faithful),
5. Release from bondage (moksha) follows immediately on death (of body),
6. Choose Mahāpūrṇa for your Āchārya.<sup>2</sup>

Kānchī-pūrṇa reverently received this message and withdrew. The next morning, he hailed Rāmānuja with intense joy and communicated to him the divine message. "Were these your doubts, Sire!" he asked. "Yes, your Holiness I prostrate to you for it most heartily," said Rāmānuja. Pūrṇa was struck by this strange coincidence, and henceforth, (suiting the action to the word) looked upon Rāmānuja as the destined Saviour.

<sup>1</sup> Read Krishnāvātāra in Vishnu-purāṇa.

<sup>2</sup> This is put in a verse thus :—

(1) ब्रह्मेवपरंतत्वं (2) दर्शनं भेदमेव च ।
 (3) उपायेषु प्रपत्तिस्स्यात् (4) अन्तिमस्मृतिवर्जितम् ।
 (5) देहावसाने मोक्षं च (6) महापूर्णे समाश्रय ॥

CHAPTER XI.

RÂMÂNUJA'S CALL TO SRÎRANGAM.

Leaving Râmânuja at Kâncî for a while, we shall turn back to Srîrangam. The Faithful of the place felt now a great blank amongst themselves and in their hearts, after the passing away of Âlavandâr, their Spiritual Guide. How to fill up this vacancy, was their haunting thought. They resorted to Mahâpûrṇa and prayed to him to devise proper means for a fit successor. Mahâpûrṇa looked at them and said:—"Forget ye the past signs given us? Did not Âlavandâr himself, while he was in Kâncî, point out Râmânuja to us as his successor? Do ye not remember the miracle of the closed fingers of that Sage, opening at his utterance? Râmânuja then is our successor. Our Âchârya could not have been mistaken in his wise selection." "Well said, well said," cried the whole community, "we pray to you, Sire, to bestow your serious thought on this matter, kindly seek out Râmânuja and prepare him for his high office, and conduct him hither, to Srîrangam." Mahâpûrṇa gladly assented, and immediately made preparations to start. His wife was to accompany him. He went to Lord Ranga, and obtaining his leave to proceed on the holy errand left Srîrangam, and reached by rapid marches Madhurântakam (near Kâuchî), and there stopped for the day in the Shrine of Ēri-kîtta-perumāl, or He who protects the tank.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> This tank is noted as under the special protection of the Local Deity, Sri-Râma, and hence He is called the "Tank-Guard." Even recently, a story is thus told:—"The incident to be related happened about 25 years ago, at Madhurântakam, a small town, a few miles to the south of Madras. Those were the days of John Company, and a Collector of the name of Mr. Price ruled the district of Chingalpet, of which Madhurântakam is a Taluk. Soon after he came to his Office, he had to superintend certain repairs in the big reservoir of the place, which was looked to by many a village around, for the watering of their green fields.

Its storage capacity was immense, and every year, after the copious rainfall, the vast volume of water would wash away the Kalin-gal (waste-wei) on the rough, stone-built outlet of the tank, thus defying every effort to find the needful element to the required quantity. More than once during his regime, Mr. Price re-built the thing stronger than of old, as he thought, but all to no purpose; the next rains would mercilessly laugh away the nascent structure.

Râmânuja also had in the meantime resolved to proceed to Srîrangam and accept Mahâpârna his Âchûrya for having been

While this was the case here, the Collector happened to visit the interior of the town, accompanied by the Tahsildar and other subordinates. While approaching the small, neat-looking town-pond in the middle, he saw an old, venerable-looking temple of modest dimensions, situated to the west of it. When he came before its front, he stopped, and knowing the deep conservation of his subjects in matters religious, he asked his Tahsildar whether he might venture in. By this time, many Brâhmanas that were inside the shrine, knowing that the great Collector Sahib was waiting outside, rushed out and seeing that he wanted to come in, told him that "his Honor need not fear any objection to enter the outer precincts of the temple." The Collector, glad of the concession granted, entered in with his men with an amused smile. What a place of worship! How different from the ones he was accustomed to! Instead of the "long-drawn aisles" and "fretted vaults" the magnificently wrought pillars and ravishingly stained windows of his splendid abbeys and churches, he sees before him a humble edifice of stones, imposing only by its great age, evidenced by the hoary moss-grown parapet and the half-crumbing cupola. The structure is a pretty large parallelogram, a third of it intercepted to form the inner "holy of holies," while the rest is vacant, the roof upheld by stone-pillars. Right against the entrance is the invariable Dhaya-stambham or the flag-staff, a huge timber raised perpendicularly, with rough ornamentations thereon. Observing all this in a few minutes, the kind Officer turned to the left of the main building, into the open clearing about 50 feet broad that runs round the sanctuary. At the end of it there stood another small building, and in front of it many newly-hewn stones and slabs were gathered, thus showing some construction was on hand. The Officer, observing this, turned round on the priests, when they hastened to explain that they had wanted to enlarge the Devi's Shrine, but that funds falling low, they had to stop work. Then another began to expatiate on the great merits of their Janaki-Devi (Râma's Queen), how she chased away sorrow, poured plenty on all, and was ever solicitous for her devotees; gracious—"hold", cried the Englishman smiling, "if, as you say, your Devi is all that is ascribed to her, let me propose here one thing. I am very much put out by the constant collapses of your great tank's Kalingal. Even now it is being rebuilt. If this would stand the rush of the next showers, then I should attribute it certainly to your Devi, and I myself will build Her the needed shrine. If it happens otherwise, then you all should allow that She does not deserve the encomiums you heap on her." Astonished beyond bounds, that even thus half in play, their Sircar Lord should condescend to notice their Dêvi, and half-doubting if all this were not a pleasant railery on the part of their ruler, "agreed," cried they, merely to put an end to the colloquy. Mr. Price passed out * * * * *. A few months passed. The new outlet was built and finished. The rainy season began, and it began in earnest. Great masses of clouds canopied the land, and poured unintermittent showers on the terrified earth below. Tanks, ponds, rivers, all conceivable hollows were glutted, and miles around the land was inundated so commanded by Lord Varada. Taking leave of Him and Kâñchî-pûrṇa, he arrived at Madhurântakam. They met.

---

---

forming local seas, and all living beings shut themselves into their homes and shivered.

Two days before this rain, Mr. Price came and camped at Madhurântakam, anxious to test the Kalingal's fate for the fourth time. He had not forgotten his speech at the temple a few months ago. Indeed long ago, occasional rumours had reached him through his menials, that the people at large believed that the oft-recurring danger to the lake was due to the disreputable lack of supervision of the temple-managers over its affairs. This was in part what induced him the other day to say the words he said, even though lightly. Well he was thinking of all this, as he was tossing on his bed on the third night of the storm. It was a tremendous downpour that day. Ever since noon there had been no intermission. News was brought to Mr. Price that evening that the big reservoir was nearly full. It was eleven at night. It must be overfull. Indeed a hoarse, thunderous noise as of the great rush of vast volumes of water reached his ears. He was sure it was the breaking up of the outlet. At twelve the storm's fury lessened. He could restrain his impatience no longer. He wanted to see how great the damage was. Year after year this work was proving futile; and a waste of money to the Government, a waste of lands of the ryots, besides danger to public security were the results. This year he had employed experts and great care had been bestowed in the work. He would go and see. Amidst all these, the small leaven of curiosity was working in him ament the promise made by the Brahmanas, of the Devi's protection. "Bah, what a fool I am," cried he, and started to the scene of turmoil. Many of his servants ran before him holding lamps and leading the way. All the camp clerks about him got up too and followed him out of respect. It is pitch dark. The deep noise of rolling waters smites their ears as they come nearer the bund. But it is that of the majestic roll of waters contained within bounds, and not that of giant masses dashing beyond control. Somewhat reassured, the Collector eagerly straining his eyes in the direction of the new built outlet, could descry a blue, ethereal radiance playing lambent above the Kalingal. He felt surprised and a little thrilled. He advanced and when near the place—what did he behold! He stopped short, his whole frame thrilled, and he was spell-bound. Large drops of sweat stood on his brow. Not master of himself then he threw down his umbrella, with one arm he swept his hat off, and in the wet, oozy ground overrun with pools of water, he suddenly fell on his knees, and prayed, fervently and long all the time not removing his eyes from the place. His servants observing the sudden action of their master were thunderstruck. They thought he was suddenly gone mad. They rushed to him, throwing off their fear, to raise him. He got up and cried out: "Don't you see; see, see, see there, you idiots! Why do you stare at me so? Don't you see those glorious, transcendent beings standing there, on either side of the Kalingal with drawn arrows? How splendid they are? What magnificently proportioned men! How luminous their faces! They smile at—, Oh, they have vanished."

Rāmānuja was thrilled with joy and surprise at this unexpected meeting. He exclaimed:—"O my heart! seest thou how thy desire has met thee?" and prostrated before Mahāpūrṇa. Mahāpūrṇa was equally overjoyed at finding that his mission was so soon and so readily to be fulfilled, and raised Rāmānuja, fondly holding him to his breast. "Here and now," prayed Rāmānuja, "admit me as your disciple and teach me all that is good for my soul" Mahāpūrṇa said: "So near are we to the Holy Hastigiri"<sup>1</sup>, where Lord Varada resides, we shall go there for the initiation you so much desire." "No, Sire, not a moment is to be lost," said Rāmānuja, "is not the example of our Yāmunaçhārya still fresh, viz., his having breathed his last just when I was about to see him? This is a warning against waste of time. Are not our lives here of lightning duration?" So saying, he dropped at his feet again. Pūrṇa raised him up

(Note from page 64—contd.)

The truth dawned after all on the men. How could it be otherwise? They were Hindus, the time, place, the fact of the Collector's wager with the Brāhmanas, all combined to flash on them the truth! The Englishman has seen the blessed vision of glorious Rāma and Lakshmana, espousing the Devi's cause; "Jai, Jai, Sita-Rāma" cried they; "our Lord hath seen the vision." And so crying, they rushed into the sleeping town. The inhabitants awoke. "What devil's riot is this?" cry they. Then the fact becomes known. And all, crying in a body, "Jai, Jai, Sita-Rāma," rush to the Collector's camp. There he is seated in the front, bright light before him. He seems composed now. Grave and dignified he looks. Some of the important people that throng to him, he receives and makes them sit. "Gentlemen," says he, "why come in this night here, and why so much excitement? The outlet is not broken, nor will it ever be. I solemnly tell you I have received a lesson to night, that I will never forget. I always more or less believed that God was not the monopoly of the Christian Church. I am sure of it now. So do you all go to your homes. Early in the morning shall the Devi's temple begin to rise."

So said he and dismissed them. The temple was built, and now in its front it has engraved on it on a stone, how it was built by Mr. Thomas Price, Collector, in the year 1884(?).—And there are grey beards now, who talk of it solemnly of an evening, from one of whom the writer learnt it. [K. E. Central Hindu College Magazine, p. 173 ff. Vol. IV. 1904].

The following inscription appears on the stone beam of the Devi's Temple in Tamil — Indu daruman Kumpini jāgīr Kalekṭar Lionel Price durai avergaladu (Collector Lionel Price) and another inscription is near the waste weir. [Read the kindly letter to me dated 13th October 1904, by Mr. P. Seshagiri Row, Tahsildar of Madhurāntakam.]

<sup>1</sup> Kānchi, (Conjeveram).

Râmânuja led his Guru Mahâpûrṇa and his consort to his house, and accommodated them in the upper story, providing all other comforts necessary. For six months, Râmânuja sat at the feet of his Guru, and received from him important lessons on the Drâvida Scriptures and other Mystery-lore of the S̃rî-vaishṇava Faith.

On a certain morning two S̃rî-vaishṇavas came to Râmânuja, and did him the service of anointing with oil. They asked for food as they were hungry. Râmânuja inquired of his wife, if she had any food remaining from over-night. "No, not so much as a grain of it," she said; but Râmânuja suspected her sincerity, and bidding her go on other business, entered into the cook-room and examined the vessels, and lo, he found food hidden away. He called his wife and angrily spoke to her thus:—"Art thou capable of this, that when hungry souls are waiting at the door, thou liest? Is there worse meanness than, in this wise, refusing food to those who come in dire need? And a lie added to the meanness! Oh, sin!"

On another day, Râmânuja was out for his morning ablutions. His wife and the Guru's wife met at a well for drawing water. An altercation ensued between them as to the comparative purity of the pots they held. Pûrṇa was observing this. As soon as his wife returned home, he thought it wise to pack up immediately and actually left Kâñchi for S̃rîraṅgam, after soundly chastising his wife for the unpleasant occurrence, of which he held her to be the cause. Râmânuja returned home, and as usual went to visit his Guru, but he found him not. He asked the people about the place to account for his sudden absence. They said:—"Sire, your lady and your Guru's lady had a quarrel near the well over a pot. The Guru took his wife to task for giving occasion for this, and thinking that if he stayed longer under your roof, her conduct might again give rise to unpleasantness, he considered it expedient to leave the place forthwith. Râmânuja was white with rage on hearing this, and recovering, addressed his wife thus:—"Thrice art thou sinner, base woman! My Guru Kâñchîpûrṇa came and took his food under my roof in my absence, and thou tookest the very leaf from which he ate as unholy and polluting. This was thy first guilt. Hungry souls came craving for food. Thou didst deny it and thou didst lie. This was thy second guilt. And now thou hadst had the audacity to pick a most unseemly quarrel with my venerable teacher's consort. This is thy third and crowning crime. No more art thou fit to remain with me. Thou art a worldly woman, blind to spiritual interests. Take all this money, for that is thy meet share. That is the stuff that well suits a shrew and a scold like thee.<sup>1</sup> Well do the Sâstras say:—"Woman is at the bottom of all crime."<sup>2</sup> They further declare:—"When house-keeping suits not, enter the monastery"<sup>3</sup>; for that is the true house where strangers and guests find a ready welcome; but thou hast defiled my roof by thy unworthy conduct offensive to my sense of propriety and decency. It is meet therefore that thou shouldst return to where thou camest from." So saying he swiftly despatched her to her parents' abode

"This world is hateful. Indeed, I must abjure all concern with it," thus did Râmānuja seriously reflect. It is said:—"Bathe in the holy pond called Ananta-saras, shadowed by the cupola of the Holy Temple, resolving that nothing in the world bestows real bliss. All sins shall depart. Seek Lord Varada as the Refuge; and one shall gain the blessed regions of Vishṇu."<sup>4</sup> And so Râmānuja bathed in the Ananta-pond, and resolved to become a Sanyâsin. It is laid down: "One shall receive the holy order of the Sanyâsin either from a mendicant Sanyâsin or from God direct."<sup>5</sup> And thus resolving

<sup>1</sup> Cp. Yājñavalkya and his two wives in the Brihadâraṇya: Up.

<sup>2</sup> पापानामाकरंभियः [Garuḍa-Purāṇa]. These incidents show how Râmānuja was against caste-pride.

<sup>3</sup> "Illai-am-allel tura-v-aram."

<sup>4</sup> अनन्तसरसिस्नान्त्वा विमानच्छाययान्विते ।

विमुक्तस्सर्वपापेभ्यो विष्णुलोकंसगच्छति ॥

सम्ब्रह्मागाह्येतार्ये विगाह्यगतकिल्बिषः ।

निरस्तेतरभोगाशो वरदं शरङ्गगत ॥ [Brâhṃe, Hâstîgiri-Mâhâtmya, 15-23 ff]

<sup>5</sup> यथोक्तकारिणं भिक्षुं भगवन्तं वा [Yati-dharma samucchaya].

Râmânuja betook himself to Varada, and there prostrating before Him, prayed thus: "O Granter of boons! Warder of death! Bestower of the Land of the Angels! I have seen enough of all the varieties of worldly delusions, fathers and mothers, wives and children and all worldly goods. I feel sure that these ties block one's way to Thee, Thine and Spiritual Preceptors. I value them not; I value Thee and Thy Holy Blessed feet alone. Grant me deliverance from those and service to these. Invest me therefore with all the insignia of the Vaishṇava ascetic: the Triple-staff, the Holy-thread, the Under-cloth, the Loin-cloth, the Upper-cloth and the begging hoop (or rope-swing for receiving alms)<sup>1</sup>" So did Râmânuja supplicate. Lord Varada was pleased, and through His official agent (archaka), He was pleased to grant his prayers, and gave him from that day the name of Râmânuja-muni. "My own Râmânuja, thou shalt don the robe of the Sanyâsim and serve Me", was the command given through Kâncî-pûrṇa. Receiving this command in due humility, Râmânuja retired and became a Sanyâsin from that day.

<sup>1</sup> त्रिदण्डवैष्णवीलङ्गं विप्राशामुक्तिसाधनं ।

निर्माणसर्वधर्माणां मितिवेदानुशासनम् ॥

त्रिदण्डमुपवीतञ्च वास कौपीनवेष्टनम् ।

शिव्यंकवचमित्येतत् बिभृयाद्यावदायुषम् ॥ [Yati-dharma-samucchaya].

CHAPTER XII.

RÂMÂNUJA'S CHIEF DISCIPLES, &amp;c.

So Râmânuja had now weaned himself from the world. The discipline and daily routine ordained for monastics, he went through punctiliously; and was glad within himself to find that Yâmunâchârya's eyes of grace, which had fallen on him, had wrought wonderful results in removing all obstacles in the way of serving God alone, and in causing all conveniences for leading such a life. It was time now to think how best to carry out the (post-mortal) wishes of that pioneer-sage of the Faith, Śrî Yâmuna. Alone, he could not accomplish it; he wanted a competent colleague. He could think of no one better fitted than Govinda-Bhaṭṭa, who had all the threefold qualifications of fidelity (to him), abdication (of the world), and enthusiastic faith (for spiritual science). But he had turned an arrant Śaiva, a zealot in Śiva's service at Kâlâhasti as already related. Which saint was there to show him that the palm which touched the linga was really stinking? Who would show him that there was the One God whom Scriptures declared as: "All-scent and All-savour?"<sup>1</sup> So he mused, and his thoughts lighted on Tirumâlai-Nambi (Śrî-saila-Pûṇa), the venerable worshipper of Venkatesa at Tirupati, learned in the Vedas, versed in the nectareous Prabandhas, and otherwise possessing spiritual qualities calculated to influence men of Govinda's stamp and redeem them from their wrong ways. He despatched a confidential Śrî Vaiṣṇava accordingly to Nambi, (Pûṇa); and to deliver to him a message thus:—"Holy sire! your nephew Vatta-maṇi Govinda-Bhaṭṭa was my school-mate. Influenced by evil associations, his mind went wrong. He is now lost in the thick tangle of the Kâlâhasti-wilderness. I pray you for my sake to extend your grace to him; and redeem him to your blessed feet."

In the meanwhile, Kûrattâzhvân, called Tirumaru-mârban of the Hârîta-family, and Mudali-y-andân of the Kandâḍai-family, heard of Râmânuja having joined the monastic order.

<sup>1</sup> सर्वगन्धस्सर्वरस [Chh : Up. III 14. 2].

They were rejoiced and forthwith proceeding to Kâncî, fell at his feet and prayed that they may be taken into the Srî-Vaishṇava fold by the sacrament of Pancha-samskāra &c. Râmanuja welcomed them, and ordained them as they desired. And as stated in: "After receiving the mantra, the Dvija shall worship his Āchārya, and in all purity ever remain implicitly in his service,"<sup>1</sup> they remained devoted to Râmanuja. (In the sequel, we shall use the Sanskrit names of these disciples, viz, Kûranātha or Kûresa for Kûrattāzhvân, and Dāṣarathi<sup>2</sup> for Mudali-y-āndân) A coterie of pupils were thus gathering round the future Pontiff of the Vaishṇava Church.

As to Yādava-prakāśa, a new chapter in his life was about to open. For his mother was a good woman. She was a frequent visitor to Lord Varada; and had won the good graces of Sage Kâncî-pûṇa. She had friendly conversation often too with Râmanuja. All these forces combined to mould her disposition for the New Faith; and at last made her to wish that her son Yādava had also belonged to this band. With this wish strong in her, she was one day mounting the steps to Lord Varada's Shrine, when she overheard some one ejaculating: "so be it." She construed this to be good augury for her; and on returning home informed her son of what had happened, and exhorted him to give up his single staff of the advaitin and wear, like Râmanuja, the triple-staff, sacred thread, and śikhā (tuft of hair on the head), thereby embracing the Vaishṇava faith. For a long time, Yādava had begun to doubt the soundness of advaitism. Râmanuja's reasonable and decent interpretations of Vedic texts as against his own, were working strongly in his mind; and, of the greatness of Râmanuja himself, the Brahma-rakṣas, or the spirit which had possessed the princess, had clearly proved. The divine succour which God, disguised as Râma, had rendered to Râmanuja, whom he had beguiled on the sanctimonious pretext of a Kâśî-pilgrimage, and the

<sup>1</sup> अर्धतन्त्रमाचार्यं पूजयेच्छक्तितो द्विज ।

आचार्यधीनवृत्तिस्तु यावज्जीवं सदा शुचिः ॥ [Sātvata Samhitā :].

<sup>2</sup> See 30, Hierarchic Table in our Lives of Āchāryas.

Dāṣarathi is nephew (on sister's side) to Râmanuja.

sincere exhortations of his own mother to boot, had further all contributed to dispose his heart. There he was converted, but, "Mother" he said, "as a monk of the advaita-persuasion, I had divested myself of the tuft and holy thread (Yajnopavīta); to wear them again, a penance has to be performed by me; and that is laid down to be a journey round the world. I am old and unfit for such a task. Indeed I know not how to go" Yādaava was harrowed by these thoughts, day after day. But one night he had a dream. The Lord Varada appeared and said:—There is no need to go round the world, Yādaava! That is done by going round our Rāmānuja. Do it then and bear the insignia of the New Faith which he may present to you." Yādaava woke but had yet no faith in the dream. So he betook himself to Kāñchī-pūrṇa, and begged of him to consult Lord Varada—Pūrṇa being a favourite votary of Him—as to some matters agitating his mind. That same night, Kāñchī-Pūrṇa submitted to Lord Varada, Yādaava's petition. "I know it all," said Lord Varada. "His mother had already persuaded him to become a three-staffed Sanyāsin, but a doubt as to how it was possible to amend the past by bhūṭ-pradakṣiṇa, preyed upon his mind and I have by a dream quieted him by suggesting that instead, he need but go round Rāmānuja. Being a dream as it was, he lacks faith and refers it to thee again." The following morning, Pūrṇa delivered this message to Yādaava, who was now satisfied. Straightway he went to Rāmānuja, and asking his forgiveness for all the past, begged to be ordained as a monk and admitted to the New Faith. "But propitiation before conversion is demanded by our Laws, and that in this case is circumambulating the world once," said Rāmānuja. "Enough to go round thee, sire, so commandeth Lord Varada," explained Yādaava penitently, and putting the same in execution without waiting for a reply, stood before Rāmānuja with folded hands. Kūresa and Dāṣarathi, the new disciples, watched these events in infinite wonderment and exclaimed:—"If some reach God by love, others reach Him by hate as well?"<sup>1</sup> 'May he join our holy band.'<sup>1</sup> Râmânuja was mightily pleased at the valuable adherent won to his cause, made Yâdava undergo all the sacraments for the Brâhmaṇa over again, such as Chaula and Upaṇayana, invested him with the triple-staff, &c., and named him Govinda-jîya, stamped him with the holy symbols of Ṣaṅkha and Chakra, gave him the Holy Mantra, and enjoined him to write a work on Yati-dharma<sup>2</sup> (or the Institutes of monks), showing the harmony that exists among various texts. Govinda-jîya accordingly wrote a work of eleven chapters,<sup>3</sup> each chapter treating of an aspect and submitted the same to Râmânuja. He read it and expressed his approval of the same. Not long however was Govinda-jîya spared to serve his Âchâryâ; for he soon after left the earth and drew himself away to the Great Beyond.

<sup>1</sup> कामाद्गोप्यो भयात्कंसः द्वेषाच्चैवाद्योनृपाः।

सम्बन्धाद्दृष्ट्यायस्त्रेहात यूयंभक्त्यावयन्तुप ॥ [Bhāgavata].

Kûresa and Dâsarathi were much attached to Râmânuja, who took them through a course of the Two Mîmâmsâs (the two Exegeses on the ritualistic and the contemplative Divisions of the Veda). While such studies were being prosecuted, the tidings travelled to Srîrangam of the assumption by Râmânuja of the Sanyâsin order, and other events rapidly succeeding it. Mahâpûrṇa and other disciples of Yâmunâchârya received the tidings with joy, and longed for Râmânuja's coming to Srîrangam, making it his permanent quarters. But they were helpless; and Râmânuja too had once before in grief and despair, returned from the place without even visiting Lord Ranga, being disappointed at the sudden death of Yâmunâ. So, they went in a body to Lord Ranga and petitioned to Him to prevail upon His Type at Kâñchî,—the Lord Varada—to spare Râmânuja for them. So a message from Lord Ranga, who granted their petition, was sent to Lord Varada. But a reply came to the effect:—"If it is possible for one to forego his love, I too

<sup>1</sup> तस्मात्त्रिप्रसंहास्माभिः स्तुल्योभवतुराद्यव ।

विभीषणोमहाप्राज्ञः सखित्वञ्चाभ्युपैतुनः ॥ [Râmâyana VI. 18. 38].

<sup>2</sup> Called Yati-dharma-Samucchaya.

<sup>3</sup> अधिकर्तृदशालिङ्गो प्रयोगोमुख . कर्मच ।

अहोरात्रक्रियाचारो लिङ्गधर्मगतिस्थितिः ॥

प्रायश्चित्तानिस्कार इत्येकादशपर्वकः ॥ [Op. Cit. I. 4-5.]

can part with my Rāmānuja.” On hearing this, Mahāpūrṇa and other worthies were much disconcerted, but after some deliberation, determined to depute an elder in person to approach Lord Varada and persuade Him by hymns to grant them Rāmānuja inasmuch as the Lord’s very name Varada meant: “Granter.” They besought accordingly Tiruvaranga-perumāl Aṛaiyar, the Venerable Elder of the place<sup>1</sup>, to march to Kānchī on their behalf, and so extol Lord Varada as to make Him condescend to grant them Rāmānuja. Aṛaiyar immediately left Srīrangam on this holy errand, after obtaining leave to do so from Lord Ranga. On his nearing Kānchī, his relative there by name Varantarum Perumāl Aṛaiyar met him and escorted him to the Holy City, and tended him under his roof as befitted a distinguished visitor. The next morning, in due fashion, Aṛaiyar proceeded to the Temple. Lord Varada had that day taken His august seat in the pavilion called Kacchikkū-vīṇittān, surrounded by the Holy Assembly; Kānchī-pūrṇa stationed before the Lord reverently doing his allotted service of fanning. Rāmānuja stood by his side devoutly uttering the Devanūja-Aṣṭaka hymn sung by Pūrṇa. Rāmānuja saw Aṛaiyar, went forward and received him most cordially. “May I be allowed to pay my obeisance to Lord Varada?” enquired Aṛaiyar. Pūrṇa led him to His august presence, in full Holy Council seated, and Aṛaiyar fell prostrate before Him, repeating Yāmuna’s verse - “Oh, when, O Strider of the Three Spheres, will Thy Lotus-Feet, decked with all the signs such as the discus, bedeck my head?”<sup>2</sup>. Rising, he was honored with tīrtha, prasāda and Śrī Śaṭhagopa. Aṛaiyar then, set to celestial music (devagāna), chanted a select number of the Lyrical Psalter of the Āzhvārs (Saints); and as he sang, danced and went into raptures.

“When His faithful sing and dance for joy, God Himself keeps time,” it is said. So, Lord Varada was pleased with the devotion of Gâyaka, and vouchsafed to Him all the honors belonging to His Shrine. "Why do I want these?" said Gâyaka, "my wish is not for these. Pray grant me a boon, as Thou art, O God, famous as the "Boon-Giver." And so saying, he continued his song and dance with more fervour. Pleased, Lord Varada spoke thus: "Ask, my beloved, anything, except Me and My Consorts." "Him, pray grant," readily replied Gâyaka, pointing to Râmânuja, who was close by. "Oh lost," exclaimed the Lord "I wish I had the forethought to include Râmânuja on the side of exceptions. However, son, except Râmânuja, ask for any other boon." "But," remonstrated Gâyaka, "dost Thou retract also like mortals? Are not Thy own words these: "Râma hath no two tongues"<sup>1</sup>? On hearing this, Lord Varada had no alternative but to reluctantly say:—"Well, we grant you Râmânuja; take him. And we bestow on him the title, Yatirâja." No sooner was this said, than almost convulsively Gâyaka grasped Râmânuja by the hand and said—"Proceed, Sire". Râmânuja said not a word. He fell prostrate before Lord Varada, and saying: "Thy will be done," he, immediately started, not even caring to enter his cloister. As he went, he merely ordered his pupils Kûreṣa and Dâsarathi to bring up his chapel image, Varada. Râmânuja thus followed Gâyaka to Sṛīrangam Kûreṣa after escorting Râmânuja some way, returned to Kâñchī, but Dâsarathi accompanied. Dâsarathi was Râmânuja's sister's son, but he was the only relative whom he retained.

<sup>1</sup> See Life of Yāmuna. He is also called Ranga-nātha-Gāyaka, (vide No. 22, Hierarchic Table to our Lives of Saints).

<sup>2</sup> कदापुनश्शङ्करयाङ्गकल्पकध्वजारविन्दकुशवजलाञ्छनम्।

विविक्रम त्वच्चरणाम्बुजद्वयं मदीयमूर्धनमलङ्करीयति ॥ [Stotra-ratna.]

Looking steadily towards Sṛīrangam, his future home—a home, the vestibule of the Eternal Home—with joy bounding in his heart, went Râmânuja. In due time the north branch (Kolladam = Coleroon) of the Kâveri, encircling the Holy Island of Sṛīrangam, was reached. Râmânuja tarried here to take a holy bath and deck his body with the twelve marks, consecrated by the Holy Names of Kêṣava and so forth. In the meanwhile, news had sped to Sṛīrangam of the arrival of the Holy Personage. Mahâpûrṇa and other disciples of Yâmunâchârya, the elders of the place, the monks and acolytes (śikṣagīs) and others were rejoiced at this good fortune, and proceeding in a body to the Temple, delivered the tidings to Lord Ranga. Thereupon His Command issued thus: "O, my faithful, march ye forth in full congregation, office-bearers and all men, laic and cleric, with all the holy paraphernalia of my Temple and every honor, to meet and receive my Râmânuja." The populace formed itself into a grand procession, which with music discoursing and flags flying, headed by Vishvaksena (= Sēnai-mudali),<sup>1</sup> streamed forth towards Kolladam even as the celestials and angels, headed by Cherubs and Seraphs<sup>2</sup>, go forth from the gates of Heaven to the shores of the Virajā<sup>3</sup> river, to meet and welcome the faithful, who have finished their pilgrimage on earth, and are reaching the portals of the Refulgent City of God. They met Râmânuja; and after mutual exchanges of religious courtesies, the procession turned towards Srīrangam. Thus led, Râmânuja crossed the river, neared the Tīrkoḍi rampart, and the Damodaran turret, where he laid himself at full length on the ground; then rising, he reverently threaded the Tirumalai-tanda-Perumāl Street, (beginning always from the east and turning to the west, by south = pradakṣhiṇā), and again he went round the inner Trivikraman-Street, reaching in due course the big sacrifice-altar (bali-pīṭha), where he prostrated himself again; then he went to the Mother's shrine, paying homage to Mother Srī-ranga-Nāyakī, the blessed Consort of Srī-Ranga; next the Chandrapushkarinī pond was reached, where he sipped the holy water; and then wheeling round, the next southern entrance was reached, guarded by Nāyanārs (gate-watchers), and all the Saints from St. Nammāzhvār downwards—who are called the Prospering Indolents<sup>4</sup>—were visited in order, not omitting the numerous other shrines dotted round the Temple. Next the

<sup>1</sup> द्विशरं नामिस्त्वत्ते द्विस्थापयति नाश्रितान्।

द्विर्दत्तान् चार्थिभ्यः रामो द्विर्नाभिभाषते ॥ [Râmâyana.]

<sup>1</sup> See 13. p. lviii, of Our Lives of Āzhvārs.

<sup>2</sup> These terms we appropriate, as our terms have no equivalents.

<sup>3</sup> This is the ultimate river-boundary between the material and the spiritual spheres, where all sins get washed; hence virajā.

<sup>4</sup> This is the phrase used in verse 38 of St. Tondarāḍi-p-poḍi's Tirumālai. It means the "Saints who are dead to the world, but alive to God.

courtyard called the Ani-y-arangan-Tiinumuttam was entered, where Râmânûja prostrated again, and wheeling round the inner corridor, loving eyes fixed on the Pranava-like vimâna, (the gold-covered cupola over the sanctum sanctorum), the shrine of Vishvaksena was reached, where making obeisance, he was now in the precincts of the central Father's shrine. In this place, which goes by the name of Azhagiya-manavûlan-tirumantapam, the Lord Ranga (the moveable Image called Namberudî) came forth in advance to meet Râmânûja, even as the Lord in Heaven leaves His Throne of Glory to go and embrace and welcome the souls who are saved and are arriving at the golden gates of Heaven. Râmânûja was thrilled with joy. Bliss possessed him. He fell down, rose, fell again and held his hands up, fell again, and rose; thus did he reverently pace up to the Holy of Holies, where supporting himself against the manâ-t-tûn pillar, he saw the blessed figure of Ranga reclining on His Ananta couch,<sup>1</sup> and rivetting His eyes on the Holy Figure, enjoyed the Blessed vision in the manner enjoyed by St. Tiruppânâzhvâr in his Amalan âdippirîn<sup>2</sup>; and recited in accents of bliss the Tiruppall-ânḍu of St. Peri-y-âzhvâr,<sup>3</sup> and the following bewitching verses of Yâmunâchârya :—

*Bow to Thee, Bow to Thee, beyond reach of word and thought ;
Bow to Thee, Bow to Thee, reachable by word and thought ;
Bow to Thee, Bow to Thee, Infinite in Riches ;
Bow to Thee, Bow to Thee, Infinite in Mercy.<sup>4</sup>
Know I not virtue, aye, blind to my soul,
Nor do I love Thy Holy Blessed Feet ;
Wayless and Goal-less, I, O Refuge !
Meekly seek and fall at Thy Holy Feet.<sup>5</sup>*

The Lord Ranga was enchanted with these outpourings of Râmânûja's heart, and was pleased to place on his head His

<sup>1</sup> This means " God, the cosmic Dramatist on the stage of Eternal Time." For symbolical explanation, refer to p. li. and lii of our Lives of Âshvârs.

<sup>2</sup> Read this Saint's Life in our Lives of Âshvârs.

<sup>3</sup> Read his life in our Lives of Âshvârs.

<sup>4</sup> Stotra-ratna, verse 21.

<sup>5</sup> Ibid, verse 22.

Blessed Feet,<sup>1</sup> which Râmânuja received in humility as the greatest honor and blessing conferred on a mortal; and stood transfixed with the thought that from that day onwards he had become one whose life was to be solely dedicated to the service of God. As he was thus ruminating, Lord Ranga (= Periya Perumâl, or Lord stationary resting on Serpent Sesha) spoke thus: "All the riches of our Kingdom here and of Our Upper Regions, are given to thee, and to thy followers. The title Uḷayavar<sup>2</sup> is conferred on thee. Take charge of Our household here, of which We appoint thee guardian and trustee, and manage all its affairs wisely." Râmânuja received the mandate humbly and turning to Mahâ-pûrṇa said:—"What blessings belong not to those who have trusted Âchâryas like you, Sire? To my spiritual connection with you, is due the extraordinary favour Lord Ranga has bestowed upon me this day." Pûrṇa said: "O noble pupil of mine, the prophecy of St. Nammâzhvâr, to which we were keenly looking forward, has this day come to pass. The prophecy is that contained in his verse: "O Men, learn that Kali will soon come to an end"<sup>3</sup>; and this is with reference to yourself. Pray then enter on your holy duties without further thought." Râmânuja obeyed, and assumed charge of his exalted position. Taking his seat in the Hall called the Periya Tirumandapam, he instituted searching enquiries as to whether the weights and measures used in the Śrī-bhaṇḍāra (stores) were correct; whether the flower<sup>4</sup>-service, sandal-paste<sup>5</sup> service, food<sup>6</sup>-service, light<sup>7</sup>-service, and all such services were all duly done; whether the Temple-servants were carefully selected and cared for; whether the public works<sup>8</sup> of the Shrine's noble structures were duly attended to; whether the flower gardens<sup>9</sup> attached to the Temple were properly tended and conserved; and whether the land<sup>10</sup> and other properties

<sup>1</sup> Called the Ṣaṭha-Gopa.

<sup>2</sup> Literally "He who has got," meaning "He who has been given the Kingdom of God, as his property."

<sup>3</sup> Tiru-vây-Mozhi. V. 2.

<sup>4</sup> Tirumâlai.

<sup>5</sup> Ṣattu-p-padi.

<sup>6</sup> Amudu-paḍi.

<sup>7</sup> Tiru-viḷakku.

<sup>8</sup> Tiru-maḍil-tiruppani.

<sup>9</sup> Tiru-v-ananda-vanam.

<sup>10</sup> Tiru-viḷaiyâtṭu-cchimai.

---

pertaining to the Temple were well looked after. And thus from day to day was Râmânuja engaged in restoring order and system in the vast concerns of the Temple. He picked out Akalanka-Nâtt-âzhvân,<sup>1</sup> and making him his disciple, set him over the Temple as his assistant; and saw to the strict and punctual discharge of all the ceremonial duties connected with the daily, fortnightly, monthly and yearly festivals of the shrine.

---

<sup>1</sup> His wife is Tripurâdevi, vide p. 2009. Vol. IV. 'Bhagavad-vishayam' (1st Telugu Edition.)

---

CHAPTER XIII.

KÛREṢA JOINING RÂMÂNUJA.

Kûreṣa having despatched Râmânuja, returned to Kâñchî. From here he went to his village Kûra, about three miles to the west of Kâñchî. Being the lord of this village and very rich, he was called Kûranâtha or Kûresa. He was as bounteous as rich. From morn till late in the night, the blind, lame, poor and disabled were freely served with food and clothing. One night, when the day's duties were over, the brass-made doors of his mansion were closed violently. This made such a ringing noise that it was heard at Kâñchî. Lord Varada's Consort Lakshmî questioned Him as to the cause of the noise. The Lord explained to Her the greatness of Kûresa. "Then I wish to see him," said She. Kâñchî-pûrṇa was commanded to go and fetch him. Pûrṇa duly came and was welcomed with every worship due to such a distinguished guest. Pûrṇa then disclosed the object of his mission, resulting from the deliberations which Varada and Lakshmî held on hearing the creaking of his brass doors. Kûreṣa was dismayed on hearing this. "What!" he cried, "a sinner like me, a wretch, a worm, to appear so big in the Lord's Eye. Crawling insect that I am! My doors to create disturbance in God's House! Pride hampers salvation; humility paves the way for it." So reflecting, Kûresa formed a resolution to forsake all and join Râmânuja at Sîrîrangam. He put his resolution into execution at once by abandoning all his riches, houses and lands,<sup>1</sup> which he gave away in charity to all that came, and bidding his wife Âṇḍâlamma give up every article dear to her without regret and accompany him, left Kûra.

Pûrṇa returned to Kâñchî, and recounted the extraordinary deeds of sacrifice following on repentance, and the departure, of Kûresa. Lord Varada was astonished at such

<sup>1</sup> Cp. "Sell all thou hast and give to the poor and follow me, and I will give you peace" [Matt. 19-21.]

"Give up all and follow Christ, &."

---

swift operation of His Grace on Kûresa's heart, and told his Consort: "Well, you have had your wish fulfilled now."

Kûresa was now well on his way. Without fear he trudged on. They were, wife and husband, threading their way through a thick forest, and night also fell over them. The wife, unaccustomed to travel in this manner, dreaded thieves in such forsaken tracts, and turning to her husband asked him trembling, whether there was no fear in such places. He quickly answered:—"Dear, if thou hast stuff anywhere hidden in your person, there is fear. Fish feed on water-worms. Fowls feed on land-worms. Death feeds on life. And so thieves feed on riches. I suspect, dear, thou hast something with thee, though I commanded thee to relinquish all behind." "Pardon me, lord," said Âṇḍāmma, "I have left all behind, but thinking you might need a cup to drink from, on your long journey, I secreted but a golden cup." So saying, she unfolded the vessel from her cloth, and shaking with fear, handed it to her husband. He took it and threw it away into the jungle, and said to his wife: "Now, lady, walk on. Thy fear has been cast out." Thus did this matchless pair travel on and in time reach Srîrangam. Râmanuja was jubilant at his arrival; and sent out his pupils to receive him with every mark of respect, and conduct him to his Maṭh. Râmanuja, on his approach, rose and, warmly enfolding him in his arms, welcomed him to Srîrangam, to himself, and to all the great work that jointly, they were destined to accomplish in the near future. Kûresa thus forsook his rich home and all at Kûra, and made Srîrangam henceforth his permanent residence, subsisting here by alms. Thus did a great and most important personage for the life-work of Râmanuja, join him. We shall leave him for a time and see how fared Govinda at Kâlahasti.

---

CHAPTER XIV.

GOVINDA'S CONVERSION.

A Śrī-vaishṇava had been despatched, it will be remembered, to Śrī-saila-Pūrṇa (= Tirumalai Nambi), to deliberate on the mode of reclaiming Govinda, who had accidentally become a Śaiva, and had been made the director of the Kālahasti-Temple. The messengers returned with a joyful countenance to Rāmānuja. Before they broke the tidings, Rāmānuja saw by his face there was success, and bade him recount what had taken place. He began thus —“Holy Sire, with your holy leave, I reached Tirupati in due time, and making obeisance to Pūrṇa, conveyed to him the intelligence you had entrusted me with. Pūrṇa was rejoiced to find that what he himself had contemplated doing with regard to Govinda, was Rāmānuja's wish as well, and that his own intention was thereby sweetened. So saying, he immediately started with a knot of followers, including myself. We reached Kālahasti, and Pūrṇa seated himself under a tree near the Temple-pond Uḷḷangai-Konaranda-Nāyanār<sup>1</sup> (= Govinda) came there with vessels to the pond in order to carry water for the ablution-ceremony of Śiva, all the time chanting songs of His praise. Pūrṇa said:—“What fruit will you get, by cold-bathing the Konrai-decked Thing?”<sup>2</sup> Govinda heard this, looked up in Pūrṇa's face, smiled and went his way. “This will do for once. Let God work upon his heart,” Pūrṇa exclaimed to himself, and returning to Tirupati, attended to his usual studies and teachings.

Śrī-saila-Pūrṇa now made another venture. He went to the same tree and pond as before in Kālahasti. Nāyanār (= Govinda) was coming as usual with vessels to fetch water. Pūrṇa thought he would try a plan even like the plans of God, who works without being seen, and is unknown by men as the Planner. To the world, God seems as if sleeping, but He is all wakeful. So reasoning within himself, Pūrṇa wrote his Guru Yāmuna's verse :

<sup>1</sup> This was the name he bore as a Śaiva. It means : “he who found the linga in his palm.” See Chapter VI.

<sup>2</sup> Meaning Śiva who is fond of konrai-flowers

Svâbhâvikanavadhikâ, &c. [See p. 55.]

on a piece of palm-leaf, and allowed it to lie in the path of Nâyanâr, who of course was unaware of the design. He came. The piece arrested his sight. He took it for curiosity, read it but threw it away and went on his errand. But as he was returning with his pots full, he felt an impulse to pick up the piece again, and read the contents once more deliberately. He did so and looked round. There we were seated under the tree, He came near and said:—"The wail has turned into verse,"<sup>1</sup> said Valmiki, and like him reflecting over his spontaneous utterance, I have been reflecting over the meaning of this chance-found strip. Did you, sire, throw it? Is this your property? "addressing Pârṇa. On this the following conversation ensued:—

Nâyanâr. Have you lost your property? <sup>2</sup>

Pârṇa: We cannot lose our property. Others only lose theirs (meaning, we cannot lose our God. You have lost our God).

N. Never mind that. How is it you are all assembled in one body (i.e., you are all belonging to one cult, and seem to pursue a peculiar path).

P. Well, we have been brought together, as various ways meet here (i.e., the Path to God we are pursuing is the One Path into which all other paths issue).

N. But is there a Path for those who stand aloof like you? (i.e., aloof-ness or isolation or Kaivalya is the state of souls which on the one hand have eschewed material fetters, but on the other hand have not recognized God. This isolation is what in modern days called the Æonic suspension of souls, equivalent to eternal damnation.).

<sup>1</sup> शोकश्लोकत्वमागतं [Râmâyana II. 40] i.e., Valmiki uttered a cry of distress when he saw a fowler killing an innocent curlew but Valmiki to his surprise found he had uttered a verse.

<sup>2</sup> The whole conversation has Tamil words having double meanings. We have tried to make it as clear as possible by parenthetical explanations.

P. We are not aloof in your sense. The aloof are those who have discarded their real property (God); but we hold our property (God) firm in our hands. We are thus God-sided (i.e., God-partisans) if you please.

N. Never mind this. Have you now come here to leave your relatives? (i.e., to leave more converts like me for Śiva).

P. No. We have come here to buy kine? (i.e., to reclaim or convert those who belong to the bull (kine)-riding God (Śiva)).

N. Is not the dust of kine said in the Śāstras to be sacred or sin-purifying? (hinting that Śiva's bull is thus a sacred animal, whose hoof-dust is purifying to all men).

P. No dust is sacred except it be beaten up by kine of the Sacred Land (of Viṣṇu)<sup>1</sup>, but not that beaten up from the unholy burning (or cremation) ground, where Śiva dwells.

N. Never mind that. What difference is there between horizontal and vertical? (i.e., is it not immaterial whether we paint our foreheads horizontally or vertically).

P. Yes, there is as much difference between as between beast (horizontal) and man (vertical)<sup>2</sup>.

N. I suppose, this is the language and cult of a New Style (i.e., a New Dispensation?)

P. Nothing new is ours. It is as old as time, and sanctioned by authority (Veda, &c.,) (i.e., our Vaiṣṇavism is not born to-day. It is as old as the Vedas)

N. But if we inquire into Sacred Authorities, it is found to embody all sorts of cults.

<sup>1</sup> Like Brindavana &c, the Holy Land of the Holy neat-heard Krishna.

<sup>2</sup> Beast walks horizontally, man walks erect. It is a significant fact that in all paintings and sculptures, where the Dev-āsura war, or war between Gods and Demons, is represented, marks horizontal (tiṛyak-punn-ḍra) are shown on the foreheads of Demons, and upright marks (Ādhra-pundra) on the foreheads of Gods.

P. Exactly. And that is the reason why you should fully inquire, dive into the very depths of knowledge as to what is the Highest Truth in the Universe; and diving, bring up the Pearl of truth from all the mud and ooze, (i.e., find out Nârâyana from all the tangled skein of the Vedas)

N. Nâyanâr thus was dumb-founded. He simply nodded his head, scanning Pûrṇa all the while from top to toe, and went his way with clear signs of serious thought in his heart visible in his countenance <sup>1</sup>

Pûrṇa now thought thus. "Yes, his heart has now quickened,<sup>2</sup> the rest is God's own work. I consign the troubled soul there to Him." So saying he returned to the Holy Hill (Tirumalai=Tirupati)."

Thus did the Srîvaishṇava narrate to Râmânuja the result of his mission to reclaim Govinda to Vaishṇavism. Râmânuja on hearing this, went into a paroxysm of joy, and turning to Dâsarathi and other disciples, said:—"Look, how our great Guru Yâmunâ's Holy voice has found its entry into Govinda's heart; and how Govinda played a burlesque and spoke to our Srî-saila-Pûrṇa thereon in sarcastic quibbles. And see how our Pûrṇa retorted to Govinda in the same clever sarcastic style. Being well versed in Śāstric lore, see how Govinda acknowledged Pûrṇa's significant sarcasms, and allowed himself to be beaten into silence. What a polemical victory? And hear me now expound to you the meaning of their cypher-repartee. I simply cite a number of authorities bearing on the question."

(1) "There are two things Kshara and Akshara. Kshara is all this being; Akshara is liberated souls. And different from these is Purushottama, Myself, the Person par excellence &c." [Bhagavad-Gītā, XV. 16 to 19].

<sup>1</sup> Readers are invited to the perusal of Bhagavadvishayam. Vol. IV or Tiru-vây-mozhi. Onrum-têrum.

<sup>2</sup> प्रसादमगमञ्चितम् [Sâtvata-Samhitâ]

<sup>3</sup> The reader must be satisfied with reading the citations merely. This is no place for expansion thereof.

(2) "He (Vishṇu) is the first of the Immortals, and Prior to them" [Prabandha].

(3) "The Soul of those who walk virtue's path" [Nāradya].

(4) "He is the Door to Salvation" [Prabandha].

(5) "Hardly one knows Me truly" [Gītā: VII-3].

(6) "I am Thine, and Thou art mine" [T. V. Mozhi, II-9-9].

(7) "He must be classed with beasts who has no knowledge (of God)." [Hitopadesa]<sup>1</sup>

(8) "How else will they spend their time, (if not by thinking of Vishṇu)?" [Periya-tiru-v-andīdi, v-86].

(9) "Those who wear vertical marks on their foreheads, &c., are Vaishṇavas" <sup>2</sup> [Sri-Bhagavata].

(10) "Sprinkle the Holy Dust of the feet of godly men" [T-vay-Mozhi, IV. 6-5].

(11) "All twice-born shall wear vertical marks" <sup>3</sup> [Yajnya-vaikya].

(12) "Vedas are the source of authority" <sup>4</sup> [Manu. II-6].

(13) "Sat, O Saumya, was in the beginning" <sup>5</sup> [Aitareya Up: VI-2].

(14) "Ātma, Saumya, was in the beginning" <sup>6</sup> [Aitareya Up: I-1].

<sup>1</sup> आहारनिद्राभयमैधुनानि तुल्यानि खल्वन्नसमस्तजन्तोः ।

ज्ञानाद्विशिष्टोद्दिनरूपरेभ्यो ज्ञानेन हीनरूपशुभिस्समानः ॥

<sup>2</sup> ये कण्ठलघ्नतुलसी नलिनाक्षमाला ये वाललाटफलके लसदूर्ध्वपुंड्राः ।

ये बाहुमूलपरिचिह्नित शङ्खचक्राः ते वैष्णवा भुवनमाशु पवित्रयन्ति ॥

<sup>3</sup> ऊर्ध्वपुंड्रं द्विजातीनाम्.

<sup>4</sup> वेदोऽखिलो धर्ममूलम्.

<sup>5</sup> सदेवसोम्येदमग्र आसीत्.

<sup>6</sup> आत्मावाद्देवेक एवाग्र आसीत्.

(15) Brahman, O Saumya, was in the beginning"<sup>1</sup> [Vâjasaṇeya: III-4].<sup>1</sup>

And if it be asked who is the Sat, the Âtma, the Brahman.

(16) "Indeed, it is the one Nârâyaṇa"<sup>2</sup> [Mahopaniṣat: 1].

(17) (Nârâyaṇa or) Vishṇu is the highest God; and Agni is the lowest. All other gods go between"<sup>3</sup> [Aitareya Brâhmana, I-1-1].

(18) "The Praṇava is the bow, Âtmâ is the arrow, and Brahman is the Target. The wise man shall hit the Target and become filled with It"<sup>4</sup> [Mund: Up: II-4].

(14) "From Nârâyaṇa is Brahmâ born, from Nârâyaṇa is Rudra (Śiva) born"<sup>5</sup> [Narayaṇa Up].

And Smritis, Purâṇas, and Itihâsas support these authorities, for see Bhagavad-Gîta, X-2, XI-37, IX-10; Manu-Smṛiti I-8, XII-132; Vishṇu-Purâṇa I, 1-32, I, 2-20, IV, 1-39, I, 22-64 and 78, VI, 4-10; Mahâ-Bhârata, Śānti-Moksha, 168-78 and 79; 169-19, 30 and 31, Udyoga, 67, and Harivamṣa, 32, 223-39, 279-47, &c., &c.

<sup>1</sup> ब्रह्मवाङ्मदमप्रब्रवीत्.

<sup>2</sup> एकोह्वैनारायणब्रवीत्.

<sup>3</sup> अग्निर्वेदेवानामवमो विष्णु परमः तदन्तरेवासर्वाअन्यादेवता ॥

<sup>4</sup> प्रखबोधतुरशरोद्घात्मा ब्रह्मतत्त्वद्वयमुच्यते ।

अप्रमत्तेनवेद्ध्यं शरवत्तन्मयोभवेत् ॥

<sup>5</sup> नारायणात्ब्रह्माजायते । नारायणाद्ब्रह्मजायते ॥

Note:—From (3) to (6), it may be observed how the conception of God evolved from the term Sat up to Nârâyaṇa. If our readers are etymologists, they will at once understand the splendid discovery of Râmânuja in the intricate windings of the Vedas. Says Max Muller.—“Every new work was a discovery, and these early discoveries, if but properly understood, are more important to us than the greatest conquests of the Kings of Egypt or Babylon. Not one of our greatest explorers has unearthed with his spade or pickaxe more splendid palaces and temples, whether in Egypt or in Babylon, than the etymologist. Every word is the palace of a human thought.” [P. 17, Vol. I, Trans: of the Ninth International Congress of Orientalists].

When therefore Śrī-saila Pūrṇa answered Nāyanār in his own riddles, he was convinced inasmuch as he was well-versed in Śāstras. And Pūrṇa feeling sure that Nāyanār was well on the way towards conversion, returned to Tirumalai. How clever of Pūrṇa !” So saying, Rāmānuja congratulated the Śrī-Vaiṣṇava who had returned. “And what next ?” asked he.

“Sire,” continued the Vaiṣṇava, “listen to the results of the third sally of Pūrṇa. He made obeisance to Lord Śrīnivāsa of Tirupati and entered the purlieus of Kālahasti and camping there in a tope, spent his time in teaching his disciples the commentaries on Tirudī-mozhi, (i.e. Bhagavad-Vishayam). Nāyanār came that way and got up a trumpet-flower tree (pāḍi to cull flowers for Śiva’s worship). Pūrṇa had taken up Tinṇan-viḍu or Cent: II, Dec 2 of St. Nam-māzhvār’s Tiru-vāy-mozhi, for comment; and as he went on reciting and explaining, Nāyanār attentively pursued the discourse. Pūrṇa came to the fourth verse thereof, which ended with:—‘Except the One God (Krishṇa), which other deserves flower or worship?’” On hearing this, Nāyanār jumped down the tree at once, flung away his flower-reticule, tore away the rudrāksha<sup>1</sup> beads he was wearing, and fell at the feet of Pūrṇa, overcome with emotion, and exclaimed:—“No, no; no one else can deserve. Holy Sire! I am an ignoramus, and apostate and am unclean and wallowing in the mire of worldliness.<sup>2</sup> Save me, save me. Alas that when God of the two Universes, (Nārāyaṇa) has been, I professed fealty to the ‘Nude deity of the Dishevelled Hair (Śiva)’; when we have had the ‘Love-beaming Lotus-Eyed (Viṣṇu),’ I placed my affections on ‘Fire-vomitting Ugly-Eyed (Śiva)’; when we have had Krishna, the sea-and-land Swallow, I worshipped the ‘Poison-dark-necked’ (Śiva); when we have had the Kalpaka-tree which had saved the herds and herdsmen from Indra’s hail and storm (Krishṇa), I honored the ‘Dead-skull-handed (Śiva); when we have had the Śrī-breasted (Viṣṇu), I bowed to the 'Beggar (Śiva)'; when we have had the glorious 'Silk-mantled (Viṣṇu)', I was an abject slave to the 'Tiger-skin-mantled (Śiva)'; when we have had the 'Gangā-toed (Viṣṇu)', I circumambulated the 'Grave-yard-stalker (Śiva)'; when we have had the God of the fragrant Tulasī<sup>1</sup>, I resorted to the 'Bilvā<sup>2</sup>-fond (Śiva)' and wasted my strength by pouring pailsful of water over the vile phallus" So went on Nāyanār, now really Govinda, going through the whole gamut of the Viṣṇu-Śiva legends; and very contrite at heart for his vagrancy, supplicated Pūrṇa to save his soul, lost in the wilds of false faiths. Govinda thus lay prostrate. Pūrṇa looked at his disciples and saying: "Repentance has washed this soul clean, and Ālavandār will now accept the purged heart," lifted him up with loving hands, patted him on the back and discoursed to him in soothing tones, "drinking Govinda, as it were, with his gracious eyes, and hugging him as it were to his heart."<sup>3</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The berries of Usocarpus Ganitrus, sacred to Śiva.

<sup>2</sup> अज्ञश्चचारहीनश्च मलिनो दुःखसागरे । निमग्न कृपणोऽधूर्त पुरोभागीशतोस्म्यहम् ॥
[Nāradya.]

The Sivite residents of Kālahasti came to know of Nāyanār's remorse, recantation and redemption and hemming round Pūrṇa, remonstrated with him thus:—"How canst thou entice, Sir, our Nāyanār, by mesmerizing him with charm-dust?<sup>4</sup> "Why do ye ask me?" retorted Pūrṇa, "there is your Nāyanār; ask him. Know, our ways are hidden to you, and we never swerve to others' ways." Then they turned to Nāyanār, and seizing his hand, "Come," said they. Govinda swiftly snatched his hand away from their clutch and said in anger:—"How dare ye pollute my hand with your touch? Here, take away the temple-keys, the signet-ring and other articles of your cult and creed. My connection with you

<sup>1</sup> The basil sacred to Viṣṇu (read p. lvii. of our Lives Āṣṭvārs.)

<sup>2</sup> Egle Marmelos, leaves of—sacred to Śiva.

<sup>3</sup> आपिबन्निवचक्षुर्भ्यामावृण्वन्निवचेतसा ।

आदरादतिथिपश्यन्नाचरेतयथोचितम् ॥ [Bṛāhma-Pur.]

<sup>4</sup> Amṛtān-pods in Tamil, a magic-dust supposed to possess the property of subjugating another's will to one's own.

has from this moment ceased ; and I have nothing more to do with you. I am entirely rid now of old shackles." So saying, he suited action to word, by clapping his hands,<sup>1</sup> and turned his face away from them. Thus beaten they said to Pūrṇa, — "Sire, we had known all this yesterday ; and yet we thought we would go to you and make a stand and try to force or persuade Nāyanār back to us, but it is hopeless, we find. Hear, however, the dream which we had. Our God of Kālahastī (Śiva) appeared to us and spake thus :—"Listen, my faithful ! In the old days, the Vedas and Sāstras suffered at the hands of the Pāshandins, Bauddhās and Chārvākās. They were restored by the three-staffed Sanyāsin, Dattātreyā. Again now, as of old, the Vedas have suffered by heretical vandalism. To re-establish them, the celestials Vishvakṣena, Ananta and Vainateya have become incarnate on earth, under the names of Yāmuna, Rāmānuja and Govinda. To help them, the Divine Symbols of Viṣṇu—the Conch and the Discus—have appeared as Dāṣarathi and Kūrēṣa, respectively. So, the Vedic Vaiṣṇavism which is going to revive under these Masters is a system which is after my own heart. Govinda had entertained a wish once for living in Kāśī ; and this desire I fulfilled by appearing as the linga in his palm, and giving him thus a chapter of Śaivism ; so that he may be in a position to show and prove to others the comparative merits of the two systems, which can best be done only after personal experience. Vaiṣṇavās are a free people. Interfere not. Let them alone." 'Such was our dream,' the Śaivas represented, 'and so, Sirs, you are free, and we return.' Pūrṇa's plans were thus worked out. He took Govinda to his home at Tirupati, and has had, as expiatory, the tonsure, &c., performed as also the five-fold Sacraments<sup>2</sup> of the Vaiṣṇavas—on the shores of the Holy Pond, called the Svāmi-Pushkarinī—administered. After this the Holy Teachings contained in the Prabandhas of the Saints (Āzhvārs) were duly imparted, and the Five Fundamental

<sup>1</sup> This means : washing one's hands off.

<sup>2</sup> संस्काराः पञ्चकर्तव्या उपनीतद्विजन्मनाम् ।

ताप-पुण्ड्रस्तयानाम् मन्त्रोपायमथ पञ्चमः ॥ [Kaṣyapa-Saṁhitā.]

Truths<sup>1</sup> of religion were explained to him, thus making Govinda an all-round Vaishnava for evangelistic work with Râmânuja. Govinda looked upon Pârṇa, his Master, as God Himself. He knew of no other God except his Saviour, Pârṇa, to whom he was a servitor, in thought, speech and deed, even as Lakshmana was to Râmachandra.<sup>2</sup>

And I, Master, remained with them so long, enjoying their company as well as studies." Thus related the Vaishnava to Râmânuja.

On hearing this, Râmânuja rapturously eyed the Śrīvaishnava and uttered blessings. The first successful evangelistic work of Râmânuja had thus been accomplished, by the recovery of Govinda from his apostasy.

<sup>1</sup> The Artha-pañchaka, or the nature of (1) God, (2) Soul, (3) Goal (4) Means, (5) Sin. A separate treatise on this topic comprises one of the eighteen Mystery-Books of Sage Piḷḷai Lokāchārya.

<sup>2</sup> अहं सर्वं करिष्यामि जाग्रतस्स्वपतश्च ते ॥ [Rāmā. II 31. 27]

'Thou shalt with thy Videhan spouse,
Recline upon the mountain's brows;
Be mine the toil, be mine to keep Watch o'er thee, walking or asleep.' [Griffiths.]

CHAPTER XV.

RÂMÂNUJA AND MANTRA.

Srî Râmânuja had not yet formally seen his Guru Srî Mahâpûrṇa, at his residence, after his arrival at Srîrangam from Kâncî. And, two, through his wife, he had possibly offended him. But he had abandoned her on that account and donned the Sannyâsin robes. Was this sufficient amends to appease the Guru? Such thoughts embarrassed Râmânuja. He would however go and tender ample apologies. So he walked on to his Guru's dwelling. In an attitude of veneration and humility, he prostrated himself, and telling him how he had made expiation for his past conduct, begged of him to pardon that for which he was not personally responsible. Pûrṇa said he never knew there was anything to pardon, but that on the other hand Râmânuja was daily growing in his estimation. "Sire," said Râmânuja, rising, "to fill the blank caused by Yâmunâ's sudden departure, to supply yourself the lack caused by my having, by a hair's breadth, missed conversing with him on matters spiritual, deign to impart to me all the mysteries of religion, that great Guru of mine has entrusted to you for the purpose." "With the greatest delight," replied Pûrṇa, "I have been eagerly looking out for an occasion like this. There shall be no more delay. The essence of our Holy Faith, know, is embedded in the Dvaya-mantra. 'O, its greatness! its power and strength! A gem, eternal, holy,—the very gist of the Vedas! Purifying, meritorious! Rich, world-winning, and healing'¹. So saying, he briefly imparted to Râmânuja the essentials of religion contained in it, viz, There is but One God. He is All-merciful, and is therefore our Way. He is All-knowing and All-mighty, and is therefore Our God. The souls' end and aim is therefore eternal living service at His Holy Feet. There are glorious amplifications of this truth yet. Learn these at the

¹ अहोद्वयस्यमहात्म्यमहोवीर्यमहोबलम् ।

मन्त्ररत्नं शुभकरं वेदसारं सनातनम् ॥

सर्वपापक्षयकरं सर्वपुण्यविवर्धनम् ।

श्रीकरं लोकवश्यञ्च सत्यसंसारतारणम् ॥ [Kâṣṇapa-Samhitâ.]

feet of Tiru-k-kôṭṭiyûr Nambi (=Goshṭhî-Pârṇa), who was an intimate disciple of Yâmunâ.

Râmânuja took leave and proceeded to Tiru-k-kôṭṭiyûr (near Pudukôṭa), and, on arriving there asked the passers-by where Gôshṭhî-Pârṇa was living. "There, in that poor low hut," said they, pointing. Râmânuja fell on his knees, and all the way from where he stood up to the hut, he went prostrate. Only those knew Nambi well, who knew how not to see defects in their Masters, but only saw perfections, and these to exaggeration.<sup>2</sup> Râmânuja approached Nambi and falling at his feet prayed. "Teach me, Holy Sire, all the recondite doctrines of our Faith. I am the humble feet of Mahâ-pârṇa." In order to test the strength of Râmânuja's professions, Goshṭhî-Pârṇa said in an off-hand manner: "What have I to tell, and to whom?", and gave him no countenance. Râmânuja never spoke another word, either of supplication or of reproach; but simply prostrated himself and returned to Kôil (=Śrîrangam).

G. Pârṇa had to visit Śrîrangam for the season's festivities connected with that Holy Place. He came and paid homage to the Lord Ranga, who was pleased to dower him with all honors, and commanded, through the officiating priest, :—"Instruct our Râmânuja in all the occult lore of the Faith." "But, O. Glorious God!" said G. Pârṇa, "It is Thou who hast ruled: Tell not those who have not been apprenticed at least for a year.<sup>4</sup> Reveal not high truths to the non-serious, non-dutiful, who love me not, &c.<sup>5</sup> So that if I have to carry out the strict letter of Thy law, I must wait and try Thy Râmânuja."

<sup>1</sup> See Hierarchic Table, No 24 in our Lives of Âzhvârs.

<sup>2</sup> This attitude of mind towards a Teacher constitutes a real disciple, and only then is his successful spiritual career assured. "The glad and cordial recognition of excellence," says A. Besant, "wherever found, the checking of the critical and carping spirit that fixes on defects and ignores virtues, these things prepare the soul to recognise his Guru when he appears. Many a one misses his teacher by the mental habit of fixing the attention on blemishes rather than on beauties, by seeing only the sun-spots and not the Sun." [Value of Devotion, p 263 f. Theos. Review. Vol. XXVI].

<sup>3</sup> This is the Indian idiom for a "true disciple." Let our readers become accustomed to it.

<sup>4</sup> नासंवत्सरवासिनेप्रभृत्यात्.

<sup>5</sup> इदन्तेनातपस्काय [Bh. Gl. XVIII-64.]

"Not so in his case," answered Ranga, "as he is fully qualified according to the requirements of the text. —

Body, wealth, mind, life itself, belong to the Guru, &c.,<sup>1</sup> and therefore he may be instructed

"Come to my place," said G. Pârṇa to Rāmānuja, and left Srīrangam. Rāmānuja went all the way, as directed, to T. Kōṭṭiyûr again. But when he went there; "Not this time; can you go now and come again?" told Pârṇa. Rāmānuja never thought of a protest, and never felt irritated, but simply obeyed the command, and returned to Srīrangam. Eighteen times,<sup>2</sup> thus, it is chronicled, did Rāmānuja journey to T. Kōṭṭiyûr and return, each time being told the same thing. G. Pârṇa had at the same time no other idea except that of testing Rāmānuja's faith and zeal, and testing him through an ordeal of novitiate probation, to see if his spirit was strong and capable of overcoming passions of the mind. Had his will been weak, he would long ago have given up his endeavor as unworthy of pursuit. Had he succumbed under the weight of disappointment and chagrine, that would have proved him an unworthy disciple, to whom it would have been useless to reveal occult truths. Such were Pârṇa's thoughts. And on the other hand, Rāmānuja's tenacity of purpose was raising him every time in Pârṇa's estimation. When he returned to Srīrangam for the eighteenth time, however, he felt somewhat, and was moved to tears at the futility of his repeated efforts, and was found deeply revolving in his mind, as to what he should do next; when a disciple of G. Pârṇa chanced to come from T. Kōṭṭiyûr, and came on a visit to Rāmānuja. Rāmānuja, bidding him be seated, and after preliminaries were over, poured before him his bitter grievances, and consulted him as to how he should make himself worthy. And he finished the consultation by saying:—"Is not God pledged to save us from evil, and grant us bliss? Even so are God's regents on earth. How am I to become worthy, if by the worthy, my unworthiness is not effaced; and unless the benefactor gives, how is the receiver

<sup>1</sup> शरीरं वसुविज्ञानं वासः कर्मगुणानमृतम् ।

गुर्वर्थधारयेद्यस्तु सशिष्यो नेतरस्मृत ॥ [Sâtrata-Samhitâ.]

<sup>2</sup> See Mumukshupadî, Intro: to Charama-Śloka.

to be blessed?" The disciple returned to T. Kôṭṭiyâr, and told his master how Râmânuja was pining for knowledge. "Has he such keen appetite? Then I must at once feed him. A moment's delay more on my part brings sin. Let Râmânuja come to me alone with his staff and pennant.<sup>1</sup> So did G. Pûrṇa exclaim; and bade the same disciple go forth at once and bring Râmânuja to him. Swiftly came he, and prostrating himself before Râmânuja begged of him to proceed. He started immediately, taking his two intimate disciples with him, Kûrêsa and Dâsarathi; and fell at Pûrṇa's feet. "These instead of thyself alone, as I had commanded!" exclaimed Pûrṇa. "Holy Sire!" explained Râmânuja, "'come with staff and pennant' was thy order. So I have come" "Staff and pennant!, which is thy staff, which is thy pennant?" asked Pûrṇa. "Sire, Dâsarathi is my staff; Kûrêsa is my pennant. I am never without them, nor they without me." Pûrṇa's irritation vanished and he was moved by Râmânuja's exemplary conduct and astuteness. "Well," spoke Pûrṇa—who by the bye had been commanded by Lord Ranga in a dream again, to unbosom Holy secrets to Râmânuja, as the latter was no other than Âdisesha himself incarnated—"I make exceptions of these, thy Inseparables; I command thee that to no others shalt thou impart the sacred truths I am going to divulge to thee." So saying, he led Râmânuja to a secret corner of his hut, and there revealed to him the hidden truths of the Tirumantra, or the Mantra of the Ashtâkshara-Upanishad, the eight-syllabled and three-worded Mantra, the gravity of which is thus described:—"Prajâva the first; Namâs the middle; and Nîrâyana the last. So runs the Eight-syllabled Mantra, to be ever used in prayer by seekers after God. It is the granter of every boon, and promoter of devotion and dispassion."<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Staff is the Tridanda of the Sanyâsin, and pennant is the colored piece of cloth attached to its top.

<sup>2</sup> प्रणवाद्येनमोमध्यं नारायणपदान्तिमम् ।

मन्त्रमष्टाक्षरं विद्यात् सर्वसिद्धिकरं नृणाम् ॥

मुमुक्षुणा सदा जप्यं भुक्तिमुक्तिफलप्रदम् ।

वैष्णवानां सदा जप्यं भक्तिज्ञानप्रवर्धनम् ॥ [Sâtrata-Samhitâ.]

Also see our Lives of Saints and Wisdom of Saints for detailed explanations.

"This," he said, "is the Mantra which all our Saints and Sages constantly recited and pondered over. It is the bestower of eternal bliss." Râmânuja reverently received the teachings, and considered himself now as regenerated and saved. But he could not contain the truths within him, though imparted under pledge of secrecy. "Why are such truths so jealously guarded from all mortals? If God is not for sinners, from whom is He? And therefore is not His Holy Word a message for all? Why should mortals be denied its saving power? But I shall not make a secret of it. I shall divulge it to all regardless of consequences." So did Râmânuja reflect and reason. Compassion for all men burned in his heart. So he made up his mind to proclaim the Word to the public.

The next day, he entered into the big and elevated hall<sup>1</sup> of Terk-kâzhvân, or the Lord Nṛisimha, Resident of Tiru k-kôṭṭiyûr, invited all to assemble there; and his full heart flowed to them in the revealing of the precious truths relating to Spirit, which he had learnt from G. Pârṇa, under vow of secrecy. This news reached and roused the indignation of G. Pârṇa. He commanded Râmânuja to appear before him; and asked in tones of anger:—"Culprit! did we not strictly enjoin thee not to reveal our noble truths of religion to the undeserving vulgar? How durst thou misbehave, and outrage promises made?" "Revered Sire," submitted Râmânuja, "I confess I am guilty of disobedience. But I taught the truths to others to glorify thee and thy lore." "That is not it," retorted Pârṇa, "the disobedience on thy part is the question. That, thou hast glaringly shown. What is thy punishment for it?" "My punishment is certainly hell, Sire," submitted Râmânuja. That thou well knewest," protested Pârṇa, "and yet what made thee to violate my law?" "Sire," said Râmânuja, "pray listen to me calmly. Disobedience surely deserves hell. I must be sent there, no doubt. But, holy Sire, may I submit that it is but little sacrifice for one sinner to make, inasmuch as it brings salvation to many.<sup>1</sup> Moreover all the merit of that whole-sale salvation goes to you, because of the Holy Secret having emanated from your great self? These reasons emboldened me to infringe thy holy command. It was compassion for mankind that rendered me blind to thy injunctions.<sup>2</sup> I ask forgiveness. Do with me, holy Sire, what thou wilt." G. Pârṇa was struck dumb at this reasoning and his own heart moved. "Oh, that this idea never entered my crippled heart," said he excitedly, "my heart, which would not ere this warm with love for mankind. I am hated. Strange I never felt the all-embracing love of Râmânuja. Râmânuja! Yatirâja! Indeed thou art He, come on earth. I see it all now." Thus vehemently venting forth the new and strange emotions stirring in his breast Pârṇa rushed forward and embracing Râmânuja continued:—"Holy son, thou art mine, my own indeed art thou. Thy name shall henceforth be Emberumânâr. The creed that I gave thee was hitherto known as the Creed of the High Vedânta, but henceforth it shall be known to the world as the Creed of Emberumânâr. Not only that, which thou hast already heard from me, shalt thou proclaim from the house-tops, but more shalt thou hear from me. Secrets there are yet. Come, wilt thou be, or art thou, satisfied, as thou seemest, with what thou hast got?" So went on Pârṇa, in the exuberance of his strangely awakened love for Râmânuja. "Holy Sire," softly said Râmânuja, "I am not to lay down law for you. Had I in the least thought that there were yet other Secrets than those you have already so graciously divulged, and therefore stood in need, that would prove lack of trust in me; i.e., as if I harboured doubts as to your sincerity. But if I say now: 'I need no more,' that would prove that I had not well understood the bearings of the first set of secrets given me. So I hold my peace. It is for you therefore, Master, to decide in these circumstance and from events which have transpired, what I deserve." My own son, Râmânuja, 'dear!' said Pârṇa, "then let it be deferred Go now and come again, but mind, come alone." Rāmānuja stretched himself before his Guru, rose and left for Srīrangam with his 'staff and pennant.'

<sup>1</sup>This is called the gopuram or pinnacle, as sung by Aṇṇâ-v-aṇṇpangâr in his Râmânuja-atimânusha-stava :—

"किं गोपुरोपरिवितेरियभूरिदानम्".

<sup>1</sup> Cp. this what Râmânuja (i.e., Lakshmana) said:—

"एकस्यमरणमेऽस्तु मादृत्सर्वविनाशनम्" [Uttara Râm; 105-8].

<sup>2</sup> Read Pp. 2561. Bhagavadvisayam. Vol. VII. End. (Telugu edition.)

Some time after, Rāmānuja journeyed, as bidden, to his Master for further instructions, and humbled himself before him. "Come now," said G. Pūrṇa, clasping Rāmānuja's hand lovingly. Taking him to a sequestered spot and adopting every precaution that no one may disturb them, "touch my feet", said he, and promise thou wilt not venture on further disclosures of our most cherished secrets." On Rāmānuja solemnly plighting his word, Pūrṇa began in the manner of Lord Krishna :—

'Listen, Arjuna, again, to My lofty speech, the Secret of Secrets. I say it as it is good for thee, and as thou art my friend and devotee.' [Bh : Gī. XVIII. 64.]

"It is the Last Word (Charama-śloka) of the spiritual science, contained in the Lord's verse " said Pūrṇa. Thus :—

*"Give up entirely all other Ways,
Choose Me alone as Thy Way;
Thee, from all sins, I will absolve,
No more then shalt thou mourn."* [Bh : Gī. XVIII. 66.]

"Son, reveal not these Holy Truths to the unprepared, undeserving, unerving, and haters of God (Me)." [Bh : Gī. XVIII. 67.] Rāmānuja, if you value these Truths, then let not atheists and heretics hear them. Guard them against such.

"Let it be, Sire, as thou wilt" said Rāmānuja, "but may I not make exceptions of such worthy God-loving souls as Kūrēsa. How can I conceal from him?" "He may be worthy" enjoined Pūrṇa," but our Śāstras lay conditions such as :—

"One year, half year, quarter year at least, shall the postulant be examined in every way; and then shall the Guru initiate him, graciously, disinterestedly<sup>1</sup> And therefore, after putting him to test and seeing that he really craves for knowledge during this trial-period teach him." Rāmānuja received these commands and returned to Śrīraṅgam as a victor returning home after a successful campaign. He thought to himself that even like the Eighteen Chapters of the Gītā preached by Śrī Kṛiṣṇa, before the Last Word (Charama-sloka) was revealed, in order to test Arjuna's mind, were the eighteen trips imposed upon him by his Guru. "I am Crown Prince now," he exclaimed rapturously, "and I am heir to the Kingdom of God."

<sup>1</sup> संवत्सरंतर्द्धं वा मासत्रयमथापि वा ।

परीक्ष्य विविधोपायैः कृपयानि स्सृष्टो होवेत् ॥

Kûrêṣa was now longing to learn this Truth. He was anxiously waiting for an opportunity to declare his mind. He found one and throwing himself at the feet of Rāmānuja said : "Holy Sire ! how I realise the effects of Yāmuna's petitions to Lord Varada. By them have you become the Pioneer of our Faith after discarding all wordly concerns. A holy band is gathering round you. I am happily one. See, how again Yāmuna's disciple, G. Pârṇa, has dowered you with his special grace. May I not be so blessed by you in turn ?" "Son, beloved," said Rāmānuja, "you must bide your time one year. That is my command." "Master," humbly submitted Kûrêṣa, "One year ! Ah, it is intolerably long. Can I stand it ? Shall I live so long, so long ? I have heard that one month's fasting and lying at the door of the Master, is considered a good equivalent for the year's probation." So saying, Kûrêṣa put his word immediately into execution. Rāmānuja was moved by pity, and at the end of the month, he initiated him into the final principles of the Gītā<sup>2</sup>

Dāsarathi was watching all the while. He found no rest for his mind till he learnt the saving truths. So he approached Rāmānuja and fell at his feet. "Teach me, also, I pray, Master," said he. "Son, my permission was for Kûrêṣa only. You must go to Pârṇa and obtain his permission." Dāsarathi ran to T. Kôṭṭiyûr, and threw himself before Pârṇa. But Pârṇa never gave him countenance. Dāsarathi held to his resolve, and repeated his importunity ; but Pūrṇa as resolutely turned away from him. This went on for six months. If Dāsarathi had any pride of birth or learning, this probation was good for him. He humbled himself again. Pūrṇa now glanced at him. "You are one of Rāmānuja's favoured, I surmise," asked he. "Yes, Sire ! I am known as Dāsarathi ; I am come to learn the cream of Gītā-teachings from you." Pūrṇa said : "Let every trace in thee cease, of the threefold egotism which troubles mankind, that of talent, wealth, and ancestry.<sup>1</sup> Rāmānuja will be the best judge of thee in these matters. Go to him and wait on his will and pleasure. He will bless thee." "Be it as you will, Sire," said Dāsarathi and humbly retired to Śrīrangam. Dāsarathi's return, Rāmānuja was watching, and when he came and fell at his feet, and related all that took place at T. Kōṭṭiyūr, Rāmānuja, in the midst of many assembled disciples, said :—"Do you see ? Dāsarathi is now a changed person. If he had any notion of self-esteem before, how it hath disappeared now ! What a transformation effected by my Guru ! Rise, Dāsarathi ! thou art now qualified to hear high lessons of the Spirit. I will reveal them at once." So saying, he communicated to him the quintessence of the Gītā-teachings, and exclaimed joyously. "Aye, now indeed, I may claim as my own, my Staff and Pennant."<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> See Chapter VI, p. 40.

<sup>2</sup> See Mumukshupada, Introd. to Charama-Sloka

<sup>1</sup> वियामदोधनमद स्तृतीयोऽभिजनोमद ।

एतेमदावलिताना मेतएवसत्तादम- ॥

<sup>2</sup> I.e., the two close disciples, Kūrēṣa and Dāsarathi.

CHAPTER XVI.

RÂMÂNUJA'S INTERPRETATIONS.

Some time elapsed thus. Goshthî-Pûrṇa came on a visit to Srirangam, where he met his college friend Tirumâlai-Âṇḍân (Mâlâdhara).<sup>1</sup> He took him with him and went to see Râmânuja in his retreat. Râmânuja on seeing his Guru come, rose and receiving him with due respect, entered into conversation. "Râmânuja!" he addressed, "you are now to hear the utterances of our Holy Saints, the Tiru-vây-mozhi of St. Nam-mâzhvâr, to begin with. I commend you to the care of my friend Mâlâdhara, who has been full well instructed in that lore by Yâmunâchârya." So saying, he placed Râmânuja's hands in those of Mâlâdhara, and begging of the latter to take his trust through a course of the Prabandhas, left for his own town.

They began the new course of studies. But as Mâlâdhara gave out the explanations of each verse as he had heard them from his Guru, Yâmuna, Râmânuja gave expanded or improved versions of the same. Mâlâdhara used to say that he never remembered such explanations given out by Yâmuna. "But they are right, Sire! and Yâmuna's mind was really that," Râmânuja used to reply. In due course, they came to the verse: Ârîyâ-k-kâlattu [T. Vây-mozhi II, 3, 3]. Mâlâdhara explained it thus:—O God, when I was ignorant, thou gavest me the knowledge of my relation to Thee, and yet Thou hast confined me in this carcase which destroys this knowledge "This cannot be, Sire!" protested Râmânuja, "if you consider the trend of the whole decad here [II, 3], it is an acknowledgment of all the manifold good, God did to the Saint. While so, one verse in the middle of the Decad cannot convey an accusation against God. So, by a transposition of the terms of the verse in question, the meaning becomes.—"Whilst I was yet confined in this carcase which destroys knowledge, thou were pleased to bestow knowledge of my relation to Thee, O God!"<sup>2</sup> "I don't remember Yāmuna so explaining to me," expostulated Mālādhara, "I like not such interpretations from thee." So saying, he ceased teaching further. The news of this interruption of studies reached the ears of G. Pūrṇa. He journeyed thereon to Srīrangam to inquire into the cause. Meeting Mālādhara, he asked for an explanation:—"Compeer!" began Mālādhara, "our studies never go on smoothly, for Rāmānuja, I find, is too much for me. He has an eternal store of new interpretations. For instance, we had a passage-at-arms over St. Nammāzhvār's verse Ariyū &c. [II. 3 3.]. Whereas I construed it as conveying a spirit of invective against God for His ways of dealing with souls, Rāmānuja construed it as an expression of gratitude to God, so as to make verse 3 harmonize with the other verses of this Decad. Such a protesting spirit seemed to me a violation of a disciple's decorum, while his constructions also seemed at variance with our Yāmuna's mind. Hence I had to stop studying with an eccentric pupil like Rāmānuja." "But, pardon me," interrupted Pūrṇa, "Rāmānuja is right, for I remember our Yāmuna having so explained. You seem to have forgotten. Friend! Rāmānuja is incapable of going wrong. If any one knows Yāmuna's mind, it is he. Look upon him as like another Krishṇa who went to Sāṇḍipani<sup>1</sup> for instruction. You are but a pretence. He knows all. No more be under the delusion that you are teaching him truths not already known to him. So, permit me as a friend, to lay it on you henceforth as a sacred duty to continue the Tiru-vāy-mozhi from where you dropped it; even if, to do so, it were necessary on your part to wait on Rāmānuja, instead of his waiting on you. He is such disciple as his Gurus must go to him." So saying, G. Pūrṇa went to Rāmānuja's monastery, accompanied by Mālādhara and Mahāpūrṇa. Seeing them, Rāmānuja rose exultingly, and prostrating himself, welcomed them all. G. Pūrṇa thus made peace and saw to the Prabandha-studies being again pursued in right earnest.

<sup>1</sup> See No. 25, Hierarchic Table, in our Lives of Âshvâs.

<sup>2</sup> Readers ought to read the original of this in the 2nd Volume of Bhagavad-vishayam, if they wish to fully enjoy this intellectual banquet.

They sat to the study again under these terms of conciliation. A passage was again being explained by Mālādhara. "Not so, Sire!" interrupted Rāmānuja. Yāmuna meant it another way." "How dost thou know Yāmuna?" excitedly queried Mālādhara, of Rāmānuja, "thou hast never conversed with him once in thy days. Thou but sawst him after his death. And yet Thou darest to interpret his mind to me!" "With thy leave, Master," submitted Rāmānuja, "look upon me as the Êkalavya<sup>1</sup> to Yāmuna. That will explain how I understand him." "I understand thee now, Holy Rāmānuja. I find the words of my friend G. Pūrṇa indeed confirmed by my own experience of thee. Thou art even an Avatāra. To me art thou teacher, not I to thee." I have learnt from thee many things that I had not learnt from Yāmuna." So saying, Mālādhara rose and made obeisance to Rāmānuja.

<sup>1</sup> Consult Vishṇu-Purāṇa.

Thus, without further impediments to progress, the study of a course of the Prabandhas was in due time completed. Mahāpūrṇa now suggested to Rāmānuja that there were other mysteries yet, which if he so desired, he might learn from the venerable Tiruvaranga-p-perumāl Aṛaiyar. Rāmānuja took the hint at once, and from that day forward engaged himself for six months to offer milk daily to Aṛaiyar as a premium for learning. And to this he added the service of preparing for Aṛaiyar a turmeric-paste (mañjal-kūppu) for ablution-purposes, when the adhyayana-festival came round in the year. One day the preparation was found not quite to Aṛaiyar's liking. Rāmānuja threw it away, and immediately prepared it anew. Aṛaiyar was watching this solicitude on Rāmānuja's part. "He loves me as one may love God. He loves me, a son of God, as God Himself incarnate," thought Aṛaiyar. "Come, noble disciple," said he, "you are fit to know the highest mystery. By your services to me you have earned it. So you lay claim to all that I have. Know then that God's apostles and representatives on earth are God Himself visible in that form. Our Śāstras hence proclaim:—

<sup>1</sup> See 132nd Adhyāya, Âdi-Parva, Mahābhārata for the Story. Êkalavya made a mud-image of Drōṇa, and learnt from this mere image of a Guru, all the science of archery.

"The Guru is Parabrahman Himself; is one's real Wealth; is the Object of love, and our Refuge. He is our Wisdom and the Way. Who preaches such a Saviour, is the Saviour of Saviours"<sup>1</sup>
 "Know that God asleep is the Guru awake; God invisible is the Guru visible and moving. The Gurus bring messages of God. They are God's mouthpieces. Through them, God chooses to teach mankind. Look upon the Guru (Saviour) then as God Himself on earth. Look upon him as St. Madhurakavi<sup>2</sup> looked upon St. Nammāzhvār, as Lakshmaṇa upon Rāma and Śatrughna on Bharata. This is called the Pañchamāpīya,<sup>3</sup> or the fifth and ultimate means of reaching God" Thus did Arāiyar descant on the greatness and virtue of Saviours, as the constituted channels through which God becomes most accessible to mankind. "They are appointed and sent by God to perform the functions of salvation. They are empowered mediators between man and God. Who reject them reject God, and their salvation is imperilled thereby. This truth is hard to be realized by mankind, which is apt to deny the Saviour by the very fact of His moving with them, living with them and sharing with them all their joys and sorrows. The very intimacy breeds contempt. Those only steer clear of this danger of denial, who can pierce through the veil of the visible symbol of the Guru. Rāmānuja! seriously reflect over this truth and be blessed." Obtaining this truth, Rāmānuja became supremely happy.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> गुरोर्वपरं ब्रह्म गुरोर्वपरं धनम् । गुरोर्वपरं कामो गुरोर्वपरायणम् ॥
 गुरोर्वपराविद्या गुरोर्वपरागति । यस्मात्तदुपदेष्टाऽसौ तस्माद्गुरुतरो गुरुः

[Kāśyapa-Samhitā].

आचार्यसहस्रारिस्त्राचाररूपीनसंशयः [Pañcharātra].

<sup>2</sup> Read his life in our Lives of Āzhvārs. [See No. 10 in the Table, Ibid].

<sup>3</sup> The other four Means being Karma, Jñāna, Bhakti and Prapatti. It is also called the Charana-parva. See Table of Soteriology, pp. 573-574, our Bhagavad-gītā.

<sup>4</sup> I and my Father are one, said Christ. Our Upanishads say:—
 यस्य देवो पराभक्तिर्यथा देवे तथ गुरौ [Subāla: Up. end].

That this is an old Indic doctrine may now be understood by all who may have doubted it ere this.

Here it may be asked, how one disciple can have more than one Guru ? It was Mahâpûrṇa who acted the first sacramental Guru to Râmānuja, at Madhurāntakam, as already narrated. And yet we find Râmānuja resorting to many Teachers for instruction. There is no serious spiritual objection to such a procedure, it is stated For a king may entrust more than one minister of his, with the wealth of his realm, to be made over to his heir when he comes of age. Each minister discharges his particular trust in due season. Such was the case with Râmānuja. For the great Yāmuna had made many, the custodians of Spiritual Truths, which were to be imparted to Râmānuja, each in his turn. Râmānuja was to have received them directly from Yāmuna, but fates had ordained otherwise. Râmānuja's hopes, which had been dashed to the ground when Yāmuna suddenly passed away, were now fulfilled. Yāmuna had signified to his disciples that Râmānuja was to be the High Pontiff of their resuscitated Ancient Church ; and the deposit of spiritual truths he had left with them was to be placed in his hands. The Gurus of Râmānuja therefore were thus bound to discharge their sacred trust. When they did so, each in his time, they were relieved and happy. It may be the teacher or the disciple. The canon laid down is that whoso is qualified to receive spiritual truths must be told them, regardless of formalities otherwise prescribed, for the disciple to wait on the teacher and so on. A teacher, it is even said, becomes a teacher only when he has found a fit pupil, only when he has transferred to him his wisdom. Thus Râmānuja's teachers became entitled to that honor only after teaching Râmānuja, and disciples became true disciples only after becoming disciples of Râmānuja. Râmānuja is therefore described as the Central Gem in the precious necklace made up of the gems of Teachers and Disciples of the Vaishṇava apostolic.

---

CHAPTER XVII.

RÂMÂNUJA'S MINISTRY BEGINS.

Râmânuja's studentship was now complete. He was already spiritual before intellectual. The naturally spiritual man was by means of intellectual accomplishments, to bequeath a legacy to the world in the shape of written works. He composed three in the beginning embodying the principles and practices of the Vaishṇava faith. These were the gadya-traya (The Three Proses), the Daily Worship-Manual called the Nitya, and the Commentaries on the Bhagavad-Gītā.<sup>1</sup> The cardinal doctrine established by him in these works is the Unity of Godhood expressed by the term Nârâyana of the Taittiriya Upanishad and others.<sup>2</sup> And Râmânuja disseminated the doctrines among many who were gathering about him; and thus did his ministry begin.

It was the practice of Râmânuja, as a mendicant who had abandoned the world, to visit seven houses daily and collect alms. Only upon this is the Sanyâsin to subsist, according to the Yati-dharma. Alms-begging is enjoined on the principle that the ascetic has nothing to call, or ought not to own, any worldly goods as belonging to him, as such owning begets a series of attachments necessarily and weds him again to worldly interests; and to show to the world that the world to the spiritual man is beggared before God; in other words, beggary means death to the world in order to live unto the spirit. This is the spiritual interpretation of the donee's mendicancy compassing eleemosynary merit to the donor. Both are abused in India. The worldly man ought not to beg, and the spiritual man ought not to bestow,—this is reversed in modern times. The law is: the material man is the custodian of the spiritual man's body, and the spiritual man, of the material man's soul. The commodities of exchange between the two are substance and spirit. Each party has his laws and conditions for the exchange. Hence a spiritual-beggar is no burden upon society. Other beggars are indeed so, and ought to be interdicted from their professional preying upon others' honest labour. A spiritual beggar is a benefactor inasmuch as his very presence among men, not to say of the influence of his words on them, is a great moral and spiritual influence, elevating them from the gross to the ethereal, from the fleeting to the lasting. Such a monk-mendicant was our Râmânuja.<sup>1</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> This is the one we have English-translated.

<sup>2</sup> Vide Introduction to our Lives of Saints, and Topic 84 in our Divine Wisdom, for a disquisition.

We have said above that Râmânuja's main endeavour was to establish the Unity of Godhood. In doing so, he did not abstract God from His Universe,—a process tried by monism ending in negation—, but restored God to His Universe in all the fullness of His Infinite nature, so to say. By his practice, he illustrated it, even when he went about his begging excursions. For it is chronicled that Râmânuja, while so engaged one day in the thoroughfares of Srîrangam, a few boys, from mere frolic, waylaid him and pointing to a figure like man which by their toes they drew on the dust, said: "Boasted friar, here is your God. If He is everywhere, here He must be. Worship Him then." Râmânuja was delighted to hear the boys sermon to him thus. Anon he put his bowl down, prostrated himself before the Figure on the floor, and thanking the boys went his way.

On another occasion he came across a number of boys in the streets. They were enacting all that they saw their elders doing in the Temple. They had described in the dust a diagram of the Srîrangam Temple, with several chambers allotted therein for God, for His Consort, His Saints and so on. Regular worship they commenced, and it was now time to offer food to the several Deities. The boys procured the food easily; for

<sup>1</sup> Âpastamba in his Dharma-Sûtras, says [II. 5, 10] :—

भिच्छेनिमित्तमाचार्यो विवाहो यज्ञो मातापित्रोर्बुध्षार्हितश्चनियमविलोप ॥1॥

तत्रगुणान्तमीक्ष्ययथाशक्तिदेयम् ॥2॥

इन्द्रियप्रीत्यर्थस्यतुभिच्छेनमनिमित्तम् । नतदाद्रियेत ॥3॥

The gist of this is that unless conditions stated are present, begging is to be discouraged. Read infra, Râmânuja's explanations to Kongil-pirâtti, on why great men go to poor houses making begging but a pretext.

they gathered the road-dust, made it into convenient heaps, and offered the same to their God pictured on the ground. Food so consecrated should be distributed next, to all the worshippers. That is the rule. So the boys did; and finding Rāmānuja in their midst: "God's food, Sire, take," cried they. Rāmānuja fell reverently on the floor, and rising, as reverently stretched his hands and received the food and went his way.

Rāmānuja's stewardship in the Temple necessarily gave rise to bickerings on the part of the priests. They were jealous of his discipline and his growing power. Why not do away with this Sanyāsin, and let us freely revel in corruption? thought they. They would poison him, decided they. To one of the seven houses which Rāmānuja was found frequenting for alms, they went and prevailed upon the owner to mix poison with the alms and give it to him. In India, the house-wife is to perform the duty of doling out alms. So the husband told the house-wife to do the nefarious deed. She objected, but he persisted. She was obliged to obey. Rāmānuja came. With hands somewhat trembling, she doled out poisoned food to him, and prostrating herself before him, abruptly retired with eyes downcast. Her manner, he observed, was somewhat peculiar that day. This raised suspicion. He thought he would place the food before a dog. He did, and lo! it made the dog sick and giddy; it fell and died. "This is food with poison (sa-gara)" cried Rāmānuja: "Let the poison (ga-a) go to its birth-place (sā-gara)."<sup>1</sup> So saying with a pun on the word sagara, he cast the food into the waters of the Kaveri river close by.<sup>1</sup>

From that day Rāmānuja would fast, but soon news of this flew to G. Pūrṇa who left from T. Koṭṭiyūr for Srīraṅgam to set matters right before it was too late. Pūrṇa had neared Srīraṅgam and was crossing the dry bed of the Kaveri river in the midday sun, which was scorching the head and the feet. Rāmānuja, with his chosen, went to meet the Guru, and fell prostrate before him on the burning sands. Pūrṇa did not bid him rise. Kidâmbi-Âcchân by name, a disciple of Râmânuja, who loved him much and who had accompanied him, watched this with painful expectancy. Finding the suspense insupportable, and provoked beyond patience, he cried to Pârna: "Sire! are these the exactions of civilities between Teachers and Disciples? Doth thy code of etiquette permit such infliction of cruelty? Doth thy stony heart demand, that a tender flower like my Râmânuja should be fried and roasted before thee like this? Hast thou sense? Hast thou the milk of humanity? I care not for thy absurd regulation." Thus fulminating his objurgation at the Gûru, he swiftly raised Râmânuja and hugged him to his breast. A moment of the most painful anxiety and suspense, it was too, for Pârna, for he was by this means trying to find out the person, who truly loved Râmânuja. Looking now at Âcchân with eyes beaming with approbation, Pârna said: "Âcchân, thou art the sort of person I have been looking for. Now that I have found thee, my fears for Râmânuja's future safety are dispelled. I appoint thee his body-guard; and no one but thyself shall cook for Râmânuja. Thou alone shalt discharge that most important and holy duty henceforth." Kidâmbi-Âcchân became thus the Mahânasâchârya, or Râmânuja's Master of the Hearth.

---

<sup>1</sup> This has reference to the Churning of the Milk-Sea Legend, when poison was one of the products of that sea.

Thus shielded from schemes against his life, Râmânuja was spiritedly diffusing to all earnest comers, the philosophy of true religion. An important event came about at this juncture. A profound Brâhman scholar there was, by name Yajña-mûrti. Wherever he went, he entered into debates with learned men on knotty points of the Vedânta, invariably carrying off the palm of victory. He went for a bath in holy Ganga, and there also he entered the arena of Vedântic discussion and vanquished the disputants. He became the one-staffed Sanyâsin, — a proclamation this that he was professor in the successful establishment of the Mâyâ-râda, or the illusoriness of the Kosmos.

Fascinated by subtilities of his sophistry, many became adherents to his cause; and he rose in fame, and pride as well. But he was told that there was a Râmânuja at Srîrangam, and until he crossed swords with him, his victory would not be complete. This roused his vanity. Mightily did he prepare himself for the contest. He armed himself with heaps of books and arguments, and came down to Srīrangam, with his band of disciples, and with all the ostentation and demonstration of a big Pandit. Dashing up to Rāmānuja in all the style of an egotist, he invited him to an intellectual warfare. Rāmānuja declared he was ready. "What is the wager for our combat?", he asked of the savant. "If I am defeated," he said, "I will embrace your faith." "If you win," said Rāmānuja, "I shall give up my ministry in the world." So staking, they fixed eighteen days for the discussion. For sixteen days it waxed hot; and yet there appeared no odds between them. But on the seventeenth day, the balance began to swing in favour of Yajña-mūrti, Rāmānuja having felt the want of an argument to overpower the fiery array of them on the side of the adversary. Yajña-mūrti, reading the signs of discomfiture, and puffed with pride, left Rāmānuja in that situation, as if in contempt, and stalked out of the monastery for that day. Rāmānuja felt the situation keenly, and poignant grief entered into his heart. Tortured with thought, he shut himself up in the chapel, and after worshipping his own Lord Varada there in the usual routine, prayed to Him thus in agony:—"Holy God! if I, a weak mortal, am repulsed in the fight, Thy Cause can never be repulsed—a cause which has been established on earth of yore, by such saints as Nammāzhvār and sages as Yāmunāchārya. So far, the success attending our Dispensation is because of Thy will. By Thy Holy Word (Revelations), Thou hast been justified and demonstrated in all Thy variety of manifestation as well as essence. Now it hath pleased thee to pitchfork a false prophet on Thy world-stage and let him dance. Let it be, if such is Thy will." Imploring thus, Rāmānuja fasted and slept. The Lord Varada appeared to him in a dream and thus spoke.—"Beloved, be not vexed. We are giving thee an able adherent to help Thy mission. To-morrow, the last day, level at Yajña-mūrti all the quiver-full of arguments against māyāvāda, to be found in the works of thy Grand-Guru Yāmuna. Rāmānuja bounded with joy, and performing all the routine duties of the day, and prostrating to his chapel-God, ventured forth into the debating hall.

Yajña-mūrti was already there. Rāmānuja's dignified manner, stately gait, and glory of countenance, struck terror into him. A presage of defeat, it seemed to him already. "What a contrast," exclaimed he, "between the state in which I left him yesterday, and that in which I see him this day! He is advancing towards me in all the majesty of a mad elephant. This is surely extraordinary. He must be more than human." So thinking to himself, he instinctively rose, and advancing towards Rāmānuja, cried: "Sire, no more words between us, I pray. I confess I am beaten." As he said, he placed Rāmānuja's sandals on his head, and implored him to deign to gather him to his holy fold." "What is this?" said Rāmānuja, surprised, "I never expected this from you. Our case is still contested. Let us argue it through and see where it will land us." "Pardon me, Sire," submitted Yajña-mūrti, "no more fight. When I actually see you are one with God, I dare not open my mouth again." "And yet," rejoined Rāmānuja, "I wish to say that the Māyāvāda or illusion-doctrine necessarily strips God (Para-brahman) of any attribute. But from our Scriptures we derive no support for an attributeless God. Such texts as that 'God is Truth' &c., become untruthful. But if you justify the God of attributes, because of His becoming so conditioned by avidya (ignorance), then 'how is such a God, who allows His Light to be eternally obscured by such ignorance, ever to get rid of it?'<sup>1</sup> If you say, what of it, then you will thrust yourself into a position from which there is no escape. For, you will have postulated two eternal things: God and Ignorance, or knowledge and non-knowledge, which is dualism and therefore antagonistic to monism. In your attempt to establish monism or non-dualism, you necessarily negate every thing else than Brahman; but in that very act, you posit a duality, viz., ignorance, which eternally thwarts that Brahman! The pampered elephant of advaita (monism) therefore gets all unawares, stuck in the mire of dualism.<sup>1</sup> Thus did Rāmānuja preach. Yajña-mūrti followed the speech in rapt attention, and when it ended broke his staff and bending himself before Rāmānuja implored his blessings. Rāmānuja drew Yajña-mūrti to his breast, and blessing him, took him through a series of expiatory ceremonies<sup>2</sup>, as the latter had discarded the holy thread &c., and con-

<sup>1</sup> ज्ञानरूपपरं ब्रह्म तन्निवर्त्यमृषात्मकं ।

अज्ञानंचोत्तिरस्कुर्यात् प्रभुस्तन्निवर्तने ॥ [Rāmānuja ?]

This is the controversy turning round the term personality, again and again cropping up in all Viśiṣṭādvaita works.

<sup>1</sup> Our readers may be curious to know what the māyā-vāda is. We shall let Lāla Baijnāth, Chief Justice of Indore speak:—"The later Vedāntic philosophers of India, including Śaṅkarācārya, have, however, pressed these teaching to mean that the world is "Māyā," a baseless illusion to be destroyed by knowledge. This is, however, not the true philosophy of the Upanishads. In none of them, except the Śvētāsvatara-Upanishad, does the word Māyā, which supports the illusion-theory, occur, and even in the Śvētāsvatara, the word māyā is used synonymously with prakṛiti, undifferentiated matter. "Know the Māyā to be Prakṛiti, and the Lord of Māyā to be Mahesvara; this whole world is pervaded by power which are his parts" [Svīt Up. IV, 10]. To say that the objects of the world are as unreal and have as intangible an existence as those of dreams, the great doctrine preached by Śaṅkarācārya and his followers, or that the world does not really exist, is therefore wrong. The Upanishads do not support a parindma-vāda. The process of manifestation of the universe is according to them a real and not an illusory process. When they say that all name and form are merely nominal, that earth in jars, pots, &c., or gold in every ornament, is only true, they mean, not that pots or ornaments do not exist, but that they do not exist apart from the earth or gold. The same is true of Brahman. The world does not exist in its present form, and it does not exist apart from Brahma. It is not an erroneous appearance, as that of a rope mistaken for a snake, but it has no individual or separate existence. This is perhaps the great error into which the later Vedāntis have fallen, and which has been the cause of their teachings not guiding popular religion. In fact, the second Sūtra of Vyāsa, which is that Brahman is that from which the origin, subsistence, and dissolution of this world proceed, does not at all support the illusion-theory. The Sūtra proves that the world owes its existence and subsistence to God; that it dissolves into Him; that while the real nature of Brahman is satyam, jñānam, and anantam, the true, the intelligent, the limitless, the creation, &c., of the world are only such of his attributes as reside within Him at certain times and not at others. It also proves that the world, differentiated by names and forms, containing many agents and enjoyers, the abode of the fruit of actions, these fruits having definite times, places, and causes, and the nature of whose arrangement cannot be conceived by the mind, cannot proceed from any but a Lord possessing the above qualities." [Pp 63-64, Vol. I. Trans: of the Ninth International Congress of Orientalists, London, in 1892.]

<sup>2</sup> हीनायज्ञोपवीतनं यदि स्याद्भयानभिच्छुक् ।

तस्य क्रियानिष्फलास्त्यु प्रायश्चित्तं विधीयते ॥

गायत्रीसंहितायैव प्राजापत्यान्ममाचरेत् ।

पुनस्संस्कारमाहृत्य धार्ययज्ञोपवीतकम् ॥ [Yati-dharma-Samucchaya].

ferred on him all the sacraments of a Vaishṇava,<sup>1</sup> and the name of Arulāla-p-perumāl Emberumānār, which was his own name combined with that of the Lord Varada, by whose grace he was enabled to acquire a golden convert to his Faith. The Samskrit of this is Devarāja-muni or Devarât. Rāmānuja led him to Ranga's temple, where he was made a recipient of all the honors due to a member of the Faith, and brought him back to his monastery, where he was introduced to the worship of his Lord Varada, and consecrated food thereof given him. The partaking of food completed the initiation and the convert became a part and parcel of the Vaishṇava community. A course of studies relating to the Prabandhas and other esoteric teachings was gone through ; and the love-religion of the Vaishṇavas was thus spread before him, at which his heart melted and the intellect bowed.

Rāmānuja had in Devarât a great access of strength. His addition made his flock brilliant. He joined the other two jewels of Rāmānuja's band, Dāsarathi and Kūrēsa. Classes in philosophy &c., were ably conducted with these members. Rāmānuja's fame went abroad. Anand-āzhvān or Anantasūri,<sup>2</sup> Ecchān, Tondanūr<sup>3</sup>-Nambi and Marudūr-Nambi, hastened to become his disciples. When they came, he directed these to Devarât for initiation into the Faith. He obeyed but declared that Rāmānuja was thus trying to hang heavy stones to the neck of a poor sparrow ! " Beware ", he said to the new disciples, " I am but his vassal, his tool. Rāmānuja is your real Saviour. Me, forget ; but him, remember."

<sup>1</sup> प्रभार्यतापसंस्कारं वैष्णवंमुनिभिस्संप्रदत्तम् ।

सर्वाश्रमेषुवसता श्रीशूद्राणाद्विजोत्तम ॥

उपवीर्तितदण्डञ्च पानंजलपवित्रकम् ।

कौपीनंकटिस्तूत्रञ्च नत्याज्ययावदायुषम् ॥ [Ibid].

<sup>2</sup> No. 28, Hierarchic Table, [see our Lives of Āzhvārs.] He was born in Kirangūr, near Śrīrangapatna, Maisūr.

<sup>3</sup> A holy place near Melkote where the big Motitalāv pearl-tank is situated. See infra when Rāmānuja comes to this place.

CHAPTER XVIII.

RĀMĀNUJA'S FIRST TOUR.

Rāmānuja's school was thus filling. A course of studies in the Prabandhas was being conducted, and the verse in St. Nammāzhvar's Tiru-vāy-mozhi · Uzhiril-kīlam, was reached. This verse is of the Decad III. 3, addressed to Lord Venkata-pati or Śrīnivāsa of the Holy Tirupati-Hill. It says.—

*Ever joined to Thee at all times,
Services all, we must render Thee,
O Father! and Light of the Hill,
From which limpid rills trickle down!*

On reading and explaining this Rāmānuja went to the Sacred Hill, called Pushpa-mantapa<sup>1</sup> in ecstatic thought, and glancing on the assembly of scholars before him, asked: "Is there any one amongst ye, prepared to stay in Tirupati, make flower-gardens, and daily serve Śrīnivāsa with flowers thereof?" Ananta-Sūri stood up, "Bid me go, Sire," said he and quickly went to Tirupati and there getting up a flower-garden, carried flowers daily to the Lord there. He called the garden Rāmānujam.

Rāmānuja was informed of all this from time to time, and he longed to visit Tirupati himself. For this purpose, he swiftly went through the Tiruvāymozhi course, and proceeding to the Temple, prayed to the Lord Ranga therein to permit him to go on a tour to Kānchi, Tirupati, and other shrines. "Granted, but return soon," was the reply that came.

Obtaining thus the holy permission of Lord Ranga, Rāmānuja left Śrīrangam with his disciples on a tour, the first of the kind after his anointment as the Pontiff of the rising Vaishnava-faith. On his way north, he visited Mahita-kshētra, and other shrines, arriving at Dēhalī-Nagara, or Tiru-k-kōvalūr, where he rendered homage to Lord Trivikrama, who appeared to the Three First Āzhvārs.<sup>2</sup> Thence he proceeded to Chitra-kûta or Chidambaram, but hearing that it was infested with the most bigotted Saivas, left the place thinking that it would not be possible for him to introduce any reform in the place in a hurry.

<sup>1</sup> See p. 206, for this and other terms, of our Lives of Āzhvārs.

<sup>2</sup> See their account in our Lives of Āzhvārs.

He next arrived at Ashta-sahasra-grâma, where he had two disciples by name Yajñeṣa and Varadârya<sup>1</sup>. Of these, Yajñeṣa was very rich and Varada very poor. To the former Râmânuja sent two of his disciples to announce his arrival, and ask him to be his good host during his halt. Yajñeṣa, when the disciples came, was in an arrogant mood and heeded them not; thinking that when Râmânuja chose to come himself to his doors, he would receive him in proper form. At this cold treatment, the disciples returned to Râmânuja with fallen faces and reported to him the conduct of Yajñeṣa. "Then we shall not enter his doors," said Râmânuja, "we shall go to our poor disciple Varada at once and without notice." So saying, they threaded their way to Varada's lowly hut. But he was absent on his daily begging rounds. His wife, the good Parutti-kollai, espied them coming. She wished to step forward and welcome them, but she had such a thread-bare garment to cover her—owing to abject poverty—that she could not with any decorum show herself to any. So, she sheltered herself behind a door, and clapped her hands so that Râmânuja might take it for a signal of welcome, and not go away elsewhere, as that would be disastrous to her soul's welfare, inasmuch as Râmânuja's condescension in having come to her poor house would prove profitless. Râmânuja at once understood the delicate situation in which the poor lady was placed, and taking off the colored cloth which covered his head, flung it through a window into the house. She picked it up and wearing it, approached Râmânuja whom, in welcoming to her house, she prostrated most humbly and said:—"O my gracious Guru, you are most welcome to my humble cottage. Pray accept this water for washing your hands and feet ; and be seated here." She then thought to herself like this :—" What mighty merit must mine have been what austerities must I have done. what gifts must I have bestowed, in order that Rāmānuja, who is Vishṇu Himself incarnate, come on earth to save mankind, should come to our house. Divine grace has descended upon our undeserving selves. For the Guru (Saviour) is God Himself, He is the Good. All our goods, body and soul are His. The true disciple is he who thinks and acts thus So do our Scriptures say But I have not a handful of grain in my house, nor a single coin wherewith to worship the worthy Sannyāsin. My husband is out on begging, but his petty pickings will not suffice for the worthy guests. To honor a guest like Rāmānuja, I will even sin. St. Parakāla, in the old days, robbed and cheated people in order to serve God. He ensconced himself in fastnesses, waylaid men, stripped them of their goods, and offered them to God. Even Lord Ranga Himself was once eased by him of all his precious jewels ; and with them feasts were given to the faithful.<sup>1</sup> Creatures whirl round the wheel of Samsāra, but the Guru comes with his teachings, and extricates them from this ; and gives them God. To repay the Guru for this is impossible. Hence I will even sell my body and worship him wherewith. For God Himself has said :—" If for My sake thou sinnest, it becometh merit ; all merit without reference to Me becometh sin."<sup>2</sup> The Guru is even greater than God. Therefore I shall have recourse to the rich merchant of this place, who has been casting his adulterous eyes on me for a long time. I shall now let him have his wish, let him feed on this wormful body. The wealth he will on this account bestow on me, shall all be used for the entertainment of my honored guests." So thinking she addressed Rāmānuja thus :—" Holy Sire, rest here but a moment. By your grace, you shall anon see my house filled with articles to feast you and yours with." So saying, the virtuous lady left the house and hur-

---

<sup>1</sup> The latter's full name is Parutti-kollai Varadâchârya, and his wife is the famous Parutti-kollai Nâcchiyar, Sanskritized into Kârpâs-ârâmadâmbâ.

---

<sup>1</sup> Read his life in our Lives of Saints.

<sup>2</sup> मन्निमित्तकृतं पापमपि पुण्ययुक्तं कल्पते ।

मामनादृत्यतु कृतं पुण्यं पापायुक्तं कल्पते ॥

ried to the merchant, and forcing a most bewitching smile into her face to please him, said : " Good man, time has now arrived for the fulfilment of thy long-cherished desire. My Guru is pleased to come to my house. And I have to entertain them, for which all food-stuffs and vessels are wanted. Please order them at once." The merchant, studying the standing beauty more than ever, and inflamed at the overtures she herself made this time, obeyed her commands without a word, and sent an abundance of things with her. The good woman stood before Rāmānuja in all humility with these things. He was struck with her devotion and commanded that she should herself cook for him,—a great privilege, indeed, bestowed on a woman by a holy person (in India). She did so. And Rāmānuja and his disciples, after bathing and worshipping God, partook of the holy food, offered him in love, and rested in her house, his whole being pulsating with blessings for her.

While thus Rāmānuja was resting in his loving votary's house, Varadārya, the husband, returned home after his begging. The good wife related to him all the circumstances beginning with the Guru's arrival and up to the repast which she was able to spread before him during his absence, and the worship and joy which she, in his absence, was able to give to the illustrious guest. " Madam," said the husband jubilant, " though thou art young, thy wits are old ; else how couldst thou have done such a grand task ? Thou art not a wife, but a goddess I ken thee. Nor art thou a nominal disciple, for, for thy saviour, thou hast sacrificed all, even thy woman's honor." Applauding her thus, he went to Rāmānuja and clasped his feet firmly ; then rising and with palms joined, praised him thus . " O Prince of men ! King of ascetics ! a thousand salutations to thee. For the redemption of things life-ful and lifeless, thou art born amongst us, Vishṇu Himself, the Lord of the Universe Thou art all-knowing, and all-wise, and art the very reflection of Hari. As, in a deep dark well, wallow creatures entangled in the meshes of their varied deeds, who else but thou art able to lift them from this dismal abyss ? who but the magician can draw the venom out of the cobra-bitten person ? who but the sun can dispel darkness ? what but cool water can allay a man's thirst ?

The samsāra-smitten sinner finds relief only by worshipping thy holy feet. Praise be to my Gurn, by whose magic the evil spirit left the princess and itself was redeemed. Hadst thou not appeared amongst us, how could a sinner like me have been saved? Learned men there are by the hundred, but their ways are pīṣhanḍa, leading them downward. How gracious 'thy holy steps were directed to the abode of a poor creature like myself. The very sight of thee has absolved me of all my sins. I am content. I rest in peace; and so do my ancestors." Rāmānuja blessed him and giving him the Śrī-pāṇḍa-tīrtha, let him partake of food (prasāda). He was struck with joy at the unity of heart and purpose, this excellent pair possessed, and dwelt with them for some time.

The pair now thought of returning the kindness of the merchant. They both went with Rāmānuja's tīrtha and prasāda, and delivering them to him, asked him to partake of the same, and then do what he liked with the wife. He left. The merchant's heart leapt with joy, but when he drank the holy water and ate the holy food, he felt within him a strange revolution. His carnal intent for the damsel gave way to wisdom and worship. He walked round her and threw himself before her, and with hands upraised in devotion said:—"Madam, thou art my mother, and thy husband is my father. The darkness of un-wisdom had overspread my mind, making me a fool and lusting after thee. I fall at thy feet, mother. Pardon me. Protect me. Take me to your great Gurn and throw me, a slave, at his holy feet. Subject me to any penance by which my sin may be expiated. Let me walk in the path of righteousness anyhow." The good dame told her husband of all this remorseful confession and begged him to quiet the convulsed soul of the merchant. All this was marvellous. Anon Varadārya bent his steps to the penitent man and leading him to Rāmānuja, cast him at his feet. Rāmānuja, who inquired how all this came about, was told all. His surprise was equal to his joy. He had made a good disciple, to whom therefore he duly administered all the five Vaishṇava sacraments.<sup>1</sup> It is chronicled that this disciple thenceforward shone as bright as the summer moon, having placed all his wealth at the disposal of Rāmānuja, whose fame thus spread all over the country.

<sup>1</sup> i.e. The Pañcha-Samskāra, already described. Cp: "He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and Fire [S. Luke, III. 16.]"

Yajñeśa, the rich disciple, knew nothing of all this. Whereas he expected Rāmānuja would be coming to him; probably he was on his way. So he had gathered together many things at home to feast his Guru; and was prepared in other ways to receive him, as he thought. He waited thus with his relatives, but there was no sign of Rāmānuja coming. This set him pondering, and he left home in quest and despatched other men also. They learnt that Rāmānuja had bent his steps to Varadārya's house, after the indifferent manner in which his two messengers had been treated by Yajñeśa. These tidings carried they to Yajñeśa. On hearing it, he fell to weeping; and hurrying to Varadārya's house, cast himself at the holy feet of Rāmānuja, beseeching his pardon. Rāmānuja lovingly lifted him up and read to him a sermon thus, calculated to be useful to the whole world: "Yajñeśa, listen. What I utter is good for thy soul. A Vaishṇava should require the five Samskāras, should know the five Truths, and follow his saviour. But more than all this is the service to those who are godly. The two messengers that came to thee were Vaishṇavas, godly men. They came as guests besides, and were way-worn. But thou didst eject from thy threshold. This did not become thee. Thou shouldst have welcomed them, washed their feet, fanned them, fed them and worshipped them in every way befitting Vaishṇava-visitors. They are Viṣṇu Himself in that form. After they had eaten, thou shouldst have eaten what was left as thy prasāda. When this course is strictly followed, that shows a real Vaishṇava. But when it is followed for the sake of show, fame or gain, it is as good as not done. Houses of show, fame or gain, Yajñeśa, are not our houses. What pleases God is sacrifice made without motive (sātvika-dāna)."

Yajñeśa heard this and was ashamed. "Lord," he prayed lowly, "I am undone, extend to me forgiveness, and accept me." "Son, listen," said Rāmānuja, "thou shalt make amends by daily washing clean the clothes of the Vaishṇavas here, and thus be saved." So commanding, Râmânuja left Ashta-sahasra-grâma with his disciples and by way of Tirukkôvalûr or Dêhali-nagara,—where he visited the ancient shrine of Trivikrama and the Three First Âzhvârs<sup>1</sup>—reached Kâñchî. He first entered the monastery of Kâñchî-pûrṇa, who was still living, and prostrated himself before the venerable sage, dedicating a verse to his memory :—

श्रीमत्काञ्चीपुनिवन्दे कमलापतिनन्दनम् ।
वरदाङ्घ्रिसदासङ्करसायनपरायणम् ॥

The joy of Pûrṇa at seeing Râmânuja covered with glory, knew no bounds. He led him lovingly to the Temple of Lord Varada—the God of Kâñchî, it will be remembered, who granted Râmânuja to Lord Ranga of Srirangam. As he reverently walked, he fell on the floor before the entrance-cupola, (the Gopura) and the Anai-kâtta deity there. He entered the gate and washed himself in the holy pond Ananta-saras. With the twelve holy names of God he consecrated his body next, and visited Jñâna-p-piân (Varâha) in the outer enclosure. Proceeding further, he bowed successively to the Âzhvârs, Bali-pîtha, and the Jaya-vijayâs, the celestial Door-keepers. Wind-ing round, he saluted Âdi-ṣesha or Ananta, and the Holy Ant-hill, and the great hall to the east of it where Yâmunâ's gracious eyes had for the first time descended on him and elected him as the future Minister of the Faith. Here he repeated the memorial verse for Yâmunâ :—

नमोनमोयासुनाय यासुनायनमोनमः ।
नमोनमोयासुनाय यासुनायनमोनमः ॥

Thence he visited Kariya-mâṇikyât-t-emberumûn and looked up reverently to the vimâna (tower) over the Holy of Holies, then bowed to the goddess of the culinary apartments,

<sup>1</sup> See their account in our Lives of Âzhvârs.

and then Perun-āṭṭi, the Consort of Lord Varada, dedicating to Her the verse:—

आकारत्रयसंपन्नामरविन्दनिवासिनीम् ।

अशेषजगदीशर्त्री वन्देवरद्वल्लभाम् ॥<sup>1</sup>

Thence Chakra-tt-āzhvān (the Archangel Discus), Garutmán<sup>2</sup>, called the Large-foot (Periya-tirunāḍi), Vishvakasena, the Lord of Hosts, and then ascending the steps of the Hasti-Giri (or Elephant-Hill), Lord Varada was reached, Kāñchī-pūrṇa all the time leading, and Rāmānuja following. Rāmānuja threw himself before his old Patron God, and receiving tirtha, prasāda, and Ṣaṭhakōpa, returned with mind steeped in divine bliss.

He informed Pūrṇa of his intention to proceed north to Tirupati to visit the Lord Venkata. Pūrṇa congratulated Rāmānuja on the joy that was in store for him by the intended trip, and bade him god-speed. He was journeying on thus with his adherents, when he lost his way. On looking round, a man was found drawing water from a well. "Show us the way, good man," he asked. "This way, gentlemen", said he showing the way. "In what way can I show my gratitude to this person?" Questioning himself thus, Rāmānuja prostrated himself before the pikotta-man. Seeing this, all the disciples did the same, astonished though at Rāmānuja's spiritual views of men and things,—uncommon of course to other men. The track shown was a straight one, and led unmistakably to the foot of the Holy Tirupati Hill. Here the Ten Āzhvārs are enshrined. Due obeisance was made to them and the Holy Hill itself, rising from there in sacred grandeur. Rāmānuja would not mount the hill for fear of desecrating it with the touch of his feet; and so remained at the foot for some time, when

<sup>1</sup> Meaning:—Spouse beloved of Varada, praise to Thee.

—In traits Three, perfect,—In Lotus ever abiding, —Mother of all the worlds.

The Three Traits are Ananyārhat-va, Ananyaseshatva, and Ananya-bhōgatva, meaning the Three relationships in which souls stand to God, i.e. "Destined for God," "Dis-posable by God," "Enjoyable by God." These are mysteries of religion which can never be properly understood by means of even the best translations. Our first difficulty is the want of appropriate words.

<sup>2</sup> The Kerub.

Viṭṭhala-Dēva, the king of the Tondira country, struck with the fame of Rāmānuja, became his disciple, and brought to him abundant wealth, with which he established a village of thirty houses, with thirty small estates attached to each, and granting them to thirty deserving families attached to his band. named the village Ila Mandayam. The news that Rāmānuja had arrived reached the ears of the venerable Sṛīṣaila-Pūrṇa and others residing on the Hill. They swiftly descended and heartily greeting Rāmānuja, asked him to go up the hill with them to see the Lord Venkata (Appan). "Look, Sire," Rāmānuja addressed Pūrṇa, "the Ten Āzhvārs have remained at the foot without daring to tread on the Hill. How can I do so now? It satisfies me quite to remain with the Āzhvārs here, and do them services. "If you won't go, Rāmānuja," said Pūrṇa "neither shall we go." "Then be it as you will, Sire," so saying, Rāmānuja bathed, and proceeding to the Tamarind tree, at the foot of the Hill, did obseiance to the Holy Hill; and saying: "By the foot, he ascends,"<sup>1</sup> tremblingly climbed he. As he crossed the seven hills and dales, he enjoyed the charming panaroma of nature presented to his sight, the rills trickling down the hill slopes, vegetation low and high adorned with flowers of all imaginable colors and the hills and the valleys teeming with animal life—the most interesting and mischievous of these being the monkeys. Pūrṇa had gone in advance, and by the time Rāmānuja reached the Tiru-p-panyatta rock, he returned with Lord Venkata's tīrtha and prasāda, to welcome him. "Could not some youngster be deputed for this work, venerable Sire, instead of yourself coming to do me these honors?" asked Rāmānuja of Pūrṇa. He replied:—"Sire, I searched all the four corners of this place for one younger than myself. I could not find one. I am the youngest, hence I have come to welcome you." On hearing this language of humility on the part of a venerable person like Pūrṇa, Rāmānuja and his fol-

<sup>1</sup> पादेताभ्यारोहति. Paryankā-vidyā is one of the God-meditations taught by the Upanishads [vide No. 11, in the Table of the Vidyās, p. 129 of our Bhagavad-Gītā]. The aspirant to God, when he proceeds to Vaikunṭham is said to 'place his foot on the Holy Seat of God,' even as a child fearlessly treads on its mother's lap. See Kaushitaki Upanishat, 1st Chapter.

lowers expressed wonder, and humbly accepting the honors that had been brought, proceeded to the stone-fencing, where all the monks, recluses, acolytes, the elders and all the establishment attached to the Holy Fane, met him in a great body, and escorted him. Rāmānuja now came in sight of the Fane itself, and prostrating himself before the Vaikunṭha-gate, bathed in the Konēri (a tank), decked himself with the Twelve Holy Marks, went round the four streets, drinking in with his eyes the handsome dwellings of the Faithful,—the ramparts, cloisters, collonnades,—then saw the flower-garden tended by Ananta-sûrî<sup>1</sup> who had gone to live there, upon his direction; there, from sheer delight, he embraced his faithful disciple, saying: “having nursed thee, I now reap the fruit.” He enjoyed the surrounding scene of gardens thick with Vakula, Pātala, Punnāga and other trees, fragrant and flowing with honey, affording eternal shade to weary travellers, and delighting their vision with bunches of flowers hanging from their branches, and entertaining their ears with strains of music poured forth by bees and all kinds of beautiful-plumaged birds. Here and there embosomed in the gardens, were cool ponds, covered with white and violet lotuses, in the midst of which swam and danced cranes and storks and all sorts of water-birds, in all the voluptuousness of nature’s bounty. Passing on from these bewitching scenes and songs, he went to Varāha’s Shrine, before which he bowed and then to the gate of Arār-āra-cchūzhndān and the Attāṇi Tamarind Tree, and then the Bali-pillar, and then the pavilion called Yamunaitthurairr. He then sipped the holy water of Svāmi-Pushkarinṭ, <sup>1</sup> Some inscriptional information may be useful to our readers: [P. 24, Vol. III, Epigraphia Carnataca, by B. L. Rice] —“It records the grant of Mandya, otherwise called Krishnarāyapura, to Govinda-Rāja, a descendant of Anantāchārya, on whom (the god) Venkaṭesa (of Tirupati) had placed the garland. Anantāchārya (or Sûri) it appears, was a disciple of the reformer Rāmānujāchārya, and the only one among his disciples who volunteered to accept the duty of daily preparing the garlands for the God Venkaṭesa of Tirupati. This he did solely from bhakti or devotion to his guru.” His memorial verse is as follows:—

“आम्नायवाचामपिमृग्यभूमा श्रीवेकटक्षमाधरशुद्धामा ।

देवोनुभावप्रददातियस्मै स्वजम्भजेऽनन्तगुरुन्तमार्गम् ॥”

entered the gate Ṣanbaka, visited in order Maḍai-ppalli (cook-rooms), Yāga-śāla and Tīru-mā-maṇi-maṇḍapa, Vishvaksena and Vēṅgaḍa-tt-ari (Nṛisimha). Here he looked up reverently at the Ānanda nīlaya vimāna, (cupola over the Holy of Holies), crossed the Kulaṣekhara threshold, until at last his vision was blessed with the Blissful Image of Śrīnivāsa within—the God in the Heart—resplendent with all the Holy Weapons and Ornaments, and Śrī in His Bosom.<sup>1</sup> “Abode of Grace (Śrīnivāsa)!” Rāmānuja exclaimed, “I have fallen at Thy Holy Feet,” and so saying, he stretched himself before God, and rising, stood transfixed before the Beatific Spectacle, with hands raised and folded. Tīrtha and prasāda were given, which he received in all humility and stayed to see the ablution-ceremony (Tirumañjanam), and the Bali-festival of Azhaga-p-pirān. “This is indeed Heaven,” he cried, “this is indeed the abode of angels; I must not stay here long lest I desecrate the Holy Place.” “But three days in a Holy Shrine, the visitor ought to stay,” remonstrated Pūrṇa. “So be it,” said Rāmānuja, and after three days were over, he walked into the Shrine, Pūrṇa leading, to take leave. As he stood before Lord Śrīnivāsa, a voice came from Him (i.e., the Image): “Have we not already conferred on thee in our Southern House (=Śrīrangam) both the kingdoms, the material as well as the spiritual (Ubhaya-vibhūti)?” “Thy pleasure, Almighty!” responded Rāmānuja; and descended the Holy Hill with Pūrṇa.

In the Lower Tirupati, Rāmānuja sojourned for a year in the house of Śrīṣaila-pūrṇa, partaking of his food there and reading with him the Rāmāyaṇa, the first of the Itihāsas. Here he found Govinda—his maternal cousin—engaged in doing all kinds of services to Pūrṇa. One day, Rāmānuja found him prepare the bed for his Guru, and sleep on it first himself. He reported this strange conduct of Govinda to Pūrṇa, who sent for him and asked for an explanation, enquiring further what punishment a disciple, who so behaved, deserved?

<sup>1</sup> Śrī=the Logos=the Sophia=the Son in the bosom. Cp: John I, 18. “The only-begotten Son who is in the bosom of the Father.” See Topics 135 and 137 in our Divine Wisdom.

Govinda submissively said: "Such an act, Sire! surely deserves perdition, but listen. If by my trying your bed myself beforehand, I make myself sure there be nothing in it rough or knotty which may press against your soft body, sure there be no insect to bite and disturb you when you sleep, it matters little if I go to hell." Rāmānuja was delightfully astonished at this strange explanation, and his love towards Govinda increased.

On another day, Rāmānuja had gone out on a visit to Pūrṇa's Holy Garden; while he was returning, on the way he observed Govinda put his fingers into the fangs of a snake, and withdrawing them go to bathe, and proceed to Pūrṇa's house to perform the usual services. Feeling curious at this unusual act of Govinda's, he questioned him. He explained that he saw the snake open its mouth as he approached and he found, on examination, that it had a thorn on its tongue. He extracted the same from it to relieve the suffering creature, and then went about his business. "What a tender heart possesseth thou, Govinda!" said Rāmānuja to him, struck with wonder.

The reading of the Holy Rāmāyaṇa was now finished.<sup>1</sup> And Rāmānuja humbly begged Pūrṇa's permission to return to Srirangam. You have come so far, noble soul," said Pūrṇa, "what have I done for you?" "Sire," answered Rāmānuja, "when I learnt that our dear Govinda went astray, it caused chārya, that one day when he was engaged in the service of God Venkaṭeśa at Tirupati, the God was heard to say to him, "Give me water, Tāta!" whence he acquired the name of Tātāchārya.

<sup>1</sup> The following inscriptional notes will be useful:—[pp. 28-29, Vol. III. Epigraphia Carnataca, by B. L. Rice]:—"The grant in this case was made, it is said, to a grandson of Sṛisailapūrṇa or Tātāchārya, who had received the name of Tāta from (the God) Venkaṭeśa (of Tirupati), and was guru to the author of the Bhāṣya; (meaning thereby Rāmānujāchārya, who wrote the Visiṣṭhādvaita-vedānta-bhāṣya). The reference here is to the story about Sṛisailapūrṇa, known as Bhūri-Sṛisailapūrṇa (in Tamil, Periya Tirumalai Naṁbi), the maternal uncle of Rāmānuja-

The following memorial verse, recited even now by all Śrivaishnavas before commencing Rāmāyaṇa, was dedicated to Pūrṇa. पितामह स्यापिपितामहाय प्रचित्तसादेशफलप्रदाय । श्रीभाष्यकारोत्तमदेशिकाय श्रीशैलपूर्णायनमो नमस्ते ॥ He is said to have explained the Rāmāyaṇa in 24 different ways, or with 24 different meanings, to Rāmānujāchārya.

me heartache ; I was pondering how to reclaim him, when you, Sire, fulfilled my heart's wish by circumventing the poor heretic, by preaching to him the True Faith, pointing out to him the dangers of the path he had strayed into and otherwise convincing him of the Truths of our Religion : and thus by destroying the perverse notions he had formed in his wandering mind, restored him to our holy fold. What better achievement can be effected than this ? Permit me to ask yet another favour of you, Sire,—can you part with him, and let me have him ?” Without a moment's thought, “ come, Govinda,” called Pârṇa, “ thou art from this moment, Rāmānuja's own. I make a free gift of thee to him. Go with him and be to him, I command, all that thou hast been to me. Nothing less will please me.”

Govinda said not a word, but followed Rāmānuja, after prostrating himself before his Guru. They all now left Tirupati, and visited on their way home the Holy Places of Ghatikā-chalan, Tiru-p-putkuzhi—where the holy well Gridhra Saras and other holy waters are situate—, and Tiruvelukā, and in due course reached Kāñchî, whereto he was welcomed as usual by Sage Kāñchî-pârṇa.

Govinda was found to grow cheerless, and was day by day losing health. Rāmānuja was watching him decline ; and divining that separation from his beloved Âchârya must be gnawing at his heart, producing all the outward symptoms of grief, he thought it prudent to send him back to Tirupati. So, he bade him depart, giving him two Srîvaishnavas as escorts to see him safe to his destination. Govinda reached Tirupati, and stood outside his Âchârya's house, in mute devotion. The attendants entering informed Srisaila of the return of his old disciple,—who was standing at the door. Pârṇa was displeased and indignantly cried :—“ Let the mad fellow depart. He ought not to cross my threshold.” Pârṇa's wife watched this and interposing begged her husband that one who had come so far and hungry and tired, should not be so summarily dismissed, but that he might be permitted to have rest and food “ No,” gruffly said the husband, “ no such consideration can be shown to a sold thing. A sold cow cannot be given grass. Let him be off."

---

Govinda spoke not a word, and tired and hungry as he was, he left with the two Śrīvaishnavas immediately, and reaching Kāñchī—where Rāmānuja was still sojourning—stood before him like a dumb statue. The Śrīvaishnavas told Rāmānuja all that had taken place at Tirupati. Rāmānuja admired the farsightedness on the one hand of Śrīsaila, and on the other, the implicit obedience of Govinda, whom he gradually won over, with kind treatment and sage counsels to himself. Govinda thus became in time reconciled to his new environments.

Rāmānuja now bade adieu to Kāñchī and Pūrṇa, and duly taking leave of Lord Varada, left the place, and in due time returned to Śrīrangam. He was met by all the notables, elders and dignitaries of Raṅga's Fane, and conducted thereto with joyful ceremony. "Hast thou, beloved, visited My North Abode (Tirupati)?" thus enquired Lord Ranga of Rāmānuja, who stood reverently at the door; and bestowing on him tirtha and prasāda, bade him go to his old monastery and resume his holy ministry to the growing congregation.

---

CHAPTER XIX.

GOVINDA'S CHARACTER.

Thus did Rāmānuja make his first holy pilgrimage, and was now settled again for another term in Srīrangam, imparting instruction to his followers on the holy science of Vedānta, both in Gīrdṇa and Dīrṇuḷu. Govinda, amongst them, drank deeply of this knowledge, and felt more and more attracted to Rāmānuja, in mind as well as in heart,—an attachment which was enhanced moreover by the fascination of Rāmānuja's glorious person and services rendered to him, with unflagging solicitude.

One day, Rāmānuja was conducting his ministry in a large assembly of the faithful, when the latter applauded Govinda for his estimable qualities, such as wisdom devotion, self-abnegation, and devotedness to his spiritual preceptor. Govinda, all the while, nodded assent. Rāmānuja observing, questioned: "How is it, Govinda, whilst it is seemly for others to heap plaudits on thee for thy perfections, thou dost not think it unseemly to accept them all? When others exalt us, we must not allow ourselves to be piqued, but profess humility. That would be more becoming indeed!" "Noble Sire," said Govinda, "pardon me if I explain to you why I nodded assent. Their praise means:—'Dog, thou art,—ganitrus seeds round thy neck,—running hither and thither with pot-fulls of water to Kālahasti-gods!, To this I must nod 'yes.' Their praise next means.—'Divine thou art, that thou hast been redeemed from evil paths by our Saviour Rāmānuja—a very God on earth. Not like ourselves, but sunk as thou were in abysmal depths of rottenness, thou hast been lifted by Rāmānuja, and elevated to a state where thou hast good reason to exclaim: 'Who is equal to me on earth? Who is equal to me in heaven?', Heart! good, good, glory thou hast won.' To this again I must nod 'yes.' For where their eulogy of me is but commendation of yourself and your glory on earth, I have no other alternative but to say 'yes.' On hearing this, Rāmānuja was simply enchanted with Govinda, and saying, 'good, good', drew him warmly to his bosom, and cried:—

---

"Govinda! embrace me that I may become as enlightened as thou art. By this embrace, convey to me some of thy grace."

One day, Govinda was found standing at the door of a strumpet's, stupefied as it were. This looked strange to people who passed that way. News of it reached Râmânuja. He sent for him and asked: "what made thee, brother, linger at the doors of infamy?" "Sire," he said, "the inmates, there whoever they were (I do not know), were singing your praises. This fascinated me so much that I was rooted to the spot, and so long as the music of your praise rang in my ears and lifted me into bliss, I could not stir from the spot." Râmânuja made inquires whether they were really hymning his praises there (talâtṭu), and found it was true. "An angel on earth, thou art, Govinda! can such love as thine be found on this dust?" exclaimed Râmânuja.

It is written that Govinda was an extraordinary soul, who had realized in his life what it was to lead a spiritual life. This was further displayed in a crowning event in his chapter of life. In Râmânuja he realized God, ever-present. This presence made him ever feel that there was neither solitude nor darkness. God in Râmânuja's form ever filled his outer eye as well as his mental vision. Hence he felt no solitude. Constant spiritual illumination and light of God filling all space made anything like night or darkness impossible for him. He never left Râmânuja, and was ever engaged in listening to his expositions of the Divine Science. One day, while they were so engaged, Govinda's mother found occasion to enter the hall and within Râmânuja's hearing informed her son that his wife had come of age. Govinda told her: "If so, mother, let her come when there is solitude and darkness." But the mother waited for days and failing to find her son in 'solitude' and in 'darkness,' complained to Râmânuja about his waywardness and probable unwillingness to keep house with his wife, in the manner of the world. Râmânuja thereon called on Govinda to abide by his mother's pleasure, and for one night at least, to remain with his wife. He bowed assent. And they made feast for the nuptial ceremony, and put Govinda and wife together in a bed-room and went their way. Left alone with his wife, he began a discourse on theology and theosophy, and all the night through preached to her, God and His Glories, His Riches and His Wonders, His Blissful Presence in the heart and His Love to His Creatures, and so on himself, as he preached, revelling in the rapturous enjoyment of God. It was now morning, and relatives came to offer congratulations on the happy state of the couple. But the mother was aware, by overhearing, what had all night transpired within doors. "How is it, son," remonstrated the mother, "you seem to have been engaged otherwise with your wife. We could hear a regular religious sermon in a nuptial chamber!" "Mother," replied Govinda, "when God is in my heart, and is everywhere present, and ever watching me, how can I escape from Him, and feel lonely enough to be able to do any other work than that of His contemplation, and praise? With no solitude, no secret act is possible; with no darkness, no dark act is possible." This interview between son and mother was reported to Rāmānuja. "Govinda," he said, calling him to his side, "so, thou hast passed the greatest ordeal which can be put upon a pure soul like thee. Thou canst never be a worldling, seeing how thou hatest things of that sort. But, come, Śāstras require every man to belong to some one definite Order<sup>1</sup>; and as thou canst not be a householder, be of the Order of the Sannyāsin. This was exactly the wish of Govinda, and he begged that he be so ordained at once. It was done, and Rāmānuja conferred upon him his own name of Emberumānār. "That, noble Sire," said Govinda, "is too great an honor to put upon an humble creature like me. Bless me with a name which a shadow like me deserves. "Then", gracefully said Rāmānuja, "let it be Embār, the shadow (or abbreviated form) of Emb(erumān)ār."

---

<sup>1</sup> अनाश्रमीनसंतिष्ठेत् [Yati-dharma-samucchaya.]

CHAPTER XX.

DEVARÂT.

With Râmânuja and his exemplary adherents, like Govinda, days were thus passing in Divine Discourses, Divine Incidents, and Divine Occupations. In a previous chapter we left Yajña-mûrti, re-named A. P. Emberumânâr,<sup>1</sup> after his conversion by Râmânuja. To this sage some incidents happened about this time. A number of Śrīvaishnavas from a foreign land came on a visit to Śrīrangam and inquired of the street-goers where the monastery of Emberumânâr was located. "Which Emberumânâr?" they asked. The travellers feeling strange, asked whether there were two such sages for the Faith? "No, but here is A. P. Emberumânâr bearing that name, a name after Râmânuja. Hence our question. If you mean Râmânuja himself, there is his monastery." So instructed, the travellers found their way to Râmânuja. This conversation however accidentally reached the ears of A. P. Emberumânâr; and it grieved him much to think that he should be confounded with Râmânuja. "No such confusion," he thought, "would have arisen, had I not lived apart from Râmânuja in a separate monastery; and that with his name, as if I were a rival here set up against him! My dwelling hence ought not to stand." So saying, he immediately pulled it to pieces; and hastening to Râmânuja, clasped his feet, crying: "Oh, my Holiness! was it not enough that this sinful soul of mine had in all the past eternity been estranged from Thy Holy Feet, and why should this alienation yet persist?" "Beloved," said Râmânuja, "thou art talking in riddles; what is the matter with thee? Why art thou in such great affliction?" "Holy Sire," said he, after narrating to him the street-conversation of travellers and how it affected his reputation, "no more can I live apart from Thee—a contingency this, which gives occasion for mistakes which are injurious to the well-being of my soul, and which jeopardize its eternal interests. My soul can only thrive by being made to live ever with thee and move about as the marks of thy sole and as thy shadow ; and to be allowed to do thee every service." "Be it as thou willest," said Râmânuja, graciously lifting the prostrate form of Devarât, for whom he composed a work called Nityam, or the method of worshipping God, and appointed him to the daily-worship-duty in the math. From that day forth, he never left Râmânuja's side, and drank deep all the precious truths of philosophy and religion which flowed like honey from Râmânuja's holy lips. These sterling truths of the Vedânta, he embodied in two short treatises of his, composed in Tamil verse, called Jñâna-sâra, and Pramâya-sâra.<sup>1</sup> The substance of these works is (1) that to the true disciple, the Teacher himself is God visible, and (2) that services at his feet are the crowning joy of the soul.

<sup>1</sup> Called Devardja-muni, or Devardî in Samskrit.

---

---

<sup>1</sup> These have been latterly commented on by Maṇavāla Mahā-muni-gal [A. C. 1870. No. 39 in the Hierarchic Table of our Lives of Âzhvârs.]

---

CHAPTER XXI.

ŚRÎ-BHÂSHYA AND OTHER WORKS.

Of the most tried fidelity and consummate learning, were now his four disciples, viz., Kûrêsa, Dâsarathi, Dêvarât and Embâr (Govinda). There were countles others, of course, in his congregation. Daily classes on theological subjects were conducted. As they were reading St. Nammâzhvar's Tiruvâymozhi, they came across the verse:—I-lingat-titta-purânattirum, Śamaṇarum Śâkkiyarum &c, [IV-10-5] i.e. Diverse faiths, as taught by the Liṅga-purāṇa (=Śaiva), the Śamaṇas (Jainas) and Śâkyas (Bauddhas), &c. And they discussed the defects of these systems, as also those of the advaita dictum that liberation (moksha) is made sure on the mere knowledge of the meaning of such Vedic texts as Tattva-masi,—Thou art That, i.e. Thou, Soul, art That, God; of the system of those who maintain that not mere knowledge alone, but works as well as knowledge, combined, bring about deliverance (moksha). None of these systems, they argued, have hit the true spirit of the Vaidika-religion, i.e. Vedânta and that where they have hit the truth, it is partial. The final verdict of the Vedas is: By love to God is emancipation (moksha) to be won. Love to God or God-love is what is intended by such terms as Vedana, Dhyāna, Upāsana and Bhakti. Such love is fostered by good works and knowledge of God. Mere knowledge of God as learnt from Vedic texts is inefficacious, as also are good works done without a heart for God. Whereas knowledge and good works are calculated to lead to love, and love alone secures salvation (moksha), knowledge or good works, without love, jointly or separately, cannot directly lead thereunto. Thus they discussed, and arrived at a decision that a true interpretation of the Vedânta, accordant with these views, should be systematically made and Râmānuja accordingly sat down to prepare a standard work embodying an exhaustive refutation of monism (advaita) and similar theories and a consequent defence of Viśiṣṭādvaita or qualified monism.

Kûrêsa was selected to help Râmānuja in this grand task. Before he began, Râmānuja enjoined upon Kûrêsa that if in the course of his reducing to writing his dictation, he should find anything not agreeing with his views, he should cease writing. Thus was Śrī Bhāṣya, the stupendous standard work on Viśiṣṭādvaita philosophy of the Vedānta—or a commentary on Brahma-Sūtras—begun to be written. As the work was progressing, Rāmānuja dictated a passage wherein he gave the definition of soul (ātma = jivātma) as that which is conscious or that which has cognition alone as its distinguishing attribute. Here Kūrēṣa ceased writing, for to him such a definition, though valid, was as good as no definition, inasmuch as the most essential characteristic of the soul, namely, its allegiance or leigeship to God (Śēṣatva), was a serious omission; and that such an all-important omission was tantamount to defining the soul as identical with the body itself<sup>1</sup>; for no basis for true religion was raised by merely apprehending the soul as that which is characterised by consciousness, unless the soul is also the sole property or possession of the Universal soul, God. Defining soul as that which has consciousness merely, without any reference to its being essentially related to God, as quality is related to thing, or as property to a base, or as mode to substance, as light to the sun, or scent to the flower, amounted to tacitly ignoring such essential relationship; and that without this relation to God first emphatically asserted and defended, anything said of the soul was ineffective, inasmuch as a soul without God is non-existent, in the same way as without the sun, light is non-existent. What made the soul really soul was its indiscerptible relation to God, otherwise it is non-existent. And where was the beauty or utility in loading such a separated soul, or soul orphaned of God, with any number of attributes such as consciousness and bliss?<sup>2</sup> Such was the train of thought running in the mind of Kūrēṣa and hence, when Rāmānuja defined the soul as that which is conscious, he stopped transcribing the same. But Rāmānuja was absorbed in his thoughts; and continued dictating further but Kûrêṣa had come to a full stop. This incensed Râmânuja, who cried :—"Sir, if you mean to write the commentary on the Vyûsa-Sûtras (= Brahm Sûtras), you may do so," and kicked him and ceased dictating. But Kûrêṣa was neither taken aback nor ruffled but remained imperturbably cool and collected. But friends vexed him with the question : "How dost thou view this affront ?" "Comrades," he replied, "I have no view other than that I am my master's property (chattel), which he is at liberty to use or treat in any manner he thinks fit." Râmânuja, by this time, reflected over the whole position in his retreat; and it flashed on him that his omission to define the soul as that which is a belonging of God, was a grave mistake inasmuch as this essentiality of soul was the very foundation of his theology. If that were missed, all the superstructure was built on air. Kûrêṣa did well in ceasing to write to Râmânuja's dictation, but it was at variance with the right view of the question which Kûrêṣa knew, being a perfect savant as he was. Also Kûrêṣa's own behaviour after the harsh treatment was an actual illustration of the view he so rightly entertained. These thoughts converted Râmânuja's rage into repentance; and calling Kûrêṣa at once lovingly to his side, "Son, you are right," said he apologizingly; "now pray write down the true nature of the soul as that which is God's, and let us proceed with the rest of our work."

---

<sup>1</sup> Similarly the identity of Universal Soul with Individual Soul, of the Advaitin, is as good as materialism.

<sup>2</sup> We invite our readers to peruse the Chapter on soul, or Chit-prakāraṇa in the Tatva-traya by Yogi S. Pārthasarāthi.

In this manner did Râmânuja compose the standard works : Śrî-Bhāṣya, Vedānta-Dīpa, Vedānta-Sāra, Vedārtha-Saṅgraha, and Bhagavad-Gītā-bhāṣya. And thus did he fulfil one of the wishes of Yāmunāchārya.<sup>1</sup>

---

<sup>1</sup> Read p. 56.

CHAPTER XXII.

RÂMÂNUJA'S TRAVELS.

The worthies of Râmânuja's congregation, who had so long listened to his teachings and who had the good fortune as well to see all the tenets of his faith perpetuated in treatises, rose one day and reverently bowing to Râmânuja said:—"Holy Master, your system is now perfect, and it must be made known to the world at large. The ways to God are diverse, and confusing. Let the true way, you have discovered to us, be made accessible to all. Pray then undertake a tour of ministry and as a tour, it shall have the added object of visiting Holy Shrines." "So be it," said Râmânuja, and representing his intention to Lord Ranga, he obtained his permission. With his elect, he left Srîrangam, and visited Tiru-k-kudandai (Kumbhakonum) and other places in the Chôla-maṇḍalam, and won victories there by theological disputations. Thence he bent his steps to Tiruvâli-Tirunagari, the nativity of St. Parakâla or Tirumangai-Âzhvâr.<sup>1</sup> Here an interesting incident happened. Râmânuja was devoutly making his round of several holy shrines encompassing the Central Shrine Tirunagari, when he met a Chandâla woman approaching. Râmânuja, in order to avoid pollution by her proximity, commanded her to hold off, so that he might pass on. But she without moving away addressed Râmânuja and said:—"Sire, which side shall I move? Here before me stands thy holy self, a Brâhman whom I cannot approach lest I pollute thee by my nearness. Behind me is the Holy Shrine Nîl-nîlâmuttam (=Tiruk-kappapuram); to my right are the Tirumanai-kollai (where St. Tirumangai waylaid the Lord) and Tiruv-arasu (the Pipal tree used by the St. as his watch tower); and to my left is Lord Tiruvâli-Manavâlan. There is thus purity all about me here, which side then can my impurity turn?" Râmânuja was struck dumb at this unexpected answer from an unexpected quarter. "Forgive me, madam," he said, "nor did I divine such spirituality in a low-caste woman as thou art. But for all that thou art holier than myself. So saying he administered to her the holy Vaishṇava sacraments; and allotted her a place in the Shrine, where her image is to this day seen and revered by all the visitors. Thence he turned to the south, going to Tīrumāl-irun-jōlai (10 miles north of Madura), and other Shrines, in the Pāndya-maṇḍala and held disputations there with the learned on philosophy and won laurels. Thence he travelled to Tiru-p-pullāni (Darbhāsayanam near Rāmnād), Śētu (or Rāmā's Bridge), and returned to Tiru-nagari, the birth-place of St. Nammāzhvār,<sup>1</sup> before whom he reverently repeated the Kāppinun-Siru-t-tāmbu of St. Madhura-Kavigal.<sup>2</sup> The Saint was delighted with Rāmānuja's devotion and blessed him with tīrtha, prasāda, and other honors. And Rāmānuja, dedicating the verse :

<sup>1</sup> Read our "Holy Lives of the Saints."

वकुळधवलमालावचसं, वेदबाह्यप्रबलसमयवादच्छेदनंपूजनीयम् ।

विपुलकुस्कनायंकारिसूनुं कवीशं शरणमुपगतोहं चक्रहस्तेभचक्रम् ॥ took leave of the Saint after visiting the Holy Tamarind Tree under which he is enshrined, and Lord Ādinātha resident there. The various Shrines in the vicinity were all visited, engaging in polemic controversies wherever he went and overthrowing his opponents.<sup>3</sup> Duly he reached Tiru-k-kurungudi (Kuranga-nagari about 20 miles south of Tinnevely), and visited the Lord Nambi. A voice came from him thus :—"Rāmānuja, we have often incarnated on earth, as Rāma, Kṛṣṇa, and so on in order to save mankind; but we have never been able to persuade people to Our ways as thou hast done. How dost thou do it?" "Almighty," said Rāmānuja, "if thou wilt ask me in the way that a disciple or a pupil is required to ask his teacher or tutor, I will answer thee." Nambi understood Rāmānuja, and commanded a throne being brought and begged Rāmānuja to nuja when he was asleep to a rock (called Paṇḍhāna-sila) on an islet in the Sindhu river, a mile from Kuranga-Nagari. Finding himself alone, he called for a disciple of his by name Nambi. But Lord Nambi appeared in the guise of this disciple, served him and led him to the Temple, where however He vanished out of sight, to Rāmānuja's great astonishment.

<sup>1</sup>, <sup>2</sup> Read the Lives of these Saints in our Lives of Āshvās.

<sup>3</sup> Another version has that Rāmānuja went from here to Tiru-v-anantapuram (Trivendram) first. And here he wished to introduce the Pāñcharātra mode of worship, but the Nambūdiri Brāhmanas, the priests of the Temple, objected. Rāmānuja persisting, the Lord Ananta-padmanābha, siding with His old priests, transported Rāmā-

be seated there and from that position answer the question. Râmânûja mentally placed his Âchârya, Mahâpûrna, on the throne and taking his stand before it, whispered into Lord Nambi's right ear thus :—

“Of all the mantras, the Mantra-ratna, and the Draya are great. Easily do they carry one to the Supreme State. These teach that the way of Resignation or Surrender to God variously called nyâsa, prapatti, saranâgati, is the most beneficial to man and compasses for him every good.”<sup>1</sup>

“Thus, Great God,” said Râmânûja, “by Thy own best instruments of salvation, have I prevailed upon the hearts of men.” Lord Nambi was mightily pleased with this declaration, and proclaimed that He was henceforth Râmânûjanai-nîlayân<sup>2</sup> Râmânûja gave Nambi the Holy Name of Śrīvaishṇava-Nambi and tendering his apologies<sup>3</sup> for what had occurred, left Kuranga-nagari.

From here Râmânûja entered into the Malayâlam (Malabâr) country, visiting the Shrines Tiruvaṇ-parisâram, Tiruvâttâr, and others and paid homage to Lord Ananta-padma-nâbha in Tiruvananthapuram (Trivendram), through the three doors of this Sanctum, and left the place after overcoming opponents and establishing a Râmânûja-Maṭh there with the help of the then king, who became a disciple of his. He proceeded north along the western sea-coast of the Peninsula to such Holy Shrines as Mathura (Muttra), Nanda-vraja, Govardhana, Brindâvana, and others and Sâlagrâma, Muktinâtha-Kshetra,

१ सर्वेषामेवमन्त्राणा मन्त्ररत्नं शुभावहम् ।
सकृत्स्मरणमात्रेण ददाति परमं पदम् ॥
मन्त्ररत्नं त्रयं न्यास प्रपत्तिश्चरणागति ।
लक्ष्मीनारायणायैति हितं सर्वफलप्रदम् ॥ [Pân̄cha-n̄dra].

On Mantra-ratna and Draya, consult Pp. xxii. Introd : to our Lives of Âchâryas.

<sup>2</sup> Means . “We who have Râmânûja as Our own.”

<sup>3</sup> This is embodied in the verse .

उपचारापदेशेन कृतानुहरहर्मया ।

अपचारानिमान् सर्वान् क्षमस्व पुरुषोत्तम ॥

Gandakī-river; ("Sālagrama Hill" is stated in another work. It must be a part of the Himālayas. Vaikundam, Dvāraka, and Ayodhya, Badarik-āśrama), Naimisāranya and Pushkara, and thence on to Bhaṭṭi-mandapa; (this is probably Bhaṭṭi-mandala near Lahore), and Kāshmir, the seat of Sarasvatī, the Goddess of Learning, was now reached. Sarasvatī requested Rāmānuja to expound the meaning of the Vedic passage: तस्ययथाकव्यासम् पुण्डरीकमेवमक्षिणी.<sup>1</sup> Rāmānuja did so at great length and embodied it in the verse:—

कपिस्त्वदित्य कपिब्रितिकिरयैरित्यपिकपिरगभस्तीत्याम्नातस्सकपिरमुनाऽस्तंयदिहत ।

प्रतीमःकव्यासदिवसकरतेजोविकासितं सुपद्मं श्रीमत्वादगणिभगवच्चक्षुरूपमा ॥<sup>2</sup>

On hearing this, Sarasvatī said:—"Rāmānuja! Śankara had ere this unhappily interpreted this as "monkey's posteriors"<sup>3</sup> and I was much grieved at his perverse understanding and warped heart. Thou hast now wiped my tears" So saying, she placed Rāmānuja's Śrī-Bhāṣhya<sup>4</sup> on her head, drew Rāmānuja to her breast, and gave him the title Bhāṣhya-kāra and handed him the Image of Haya-grīva for worship.

The pandits of the place, on seeing these special favors of Sarasvatī bestowed on Rāmānuja grew envious, and called upon him for a disputation. This was granted and in the end they were routed. The king of Kāshmir silently watched these events; and when he found the pandits discomfited, he looked upon Rāmānuja as no ordinary mortal and permitted himself to be enlisted into his fold. The king asked Rāmānuja to explain the Traditions on which he based his Visishtādvaita interpretation of the Brahma-Sūtras. Rāmānuja said that the old Traditions were the Bodhāyāna-Vṛitti, and the glosses by Tanka, Guhadeva, Kapardi, Bhāruchi, and others. The king went with him and the pandits into his library, and had a search

<sup>1</sup> Chāndogya Up. I-6, 7. The readers are referred to p 32, where the controversy with Yādava is fully explained.

<sup>2</sup> Sun is called Kapī, because he drinks (pibati) water (lam). Śruti itself explains Kapī to mean sun's rays:—" Kapīḥ qubhasti tñjanam." Kapy-āsa is then that which, by rays, is blown (asa=vilāsane=to expand); and that is the lotus. A full-blown beautiful lotus is thus a simile for the beautiful eyes of God.

<sup>3</sup> Read Śankara-bhāṣhya on the Ch: Up: here. His interpretation is a reproach on his reputation as a Vedic scholar.

<sup>4</sup> Rāmānuja Bhāṣhya on Brahma-sūtras was so named, i.e., Śrī-Bhāṣhya.

made for such works. They were found, and on a perusal it was found that Rāmānuja's exposition was correct. Rāmānuja and Kūrēṣa took this opportunity of studying the Bodhāyana-Vṛitti better, as the Pandits would not allow the work to be taken away by him. Rāmānuja was anxious to secure the work, but objections to his taking the book away were insurmountable. He felt grieved, but Kūrēṣa assured him that he had retained the cardinal passages in his memory, and could reproduce the same whenever wanted. This allayed Rāmānuja's anxiety; and he allowed the Vṛitti, though very reluctantly, to be restored to the Library, at the King's request, as the latter knew his Pandits would otherwise give trouble and would not hesitate even to kill Rāmānuja.<sup>1</sup> And yet the Pandits resented all this, as their prestige suffered so much; but being powerless to openly harm Rāmānuja, as the king was already on his side, they entered into a dark conspiracy to kill Rāmānuja by black magic. This

<sup>1</sup> The following extracts from Max Muller's Theosophy or Psychological Religion are interesting to the student of philosophy.—“Rāmānuja does not represent himself as stating a new theory of the Vedānta, but he appeals to Bodhāyana, the author of a Vṛitti or explanation of the Bhrama-sūtras, as his authority, nay he refers to previous commentaries or Vṛitti-kārās on Bodhāyana as likewise supporting his opinions. It has been supposed that one of these, Dramida, the author of a Dramida-bhāṣya or a Commentary on Bodhāyana, is the same as the Drāvida whose Bhāṣya on the Chhāndogya-Upanishad is several times referred to by Śaṅkara in his commentary on that Upanishad, and whose opinions on the Vedānta-Sūtras are sometimes supported by Śaṅkara (See Thibaut S.B.E. XXXIV, p. xxii)” [P. 100.]

“*** We have thirdly the commentaries of Śaṅkara, Bodhāyana, Rāmānuja and many others. These commentaries, however, are not mere commentaries in our sense of the word, they are really philosophical treatises, each defending an independent view of the Sūtras, and indirectly of the Upanishads.” [P. 101.]

“** I have generally followed the guidance of Śaṅkara, as he seems to me to carry the Vedānta doctrine to the highest point, but I feel bound to say that Professor Thibaut has proved that Rāmānuja is on many points the more faithful interpreter of the Vedānta-Sūtras. **** Nor was Rāmānuja a mere dissentient from Śaṅkara. He claimed for his interpretation of the Vedānta the authority of philosophers more ancient even than Śaṅkara, and, of course, the authority of the Vedānta-Sūtras themselves, if only rightly understood. Rāmānuja's followers do not possess now, so far as I know, manuscripts of any of these more ancient commentaries, but there is no reason to doubt that Bodhāyana and other philosophers to whom Rāmānuja appeals were real characters and in their time influential teachers of the Vedānta” [P. 313.]

came to his knowledge; but spiritual giant as he was he remained undaunted, and simply watched how events would develop themselves. They resorted to black magic, but instead of their plans succeeding, it had a contrary effect; for they were all suddenly seized with madness, and began to rave and play such antics, as to be ridiculed by all. The king saw this, and pitying the poor wretches, approached Râmânuja, and falling at his feet, implored him to relieve them, as he could not look on their sufferings. Râmânuja, by a simple act of his will, cured them; and the king made them members of the Faith, and escorting Râmânuja with all his staff, a few stages on his return journey, took leave and joined his capital.

Râmânuja took the road towards Vârânasi (Benares), which he reached in due time, and bathing in the Holy Gangâ (Ganges), and visiting the Lord of Kandamennum Kadinagar<sup>1</sup> proceeded south to Purushottama-Kshêtra (Jagannâtha or Pâri, on the east-coast of the Indian Peninsula). Here also were disputations held on philosophy and religion, Râmânuja coming off victorious; and a Râmânuja-Math also was established. Here, on his attempt to introduce the worship, as laid down in the Pañcharâtra, into the Temple there, the priests objected; but as Râmânuja still resolved to reform the practices prevalent there which were not cleanly and to his liking, Lord Jagannâtha is said to have appeared to him in his dream and prevailed upon him not to attempt the reforms, as his priests were much attached to Him with their old ways of worship, which therefore he might not disturb. And when Râmânuja awoke, he found to his surprise he had been transported all the way to Śrī-Kârma. Here he paid homage to the Lord in the Kârma-form and journeyed on to Simhagiri (Ahobila), and other shrines. Winning his way throughout by polemical triumphs he finally arrived at Tirupati. Here a Śaiva-Vaishṇava controversy of a curious character had been waging.

St. Pôyâzhvâr, who lived centuries before Râmânuja, had sung of the Lord of Tirupati, as wearing both the Śaiva emblems, such as matted locks and serpent girdle, and the

<sup>1</sup> Deva-prayâg on the way from Haridvâr to Badarīnâth.

Vaiṣṇava ones, such as the Discus and the golden girdle, and the Saint expressed his wonderment at Viṣṇu having chosen to appear to him in this dual character of Hari-Hara, or Viṣṇu-Śiva.<sup>1</sup> On the authority of this verse, in all probability, the Śaivas made an attempt to claim Tirupati as their own exclusive Śaiva Shrine; but Rāmānuja contended it was Vaiṣṇava, but the Śaivas would not give in. Rāmānuja proposed that both Śaiva and Vaiṣṇava emblems, such as Trisūla and Damaruka, and Chakra and Śankha, be placed in front of Venkateśa's Image in the sanctum sanctorum, and the doors be closed and securely locked, after carefully examining the chamber that no one lay hidden there; and the character of the Deity might be determined by the choice of the emblems made by Him. This test was gladly agreed to by all. The emblems were accordingly prepared and placed before the Image. Next day, both the parties came in a body with eager expectations of their own opinion being realized. But when the doors were thrown open in full day-light and in the presence of the whole assembly, it was found that the Lord had assumed the Vaiṣṇava-emblems, with the Śaiva emblems lying unused on the floor. Rāmānuja's joy knew no bounds. He sang and danced, eyes streaming with tears of delight at the miraculous event and the Beatific Vision presented to his view. The Śaivas were thus ousted.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Read verse 63 of 3rd Tiruvandādi. "Tazh-Ṣadaiyum, &c." Nārāyaṇa includes Śiva. In Nārāyaṇa's (or Viṣṇu's) body, a place is assigned to Śiva in the same manner as his navel is assigned to the four faced Brahmā, and his bosom to Śrī or Lakṣmī (Logos). Read Bhagavad-Gītā xi-15 Pasyāmi, &c. and numerous other authorities. So then this dual appearance proved Viṣṇu, not Śiva exclusively, as Śaivas thought.

<sup>2</sup> A piece of Epigraphic Information is here annexed for the use of our readers.—

"We have received this year a very interesting report from the Epigra-phist to Government [1903-1904 A-C]

The Epigraphist has meanwhile inferred from a set of very dubious conclusions as to the ruined temple and Tiruchchānūr, that Tirupati temple was perhaps originally Śaiva in character. From the fact that the temple is mentioned in the inscriptions as Ṇangoyil and that the same word is used in the Śaiva Periyapurāṇam and in another inscription as the name of a temple which must certainly have been Śaiva and that another inscription says that the temple now in ruins was built as an accompaniment to the shrine at Tirupati, he first infers that the Tiruchchānūr temple must be Śaiva and that a fortiori the shrine at Tirupati for which the former was meant as an accompaniment, must also be a Śaivite one. We fear every link in this argument is hopelessly weak. Mr Venkayya has not shown satisfactorily that the Tiruchchānūr ruined temple was as a matter of fact, built as an accompaniment to the Tirupati temple whatever that expression may mean. The Ganga-Pallava inscription of Dantivikrama Varman which is said to prove this, he neither quotes from nor gives the contents of. This example will emphasize the necessity of the Government insisting upon a publication of all the inscriptions collected every year, so that independent scholars might work at them and deduce from them all the historical connection they are capable of yielding. Again it is not quite so certain that the Tiruchchānūr temple was solely Śaiva. It might most probably have been a combined Śaiva-and-Vishnu temple as the one at Chidambaram and many other places. It is a fact that many important Śaiva temples have a shrine of Vishnu towards the west, generally mentioned in the inscriptions as Melai Sri Kōil. At any rate the Tirupati temple was undoubtedly Vaiṣṇava in the 4th century during the reign of the Chola king Rājārāja, the great, who gave grants to the Vaiṣṇava God there. It must certainly have been at least claimed as Vaiṣṇava during the times of the three great Śaiva Saints, the authors of the Tetram, Sambandar, Appar and Sundarar, who sang Thirupparankunram, Tiruvannmiyur, Kalahasti and other places in the neighbourhood, and omitted all reference to Tirupati. That there was a long standing dispute as to the real character of the Deity of that place is certain. The old Vaiṣṇava Saint, Peyāzhvār, sings in the Iyarpā, that the God of Tirumalai wore the symbols of both Śiva and Vishnu and it is noticeable in his verse that he always mentions the Śiva emblem first. This dual character seems to have continued till the time of Rāmānjan in the 12th century, when this curious incident is related by the Tamil Rāmānujārya-Divyacharita (cf Pillailokanjiyar to have taken place. Rāmānjan was annoyed that owing to this dual character of the Deity, the Śivites worshipped him as their Nayanar or God. He therefore proposed a scheme by which to test which way the God leaned and said that the emblems of both Śiva and Vishnu should be placed in the innermost shrine which was to be carefully locked up till the morning and that according to the emblems the God should be found wearing in the morning, his real character was to be judged. When the Garbhagriha was opened in the morning the God was seen resplendent with the conch and the Śiva emblems were found carelessly thrown at his feet. After this explicit declaration by the divinity himself there could be no question as to his real nature and he has continued Vaiṣṇavite ever since. The facts go to show that if the Tirupati Temple was at all exclusively Śaiva, which seems to be unlikely, it must have been so considerably prior to the authors of the Tevaram. [Hindu]

(Continued) foot note on page 143.

Another extract:—“In his latest Report on Epigraphy, Mr. Venkayya has opined that there is an air of truth in the popular belief that the temple on the Tirumalai was originally a Śaivite one. In his “Iyarpa,” stanza 63, Pēyāzhvār distinctly mentions the dual appearance of the Image. The stanza referred to might be rendered into English thus —

“How wonderful! our Lord who is on the Sacred Hill (Tirupati) which is bathed by the great mountain streams surrounding it on all sides combines in himself the two forms (of Śiva and Vishnu) by his appearing with flowing matted

Rāmānuja made the circuit of the Shrine,<sup>1</sup> and descending the Holy Mount, did homage to the Āzhvāra enshrined at its base, and thence proceeding to Kāñchi and other Shrines such as Sri-perumbūdūr (his birth-place), Tiruvallikkeni (Triplicane) and Tiru-nir-malai, and thence crossing over to Madhurāntakam and the Holy Vakula-tree there, under which his Gurn Mahāpūrṇa gave him the first initiation, and thence on to Tiru-vayīndra-puram (Tiru-vendi-puram near Cuddalore), where he tendered his salutations to Lord Deva-nāyaka, and vanquished disputants wherever met, and thence on to Vīrā-nārāyaṇapuram, the Holy Place of sage Nātha-muni [the place where he sat for Yoga (meditation)] and Lord Manna-nar there, locks and high diadem, with the beautiful Mazhu . . and discus and with a serpent and a golden waistcord entwined (round his waist)."

Foot note on page 144—(continued).

Therefore, it is evident that the God of Tirumalai was worshipped as Vishnu in the days of the early Vaishnavite Saint Pēy-Āzhvār.

Clearer still is the allusion to the Vaishnava nature of the deity, in the classical Tamil poem "Silappadigāram," 1st Century, A.C., where the author describes the god as "standing on the top of Vēṅgaḍam, like a blue cloud with the conch and discus (which are compared to the sun and moon)" (Kādukāṇ-Kāḍai, ll. 41-51)

"M. N.", in his reply to Mr. Venkayya's rejoinder in the Hindu, has proved that in the days of the Dēvāram Hymnners, the temple might not have been Sāiva, and that Rājarāja, the great Chōla King, himself a Sāiva, has made grants to the Vishnu on the hill.

In the face of these explicit statements in early Tamil literature, it is really incredible how Tirumalai could be doubted to have perhaps been Sāiva. Let us hope that in the examination of the innermost prākāśa, more light will be thrown on this rather important question. [A. VAISHNAVA in Madras Mail, 9th December 1904]

<sup>1</sup> There is a legend related here. There was a person by name Tālpākkam Channayya. He was a favourite of God Śrinivāsa of this Shrine, so much so that when he sang hymns to Him, He kept time by dancing to it. Rāmānuja came to know this, and asked the devotee to kindly ascertain from his God whether he (Rāmānuja) may hope for Moksha (Salvation). Channayya, when he next sang and the God danced to him, reverently submitted to him Rāmānuja's petition. God answered:—"Certainly he shall be saved." "And I, Lord?"

asked Channayya. "No" was the answer. "But have I not sung to Thee, Lord, all these days?, protested Channayya. "But have I not danced to thee, son, as often as thou sangest?" retorted He. "Then I am undone, O Lord! Pray show me the way of salvation. By no means can I forfeit that state." The Lord answered: "Go to that Sanyāsi, our Rāmānuja, fall at His Holy Feet and win it. He is fit to give Moksha to whomsoever he will." This story illustrates that salvation is won, not by bargain, but by grace.

---

returned to his head-quarters, Srīrangam. He proceeded to the Temple to visit Lord Ranga, announcing his arrival ; and after the usual ceremonies, Ranga's voice came inquiring : " Art thou satisfied ? ". Rāmānuja answered : " Holy Lord, how can I be otherwise, when thy Blessed Vision is ever reflected in my mental mirror wherever I may be. I have but fulfilled Thy holy errand on earth." Ranga commanded tīrtha and prasāda to be given him. Rāmānuja thence bent his steps to his own monastery, his soul steeped in peace and bliss.

---

CHAPTER XXIII.

THE BIRTH OF VYĀSA-BHAṬṬA AND PARĀṢARA-BHAṬṬA.

Thus had our Bhāṣya-kāra<sup>1</sup> accomplished his second pilgrimage through Bharata-khaṇḍa. Those were days of religious rejuvenescence in India brought about by the inspired personality of our Rāmānuja. For his influence spread from house to house, village to village and throughout Bharata-land, and his spirit fanned the fire of religion, smouldering in human hearts.

Kūreṣa was the very soul and shadow of Rāmānuja. In erudition he was a savant; in conduct, he was a paragon of excellence. Never a day was he found remiss in all the duties of the day, classed as Abhigama, Upādāna, Ijyā, Svādhyāya and Yoga <sup>2</sup>.

We have already told our readers that Kūreṣa lived by alms; because he had given away his all at Kūra and come to Srīrangam to live with Rāmānuja.<sup>3</sup> One day, it rained all the morning till it was past the Sangara or the Upādāna time, which is set apart for excursions for collecting alms. Kūreṣa's strict rule it was, to beg each day's requirement at the houses of virtuous folk, and never to store a second day's provisions in his house. Prevented then by the rainy day from stirring out, Kūreṣa and his pious wife Āṇḍālamma fasted, after taking the usual bath, performing the morning sandhyā and other ceremonies and offering to his Chapel God, a fruit and some water,<sup>4</sup> which latter, sipped, being sacramental. It was now evening, and Kūreṣa, performing the evening sandhyā, never bestowed a thought for his hungry stomach, but devoutly went through a reading of the Tīru-vāy-mozhi (Prabandha) considering this as his manna, and thus went to sleep. But the wife

<sup>1</sup> See page 140 for Rāmānuja winning this name.

<sup>2</sup> A work recently published in Madras (1904) by D. T. Śrīnivāsa-chārya, called Pañcha-kāla-prakāśa gives full details of these five-fold day-occupations.

<sup>3</sup> See Chapter XIII.

<sup>4</sup> See Bhagavad-Gītā, IX, 26.

was awake and was sore grieved at heart that her god-like husband was fasting. As she sat, she heard the temple drums and bugles announcing that Lord Ranga was having his night-offering of food, called the Periya-avasaram. This disturbed her musings; and she gave vent to her feelings thus:—"Ranga, when thy bhakta is fasting, how canst thou revel thus in feastings?" A cry of distress like this was of course heard by the Lord; and the cry, it is said, pierced his ears like arrows.

Uttamanambi, a temple-functionary, was asleep on a pial; and he dreamt a dream in which Ranga appeared to him and commanded him thus:—"Nambi, my bhakta Kûrêsa is fasting; rise, go to my Temple, and carry on thy head the holy Aravaṇai-food which has just been offered me, in right processional style from the Temple to his house. Uttama-Nambi awoke, startled, and hastening to the Temple, did as commanded. As the music and other din of the procession reached Kûrêsa's doors, he was disturbed from his sleep, and awoke, wondering what was happening at that hour of the night; met the processionists and inquired of them what brought them there. Uttama-Nambi said: "Sire, Lord Ranga bid me carry you His holy food. Pray accept." Kûrêsa received the same devoutly but he would not have the whole quantity. He said to the messengers:—"Holy sires, I should not deprive the Lord of His income by disposing of this food as usual. But I cannot refuse it altogether, as it has been so graciously sent by Him. I should but take two morsels, one for myself, and the other for my wife. Lord Ranga has so fully made me His own that I do not stand in need of anything on earth. I thank you, sires; please retire with the remaining food to the Temple." After thus dismissing the Temple servants, Kûrêsa sat down and asked his wife whether she thought of any thing in particular when he was asleep. She confessed to him she did so. She said she envied Ranga enjoying his last sumptuous course of food for the day, while His bhakta was hungry. "Good lady," said Kûrêsa petulantly, "you should not have been thus guilty. Do not this again." And they both devoutly partook each, one of the two morsels that had been retained; and Kûrêsa went to bed again, somewhat out of humour with his wife. But he had a dream. Lord Ranga appearing spoke to him: "My beloved, the two morsels you have eaten, will be the seed for raising two precious sons in your family. They shall be considered as my own sons. As sons, I myself choose to appear in furtherance of my own future purpose, in the same manner as I chose to appear as Râma, the son of Dasaratha, and Kṛishṇa the son of Vasudêva." The dream was over. Kûresa awoke, and related it to his wife and others, and attended to his duties, quietly expecting events to develop in their own good time.

Some time went by. In due course, two sons were born to Kûresa as predicted by Lord Ranga. The ten days of puerperal sûtaka were over, but Kûresa never concerned himself about the name-giving and other sacramental rituals, which the Vedas require to be administered to new-born infants. His idea was that to his Râmânuja's spiritual family the children belonged, and it was for Râmânuja therefore to do the needful. Râmânuja, however, now made his appearance, accompanied by Govinda; and commanded him to bring the little ones to him. Govinda sped in all earnestness to Âṇḍâlamma, and lovingly hugging the two gems of babies, ran to Râmânuja, muttering all the way the Holy Dvaya-Mantra as a protective shield for the babies against evil influences; and lovingly lifted them up to Râmânuja. Râmânuja graciously scanned them with his love-moistened eyes, and observing the splendid appearance and glorious looks of the infants, blessed them heartily, and addressing Govinda, said:—"Brother, what didst thou? The smell of the Dvaya-Mantra comes to me from the babies." "Sire, yes," replied Govinda, "as I was conveying the precious charges to you, I shielded them with the power of that Mantra." "Then brother," commanded Râmânuja, "as thou hast constituted thyself the guardian of the bodies of these gems, thou shalt be the guardian as well of their souls. And these two infants are no other than the two sentences of the Dvaya itself, made manifest in their persons thus." So saying he stroked the infants with his hands, adorning them with the Pañch-âyudha ornament; and in due time made Govinda administer the Pañcha- samskâra, naming the infants Parâsara Bhattârya,<sup>1</sup> and Vyâsa-Bhattârya,<sup>2</sup> thus fulfilling another of the three wishes of his Great Guru, Yâmunâchârya.<sup>3</sup> Thus were two great luminaries for the Faith ushered into the world—in the wake of Râmânuja.

Uttama-Nambi, in a work called Lakshmî-Kāvya, composed by him, sings of them thus :—

पुत्रीकृतोरङ्गधुरंधरेण पराशरः कूरकुलप्रदीपः ।
 गोविन्दशिष्यस्सतुयामुनार्यमनोरथं पूरितवान् द्वितीयम् ॥
 कूरेशनन्दनं वन्दे व्यासाशरङ्गवासिनम् ।
 अनोरधितुवैशाखे जातं श्रीरामदेशिकं ॥

Another event also occurred about this time enabling Râmânuja to fulfil the remaining wish of his Great Guru Yâmunâ: to name some fit person by the name of Parânkusa or Nammâzhvâr in perpetuation of the memory of the Saint of that name.

The reader will recollect the redemption of Govinda by Śrîsaila-Pârṇa of Tirupati, described in a previous chapter. When Govinda joined the Vaishṇava-band, he felt so blessed in his regenerate life that he would not allow his newly awakened delight to rest in himself alone. So, he sought out his own brother by name Śiriy-Govinda-p-peremâl, and explained to him the beauties of the New Faith. He brought him to Pârṇa, who graciously accepted him as his disciple. Govinda and G. Perumâl had thus become spiritual associates as well, and had both come to live with Râmânuja at Śrîrangam.

The event which came about was that G. Perumâl had a son born to him, and this, to Râmânuja, was another valuable acquisition to his Faith. So he hurried to Perumâl's place, and blessing the child, named him Parânkusa<sup>4</sup>-Nambi. This

<sup>1</sup> See No. 32, in the Hierarchic Table of our Lives of Āchvârs.

<sup>2</sup> Śrî-Râma-ppillai is another name.

<sup>3</sup> See page 56.

<sup>4</sup> Parânkusa = St. Nammâzhvâr.

---

fulfilment of Yâmuua's third wish<sup>1</sup> was recorded by Uttama-Nambi in his Lakshmi Kāvya, thus —

गोविन्दराजान्वयजोमनीरी पराङ्कुशोयमुनैवमनस्यम् ।
अपाचकार प्रसभंनृतीयं विराजतेवृत्तमणिप्रदीप ॥

We shall close this chapter by asking our readers to remember the "three-finger-miracle" of Yâmuna, related in chapter IX and that the three fulfilments thereof by Râmanuja, on whom had devolved that sacred duty, were, in order, the composition of Śrī-Bhāṣya, the Commentary on the Brahma-Sūtras; the naming of two children in memory of Parāsara and Vyāsa; and a third child, in memory of St. Nammāzhvār.

---

<sup>1</sup> See page 56.

---

CHAPTER XXIV.

BHATTÂRYA.

Our readers, in this Chapter, will be treated to the interesting traits which the new luminary Parâsara Bhattârya, or simply Bhattârya, displayed as he grew.

Lord Ranga commanded the two little brothers to be conveyed to His Fane, and adopting them, as fashion required, as his own sons, had cradles swung there in His own chamber, called the Maṇattūṇ and Himself and His Consort Lakshmi taking care of them in every way. The Lord had willed that before He accepted the courses of daily food offered to him, the children should be first served; nay, that they should help themselves to what dishes they pleased by allowing them to toddle about to the place where the food in several dishes was spread before Him.

One day the children, as usual, stole about at pleasure and helped themselves to the viands that had been placed before Ranga that day as the special service of the Râja who then ruled. The priests were offended that day at the conduct of the children, and handling them somewhat roughly, conveyed them outside the Temple premises. That night the Râja had a dream. The Lord, appearing to him, declared: "I had just tasted your food-service. When the fools of my officiating priests interfered with my children, the Bhattars, preventing them from having their full share, and treated them roughly, I could not partake of thy food any more. I am this day not pleased with thee." The Râja awoke and making inquiries, found his dream to be correct, and strictly decreed that services should thenceforward be conducted in the manner which best pleased the Lord.

Bhattârya was now a boy of five years, and showed signs of extraordinary intelligence for his age. His father Kûrêsa was one day reciting the Decad of St. Nammâzhvâr, beginning with Neḷumârka-aḍimai (viii. 10. 1). In this Decad, the greatness of God's Saints is described. In the third verse, the description runs thus · Śiru-mā-manṣar " i.e. God's Saints are small-great. The boy, who was attentively listening to the recitation, stopped the father at this place, with the eager query : " Father, how can a thing be both small and great at one and the same time, for thou saidst small-great " " My dearest, what an unexpected question from a stripling like thee ! But it would be a hard task on my part to convince thee of the justness and beauty of the apparently contradictory terms, by resorting to learned discourses on it, based on Sāstras. But I shall try by other easier means to make thee understand this puzzling passage of our Holy Saint. Dost thou see our Sages of Śrīrangam, Śrīy-ācchān, A. P. Embērumānār and others like them ? See, they are small in stature, but very great in knowledge and wisdom. So, dost thou now see how contradictory things like small and great can yet be harmoniously combined in one and the same thing ? " The young questioner was satisfied.

The boy was a budding genius, as became evident from another incident which happened at about this time. There was a learned man by name Sarvajña-bhaṭṭa, who was proud of his erudition, and had successfully carried on a warfare of polemics in Vārāṇasi and other places ; and who had now arrived at Śrīrangam. To show to all how great a man he was, he installed himself in a sedan chair and paraded himself in the streets, with his followers before and behind, proclaiming his fame and titles, and announcing that he was the Sarvajña-bhaṭṭa, meaning one who is all-knowing. Bhaṭṭar, the boy, was at this time playing with the dust in the street. He heard the name Sarvajña dinning in his ears, and he got irate at it. " What ! " exclaimed he, " while there are such all-knowing giants amongst us, as Rāmānuja, Kūrēsa, Dāsarathi, Dēvarāt and others, who dare call himself by the proud name Sarvajña, all-knowing ? " So saying he took a handful of dust in his hand, and running up to the sedan, in which the Pandit was seated, spoke mockingly at him thus :—Halloo, man, stop, and answer me this before you step further. If you are all-knowing, as you call yourself, tell me what quantity of dust I have in my hand." This sudden and curious interrogation, by a mere boy, checked the Pandit, and he was so confounded and confused that he could not compass a ready answer. "I see," cried the boy, "you are dumbfounded by the paltry question of a boy. Could you not say 'you have a handful of dust?' you don't deserve the title all-knowing." So saying, the impertinent little boy turned to Sarvajña's attendants and asked them never more to exhibit their poor master pompously in the streets, and exhorted them in the sweet words of five, to drop the insignia they were carrying, and cease blowing the trumpets." The surprise of the Pandit at this strange behaviour and talk of a mere archin, now turned into wonder and admiration. He inquired of the by-standers whose son was this prodigy? They said:—"Sire, he is the son of Kūrēsa, the soul of our Guru Rāmānuja, the Pontiff of our Faith." Sarvajña exclaiming: "The fledgling surely flies, not creeps," lovingly lifted the little marvel into his sedan, and moved on till the procession approached the house of Kūrēsa. Pon-nāyccchiyār or Kanakāmba, the good wife of Dhanurdāsa,<sup>1</sup> was standing at the door watching. Espying the boy Bhattārya seated in the sedan with a strange person, she ran up, and drawing him from the vehicle, covered him with her garment, and rushed with him into the house, muttering the Dvaya-Mantra, and delivering the precious load unto the arms of its mother Āndālamma, chided her for having allowed her gem to stray out thus into the streets and expose himself to 'evil eyes', and anxiously sprinkled him with Rāmānuja's Śrī-pāda water,<sup>2</sup> to ward off evil influences which might have injured the boy. She also vaguely feared, lest such a prodigy as her boy would be allowed to live long on earth!!

Bhattārya grew older. About eight he was now, and the holy-thread ceremony, Upanayana, was duly made; and he was sent to school to learn the Vedas and other subjects. The boy attended the first day and learnt some Veda. The second day, when he went to school, he found the teacher repeating the same lessons as those of the previous day to the boys. He therefore left the school and went to play. His parents finding him thus employed, questioned him as to why he did not attend school. "I did attend, father," said he, "but they were reading the same lessons again, and so I left it." "But did you learn the lesson in one day?" asked Kûrêsa. "Yes," was the ready answer. "Then let me hear it," demanded the father. The boy repeated his lesson without a flaw, even in the difficult intonations of the Vedic syllables, called the uddtta, anudtta and svarita. The precocity of Bhattārya terrified the parents, who seriously thought of delaying his education for some time. In due course, however, the boy rapidly picked up all learning, Kûrêsa and Govinda personally instructing him in the artha, and the tatva, Sâstras.

<sup>1</sup> Read next chapter

<sup>2</sup> Holy water washed off the feet of Rāmānuja; water thus consecrated is considered an antidote to every kind of evil, material or spiritual.

It has already been said that Lord Ranga and His Consort Lakshmî were the adoptive Father and Mother of Bhattārya. As a child and boy, he really looked upon them as such. But he had now grown up into youth, and was taught that Ranga and Lakshmî should be adored as God and Goddess of the cosmos. Well, the youth was once on a visit to the Temple, when Ranga and Lakshmî were having their retired moments after all the bustle of the day's worship had subsided. Ranga, in feigned anger, bade Bhattārya depart. The youth went a few paces, when Ranga ordered him back. He obeyed. And Ranga asked him: "when thou didst visit us now, what didst thou think us to be?" "As God and Goddess of the universe, Lord," meekly replied Bhattārya. "But," asked Ranga, "what didst thou think us to be before this?" "As my Father and Mother," responded he. "Think of us in this relation always. That pleases us more than the relationship of God and slave." The reader will gather from this that God is more in search of men's hearts than their heads.

Another incident is related about this time. A Smârta pandit took it into his head to test Bhattārya. He entered as the latter was seated in his house, and after preliminaries asked him to explain how a Vaishnava is distinguished from a Smârta. Bhattārya did not care to enter into an elaborate controversy with his adversary on this question, delicate in as much as it is a bone of contention between the two great divisions of Brāhmanas in India, the Smārtās (advaitins) and the Vaishṇavas (viśiṣṭ-advaitins); but simply called the questioner's attention to the signs of Chakra and Śaṅkha inscribed on both his arms—a sacrament enjoined by Śāstras on all Vaishṇavas. "I see", the Pandit said; "but what authorities, master, can you quote from the Śāstras, justifying you to set to yourself this kind of custom?" queried he. "Sir, replied Bhattārya," I shall not trouble you with all that, for when I shall quote one authority, to which we in common profess allegiance, you shall go satisfied. Hast thou not learnt the first sūtra of Āpastamba-Dharma, which says धर्मज्ञसम्यग्प्रमाणं वेदाश्च, i.e., the wise practices of our wise elders are our best authority; then come the Vedas? My father Kūrēsa observed the sacrament in question and therefore I do. Enough; for do you not follow in the footsteps of, your elders?" The Pandit was thus silenced and went his way.<sup>1</sup>

The young student's course was now finished and it was time that a mate should be found for him. As the reader knows, Kūrēsa had left his kith and kin in the Kānchī land and had adopted Śrīrangam for his country. So, when the marriage-question of his boy came up, Kūrēsa did not know where to bring a girl from. "Hence," appealed he to Rāmānuja "sire, not only have I no relations of mine in these parts, but those others who may willingly offer a girl belong to a lower rank in society. Contracting matrimonial alliance therefore with them can only be distasteful to us as unworthy of our status. What shall we do in this fix?" Such was the great social question which Rāmānuja had to solve in those days. (We know how this same question is still unsolved in our days). Rāmānuja said:—"We have our Mahāpūrṇa and his people. We must choose from them As for Śūtra, Śākhā, Brāhmaṇa and Vaiśṇava, our two clans agree. But they are of the Briha-ccharaṇa set.<sup>2</sup> This is the only difference, which I think may be overlooked. These considerations satisfied them and they applied to this clan for a girl. But they could not give one, said they, with impunity, for the hard and fast barriers dividing clan from clan for a long time, would not permit it, though they would heartily wish for a junction with such a worthy clan as that to which Kûrêsa belonged, and considering moreover the exemplary personal character of Kûrêsa himself, apart from every other consideration. So here was a stumbling block though there was willingness on both sides. No further steps were taken, they could not in the face of such insuperable sentimental difficulties. But Bhattar was advancing in years, and must be married at once or all thought of it must once for all be abandoned. His mother Âṇḍā'amma was in a perplexity. She made bold to twit her husband on his stolid indifference in such an important affair. "Our neighbours are laughing at us, Sire," she finished. But Kûrêsa told her in a careless way: "Chafe not, old lady! I am helpless in the matter. Knowest thou not that our children belong to Lord Ranga? I have resigned them to His care. Let His will be done, whatever it be." With these soothing words, he left his wife and going to the Temple, laid the case before The Lord and returned home. That night, Mahâpûrṇa's relatives had a dream, in which Ranga commanded them to make matrimonial alliance with Kûrêsa without ado. They rose and what they had rejected when proposed by, they now voluntarily offered to, Kûrêsa. For, two maidens by name Akkacchi and Manni were gladly given in marriage to our Bhattārya. A social question—a very hard one indeed—was thus solved in those days; and our hero of this Chapter was thus installed in the order of the householder.

<sup>1</sup> See Chakrāṅkara-vijaya and other works on this Vaishṇava Sacrament. It is like the fire-sacrament which obtained among the primitive Christians.

<sup>2</sup> The Mahāpūrṇas belong to this denomination. The Vādamaṣas have no consanguinity with them. Marriages now take place between the Bhattāras and Periya-Nambis.

---

CHAPTER XXV.

DHANURDĀSA.

In the last Chapter, appeared two new characters, as our readers are aware. They are Kanakāṅgaṇā,<sup>1</sup> who was standing at the door of Kūrēsa's house, and her husband Dhanurdāsa, (in Tamil, Pillai-Uṟaṅgā-villī-dāsar) They became disciples of Rāmānuja. How they became is what shall be narrated in this Chapter.

In Nichulāpuri or Modern Uṟaiyur (near Trichinopoly)<sup>2</sup> dwelt Dhanurdāsa, so called because he was a good athlete and archer, belonging to the Malla<sup>3</sup> caste. To his caste-men, he looked as terrible as death. He loved a girl by name Kanakāmbā, who was very beautiful. So much was he enamoured of her that he never left her side for a moment and never took his eyes off her moonlike face. The Chaitra festivities of Lord Ranga now came round. Kanakāmba was anxious to witness them, and so she left Uṟaiyur. The lover of course would not let her go alone. So he accompanied her, and walking by her side, held his coverlet over her head in great solicitude to screen her handsome face from the sun's rays. Not a ray should even steal in. So eagerly did he watch her face.

Rāmānuja was returning from his ablutions in the Kaveri river, surrounded by his disciples, to join the procession of Lord Ranga. As he was coming, his eye fell upon this loving pair, and wondering at the intense care the lover was bestowing upon his beloved, turned to his disciples and said :—" Sons, look at this curious spectacle. Here is a despicable specimen of humanity who is the slave of a woman ! Shameless, in the public streets, see, he pays such attentions to a courtesan ! Man may be blind with love for a girl ; but he generally keeps it all a secret ; but here it is a bold outrage on public decency. It is interesting to me however to see how love can be blind.

<sup>1</sup> Or Kanakāmbā, the Tamil name being Pon-nāyccchīyār.

<sup>2</sup> See St. Tiruppānāzhvār in own Lives of Āzhvārs.

<sup>3</sup> A mixed tribe (wrestlers), by an out-caste Kshatriya on a Kshatriya woman.

their breasts against Dhanurdâsa, that he a Sûdra should stand so high in their master's estimation, their own prestige as Brâhmânas being jeopardized thereby. Râmânuja was aware of this and wished to cure his Brahmana disciples of the disease, which in his opinion was spiritually fatal. To convince them of their error, he resorted to a device. He called one of his intimate disciples privately, and ordered him to secrete all the clothes of the objectors, at night when they were asleep—clothes which it is our custom daily to wash and hang up to dry. The order was duly carried out. The disciples rose in the morning, and finding their clothes were missing, fell foul of each other and made a great hubbub. Râmânuja was witnessing all this fracas, unseemly to a Brâhmâna in his opinion; and smiled. To put a stop to further disturbance, he called them all to order, and putting on the mien of a judge, listened to their complaint, and condoning them for their loss, advised them to be reconciled to each other, and wait for better luck whenever it might please Providence to send it them. He let some time pass thus, and one night, he called Dhanurdâsa to his side, and was engaged in conversation with him alone for some time. He now called the aggrieved parties, and in the hearing of Dhanurdâsa, spoke to them thus: "Sons, I remember well your grief and strife at the loss of your clothes some time ago. I will now tell you something which will fetch you much profit. Indeed it will very much more than compensate for your loss. See, Dhanurdâsa is with me. I will keep him here engaged. You will proceed to his house unobserved. As it is very late in the night, you will find his wife Kanakâmbâ drowned in sleep. She has a lot of precious jewels about her person. Go and cleverly strip her of them all and come away." Taking these orders, the Brâhmaṇas stole to Dhanurdâsa's house like thieves. They effected entrance, and to their joy found Kanakâmbâ fast asleep on her bed, decked out in all her splendid finery. They approached her softly, and deftly stripped her of all her jewels on one side, as she lay sideways. As they were doing it, she awoke, but just opening her eyes a little, closed them again, lest they might flee away in fright. Nor did she move a limb, lest they might be disturbed in the middle of their work. For she saw how he felt. He said "Master' how can I be grateful enough to you for the bliss into which you have deigned to steep a wretch like myself. Make me thy slave and complete the work of salvation you have, unasked, taken into your hands." Rāmānuja smiled and conferring on him the sacramental Pañcha-samskāra, took him into his flock. Kanakāmbā came to know of all this, and a wish rose in her mind to become herself a disciple. So she sped to Rāmānuja, and repentantly implored him to take her also into his Vaishṇava fold. Rāmānuja, overcome by her solicitations, did so, and joining her with her lover,—now as wife to husband,—blessed them both, and allowed them to work in his math as his most dutiful servants. It is chronicled that the wife even excelled her husband, in wisdom and all other spiritual perfections, by the wonderful grace shed by the Holy Feet of Rāmānuja. Like Hanumān, who did every service to Rāma was this pair to Rāmānuja.

Dhanurdāsa had so far been metamorphosed, that he became the greatest favourite of Rāmānuja; so rare too was his piety, that though he belonged to a lower caste, he had privileges conferred upon him. For often, Rāmānuja was found returning from his river-bath leaning on the shoulders of Dhanurdāsa; though when he went to the bath he lean on Dāsarathi, a Brāhmāna. A Brāhmāna is unclean before bath, and clean after it; and thus Dhanurdāsa as a Sūdra, and Dāsarathi as a Brāhmāna must have changed places. But Rāmānuja had it the other way, as told above, which much exercised the minds of his Brāhmāna disciples. They once made bold to ask him for an explanation, which he condescended to tender thus — "O Vaishṇavās, have ye not heard that learning, riches and high-birth swell a fool with pride, but adorn a wiseman?<sup>1</sup> This Malla is utterly destitute of this threefold vice, but ye are not. Hence he is fit enough to be touched by me and to prop on". On hearing this, the disciples bent their heads in shame, and dared make no protest; but all the same, malice rankled in their breasts against Dhanurdāsa, that he a Śūdra should stand so high in their master's estimation, their own prestige as Brāhmanas being jeopardized thereby. Rāmānuja was aware of this and wished to cure his Brāhmaṇa disciples of the disease, which in his opinion was spiritually fatal. To convince them of their error, he resorted to a device. He called one of his intimate disciples privately, and ordered him to secrete all the clothes of the objectors, at night when they were asleep—clothes which it is our custom daily to wash and hang up to dry. The order was duly carried out. The disciples rose in the morning, and finding their clothes were missing, fell foul of each other and made a great hubbub. Rāmānuja was witnessing all this fracas, unseemly to a Brāhmana in his opinion; and smiled. To put a stop to further disturbance, he called them all to order, and putting on the mien of a judge, listened to their complaint, and condoning them for their loss, advised them to be reconciled to each other, and wait for better luck whenever it might please Providence to send it them. He let some time pass thus, and one night, he called Dhanurdāsa to his side, and was engaged in conversation with him alone for some time. He now called the aggrieved parties, and in the hearing of Dhanurdāsa, spoke to them thus: "Sons, I remember well your grief and strife at the loss of your clothes some time ago. I will now tell you something which will fetch you much profit. Indeed it will very much more than compensate for your loss. See, Dhanurdāsa is with me. I will keep him here engaged. You will proceed to his house unobserved. As it is very late in the night, you will find his wife Kanakāmbā drowned in sleep. She has a lot of precious jewels about her person. Go and cleverly strip her of them all and come away." Taking these orders, the Brāhmaṇas stole to Dhanurdāsa's house like thieves. They effected entrance, and to their joy found Kanakāmbā fast asleep on her bed, decked out in all her splendid finery. They approached her softly, and deftly stripped her of all her jewels on one side, as she lay sideways. As they were doing it, she awoke, but just opening her eyes a little, closed them again, lest they might flee away in fright. Nor did she move a limb, lest they might be disturbed in the middle of their work. For she saw they were Vaishnavas, for whom she had nothing but love and reverence. She was glad they were taking away but their own property; for whatever effects she owned in this world were not really hers but entrusted to her for their sake. This is how property is to be spiritually viewed; and we have already said that in spiritual perfections, Kanakâmbâ excelled even her husband. Well, she lay thus quiet till every one of the jewels was removed from one side. She was now anxious that the Vaishnavas should complete their work, and not go away with only half work done. She therefore gently rolled over to her other side, as if in sleep. This movement however created fright and put the thieves to flight. They returned. Râmânuja seeing them back, gave leave to Dhanurdâsa now to go home, as it was unusually late. As soon as he went a few steps, Râmânuja called the robber-disciples, and taking from them the jewels, bid them dog the footsteps of Dhanurdâsa in the dark, unobserved by him, and watch all that might take place in his house and report the same to him correctly. They did so. In the house, Kanakâmbâ was expecting her husband back from his rather long absence that night, and when she heard his footsteps, she rose and washed his feet and welcomed him home. He looked at her, but she looked very strange with one side of her bare and the other side only decked with ornaments. "What is this, lady?" he cried, taken aback. "Nothing wrong, Lord," said she soothingly, "I will explain all and you will be pleased. The Brâhmânas, who you know are our Gurus, came here, and I was lying as if asleep. They laid hands on me and took all the jewels on my right side. Our effects are theirs, Sire, as you know. So to let them have all, I quietly turned round on to my left side. With all my care in doing so,—to make them believe I was fast in the arms of sleep—it gave them alarm, and they, to my great regret, ran away." On hearing this, Dhanurdâsa flew at her in rage, saying:—"Foolish woman! thou hast spoiled the work. It was thy duty to have lain quite motionless. If thy jewels were theirs, theirs also was the liberty to take them in their own way. But instead of letting them exercise that liberty, thou didst dare exercise it in allowing thyself to move just when they had done half their work. They would probably have turned thee round, hadst thou been perfectly still. Well, thou hast spoilt it all. At any rate, half thy jewels have been well invested; the other half is vanity." Thus half consoled as it were, he went to sleep, with his thoughts fixed on the Holy Feet of Rāmānuja.

<sup>1</sup> विद्यामदो धनमद स्तुतिर्योभिजनोमद ।

एतेमदावलिताना मेनएवसन्नादमा ॥

The Vaishnava Brāhmaṇas who were outside, eavesdropping, heard all this conversation and hurrying back to Rāmānuja, gave him a full report of it. Rāmānuja on receiving it addressed them thus — "O wiseacres, do you now see? Some fellows, fools very likely, made away with your clothes some time back. But on that trifling account, you fell to quarrelling and, calling each other names, made such an inglorious uproar. But here is Dhanurdāsa, whose mind was not in the least disturbed, albeit he lost so many valuable jewels. Please tell me, sirs, whose wisdom is great, yours or his? Know then that caste is of no importance. It is virtue that is most prized." Thus did Rāmānuja sermon to the disciples who bore a grudge against Dhanurdāsa. They were crest-fallen and spoke not.

The night was spent thus. The next morning, he sent for Dhanurdāsa, and drew from him an account of all the incidents which took place in his house, and restoring to him his jewels, blessed him. Dhanurdāsa never refused what was given him, for, if he did so, it would be like opposing his Guru which behoves not a true disciple. Unquestioning obedience to the spiritual preceptor is one of the most important canons laid down by Vaishnavism. And this, the hero of this chapter observed to the very letter. It is recorded that Dhanurdāsa's regenerate life was full of such incidents. One such interesting event is recounted by Periya-vācchānpillai in his commentary on St. Nammāzhvār's Tiruviruttam, v: 99: "Īnacchol". Kûrêṣa read Tiruvāymozhi, and Dhanurdāsa, who heard it, melted into tears. Observing this passionate ebullition of feeling, Kûrêṣa exclaimed: "Fie on us, beloved Dhanurdāsa! We are known to fame as very clever dialectic gymnasts over knotty questions of philosophy and all that sort; but none of us can claim the privilege of thy birth which brings to thee a love-lorn heart, which we so hardly struggle to possess." It is related again in the 36,000 commentary on Tiruvāymozhi (VII-4-1 "Āzhi") that Dhanurdâsa was called 'Mahāmati' by the worthies of Śrīrangam, inasmuch as his love for Ranganātha was so intense that whenever, the Lord was taken in processions in the streets, 'Mahāmati' walked in front with his sword drawn, so that he may cut any who dared to do any act, in the least offensive to the Deity. Vidura of the Mahābhārata fame was called Mahāmati, inasmuch as his love for Krishna made him to examine the seat, which he had himself prepared for him in his own house, lest he might have unwittingly allowed any danger to lurk in there. Mahāmati literally means wiser than wisdom, this expression having the force of wisdom blinded by love for God. Dhanurdâsa also was thus so wise, i. e., so love-blind as to fear danger for one (God), who is above all dangers.

Kanakāmbā, the wife of Dhanurdâsa, proved to be an exemplary devotee of Rāmānuja, for she looked upon him as the Saviour. It is related that a number of disciples approached the lady one day and expressed to her their doubts as to whom they should look upon as their true saviour, for it was in their experience that many professed themselves as saviours, and they also severally owed to more than one preceptor the spiritual knowledge which they had received and the good-conduct which they had adopted in their life; and it was thus evident that if Rāmānuja was to be looked upon as saviour, there were others as well to whom a measure of this qualification was ascribable. Kanakāmbā on hearing this, simply flourished her locks and gathering them together into a knot, tied it up with a red thread, and kept silent. The disciples understood what she meant to convey by this behaviour. The numerous black hairs signified many teachers but the saviour was Rāmānuja alone, represented by the red thread,—Rāmānuja who crowned them all and bound them all together into his representative self; in other words united into his unique person, all the functions of minor teachers who went before and came after him. The disciples wondered at her steadfastness and fidelity to Rāmānuja, and went away congratulating her on her spiritual eminence.

CHAPTER XXVI.

DÂṢARATHI; MARANĒRI-NAMBI.

Such were the additions that were being daily made to Rāmānuja's holy band.

We have seen in a previous chapter that Mudali-y āṇḍān or Dāsarathi was Rāmānuja's sister's son. A few particulars about this sage are related at this juncture. We have seen in the last chapter that when Rāmānuja went to the river Kavci for his daily bath, he would lean on Dāsarathi for support, and when returning from the bath he would lean on Dhanurdāsa. One day Rāmānuja was asked why, when he donned the robes of the Sannyāsin (ascetic), he did not give up Dāsarathi, inasmuch as that order demanded that all kith and kin should be renounced. Rāmānuja said that Dāsarathi was an exception to this rule, for he was to him as valuable as his triple-staff (tridanda). When he went to Kōṭṭiyūr to receive instructions from Gōshthī-Pūrṇa, he had told the latter the same thing. "So, gentle-folk," said he to the questioners, "if it is possible for me, an ascetic, to give up my staff, only then can Dāsarathi leave me. He, though a bodily relation, is yet a kin to my soul"

Rāmānuja was once teaching Dāsarathi Tiru-vāly-mozhi, in all his leisure moments. One day, as he was teaching it from his couch, Dāsarathi was so overcome by the sentiments of love to God contained therein, that he stopped repeating the verses with Rāmānuja as is usually done. Rāmānuja saw this and was glad to see Dāsarathi so sensitive to devout emotions, such as characterize real mystics. "Son," he said, "it is no wonder our love-saints so move your heart. For the Vedas themselves have been given out to the world in the shape of the Drāvida-Prabandhas, even as 'the Vedas themselves are said to have incarnated as Rāmāyaṇa, when the Lord of the Vedas himself incarnated on earth as Rāma' "<sup>1</sup>.

<sup>1</sup> वेदवेद्येपरेपुंसि जतिदेशरथात्मजे ।

वेद प्राचेतसादासीत् साक्षाद्रामायणात्मना ॥ [Śrīra-purāṇa].

Thus were many days spent in useful occupation, and in thinking out projects for the amelioration of the world. One day, Attuzhây, the daughter of Mahâpûrṇa, left her mother-in-laws's house to her father's. "What is the matter, daughter?" he asked her. "Father," she complained, "you know we women have to go to the river to bathe, after our monthlies. I asked my mother-in-law to accompany me, girl as I am and having to go alone. But she chose to be ill-tempered and further taunted me by saying: 'Your parents have indeed sent so many servant girls as a part of your trousseau (strīdhana); why not take one of them with you instead of asking me'? I felt this jeer so keenly that I have come to you." "I do not know anything of these matters, poor girl!" said he coaxingly, "go and inform Rāmānuja, who is our Head." So Attuzhây hastened to Rāmānuja and laid her grievance before him. "Oh, I see your mother-in-law wants a servant for thee at her house," said Rāmānuja, "here is one, take him." So saying, he called Dāsarathi and bid him accompany the young lady, and work under her orders, considering himself as part of her strīdhana. Dāsarathi immediately obeyed, and following the young lady to the river where she bathed, worked in her house like a slave. The sudden advent of Dāsarathi, and that for purposes of menial service, excited the curiosity of the members of the household, for they knew him as a venerable person attached to Rāmānuja, and for whom they had devout regards. So, they asked him to say what made him leave Rāmānuja and come to their house unasked, and that for gratuitous service? "Friends," he said, "I am not master of myself, nor can I judge why my Master Rāmānuja wishes me to serve in your household. He bid me go with this maiden and be at her service. I have done so. For reasons and motives, if you are particular, I must refer you to our Rāmānuja." They all ran to the monastery and humbly falling at the feet of Rāmānuja, besought him to say why such a high personage as Dāsarathi was directed to go to their humble dwelling for drudgery. They submitted further that this measure imperilled the safety of their souls inasmuch as they were put to the necessity of using a saint as a slave. "We are already sinners. Sire," pleaded they, "pray let not this addition be made." Rāmānuja simply answered "Good men, we sent our Dāsarathi as a part of our bride's outfit, for the little Attuzhāy is my guru's daughter, and therefore our daughter. If you are not willing to accept what, in duty bound, we have sent, you are welcome to return it." They returned home and begged Dāsarathi to kindly return to Rāmānuja.

At this time another momentous question turned up. One of Yāmuna's disciples was Māranēri-Nambi of Māranēri, of the Pāṇḍya country. He was a Śūdra i. e., a member of the fourth caste of the Hindu social system. He lived with Mahāpūrṇa, who was a disciple himself of Yāmuna, and a Brāhmaṇa. Māranēri being a beloved disciple of Yāmuna, Mahāpūrṇa had great regards for his master's man. Māranēri fell sick. He prayed to Mahāpūrṇa thus—"Sire, though my body is of the Śūdra, it is one which by service to my master Yāmuna, is sacred. It is going to die now. Pray cast it not to dogs. Who will throw to dogs the oblations (puroḍiṣa) set apart for Devas? My body belongeth to Yāmuna." Pūrṇa quieted him by saying that he need have no anxiety on that account; that all would go well. With this assurance, Māranēri breathed his last, and Pūrṇa cremated him—instead of burying, which is the custom for the Śūdras—and had the Brahmameḍha rites performed, which is only ordained for the Brāhmaṇas.

Rāmānuja,—Pūrṇa's disciple,—came to know this. Though he was himself a reformer, yet, in his opinion, time was not yet ripe for extending all Brāhmaṇic privileges to Śūdras. They must be gradually raised, first in spirit, i. e., in principles and customs and morals, and then only such social privileges granted, as may not outrage at once the communal sense of the composite body of the Āryans. Rāmānuja was doing this work cautiously, even so having to face much obloquy from the higher caste-men. While so, for Mahāpūrṇa to have extended the highest privileges of a Brāhmaṇa, viz., the Brahma-Meḍha obsequies, to a Śūdra, however high he may be spiritually, was a shock to the communal feeling which it was not expedient to deliver. Rāmānuja going to Mahāpūrṇa, and making due obeisance, argued with him in this manner and finished by saying: "Sire, I am building a system, but you are pulling it down" To which, Pūrṇa answered thus:—"Rāmānuja, I admit the force of your objections. But I am for radical reforms, not half-measures, and then, we ought to have a margin for signal exceptions like Māranēri. Besides, have I not precedents to justify my present act? Am I superior to Rāma, the Hero of the Ikshvāku race,? Is Māranēri inferior to the Bird Jatāyu, for whom Rāma performed the Brahmamedha?<sup>1</sup> Am I greater than Dharma-putra? and is Māranēri lower than Vidura, to whom the same Samskāra was administered? And are the truths uttered by St. Nammāzhvār, in his Tiruvāymozhi: "Payilum" [iii-7] and "Nedumāl" [viii-10], descanting on the greatness of godly men, irrespective of caste and color, mere senseless babble?." On hearing this, Rāmānuja was silent "But in my turn; I have to propose to you one question," began Pūrṇa "and that is this. How is it that I found Māranēri, uttering neither: 'Ranga is my refuge,' nor 'Yāmvna is my refuge,' when he died? You know this is what is enjoined on all the Faithful at time of death," Rāmānuja said: "Such an omission is no ground of accusation against him. For I know he had abandoned himself entirely at that moment to God, trusting Him in His promise that: 'at the time of death, it is not for the dying man to remember or say anything, but for God to remember the dying man and do the needful.'<sup>2</sup>" "But" retorted Pūrṇa, "this is a Promise made by Varāha, when he when he was consumed with love for His Consort Bhū How can such a Madman's Word be depended upon? Rāmānuja answered: "Know you not, Sire, that our salvation is sure when our

---

<sup>1</sup> Rāmāyaṇa, III-66.—

"Libations of the stream they poured
In honor of the vulture lord,
With solemn ritual to the slain,
As scripture's holy texts ordain."

<sup>2</sup> [Varāha Purāṇa]

Father and Mother are ever together?"<sup>1</sup> Pârṇa was pleased with this apt and intelligent answer.

At this time happened another incident. Śrī Rāmānuja was one day observed leading a poor dumb man with him and shutting himself up with him in the monastery in a private chamber. Kûrêsa was watching this unusual conduct on the part of the high pontiff; and looking through a chink in the closed door, observed Rāmānuja showing the dumb man by means of signs, his own holy feet, and making him understand thereby that their contemplation would be the sole means of his salvation. Kûrêsa, on seeing this supreme act of grace, soliloquized to himself thus: "Alas that I have been born Kûrêsa, a man of learning and wisdom; I had fain been born dumb and boorish to have deserved such precious free grace as this man!" It is said, that Kûrêsa swooned away under the weight of this reflection.

About this time, Rāmānuja undertook a journey to T. Kôṭṭiyûr on a visit to his Âchârya Gosṭhî Pârṇa. He was found seated in a high loft in his house absorbed in contemplation. Rāmānuja waited for an opportunity and submissively asked what it was he so intently dwelt on; in other words what was the mantra he muttered to himself and the dhyâna or object of his thought. Pârṇa said:—"Noble son, my only mantra is the Holy Name of Yâmunā and my only dhyâna is his blessed figure (vighraha) which fascinated me as I studied it when he was bathing in the holy Kaveri waters. "The Guru's Holy Name is our hymn and his image the object of our loving contemplation"<sup>2</sup> as say the Śâstras. Rāmānuja prostrated himself before his Guru and returned to Śrīraṅgam.

---

<sup>1</sup> "When the son is ever with the Father," as a Christian would say.

<sup>2</sup> गुरोः पादाब्जं ध्यायेत् गुरोर्नाममदाजपेत्.

CHAPTER XXVII.

CHOLA'S PERSECUTIONS.

It is written: "When the gracious eyes of a good Guru fall on a person, his salvation is sure, be he dumb or deaf, fool or wise, old or young"<sup>1</sup> Rāmānuja was showering his graces on all in this way; and was holding his Vedānta-discourses in splendid style with a splendid array of disciples, headed by such illustrious personages as Kūrēsa, Dāsarathi and Devarāt. The Chola-king, for the time being, happened to be a most bigoted Śaiva. He was bent upon destroying Viṣṇu temples, and otherwise prosecuting Vaiṣṇavas, though his son (Vikrama Chola. 1113—1128 A.C), wisely hinted that he had set to himself an impossible task, inasmuch as he could never destroy the two strong props of the Vaiṣṇavas, the Tiruāḍimozhi of St. Nammāzhvār and Rāmāyana of Vālmiki. The Śaiva system is anti-Vedic, and Vaiṣṇavas condemn it as un-Āryan and erroneous. The king, then resident at Chidambaram (or Gan-gaikonda Cholapuram) was so bigotted an adherent of this system that he adopted coercive measures to bring men of all other faiths into its fold. For this purpose, he had a proclamation issued in which was written: "There is no (God) greater than Śiva;"<sup>2</sup> and every one, especially every learned man, was commanded to affix his signature to the document in proof of his assent to this proposition. Many obeyed either for fear of being punished, in case of refusal; or on grounds of conscience, or enticed by hopes of rewards of land and money from the king; and others deserted the country and hid themselves. Nālūrān, a disciple of Kūrēsa, happened to be the king's minister. "What is the use, your Majesty!" said he "of your obtaining signatures from all men indiscriminately. No good purpose is served thereby. If you can obtain the signature of the two veterans of the Vaiṣṇava faith, Kūrēsa and Rāmānuja, living in Śrīrangam, that will be a capital stroke of policy, and your declaration about Śiva's pre-eminence will only then have received irrefutable testimony " Chola immediately directed messengers to go to Srîrangam and bring Râmânuja. They arrived and standing before the gate of the monastery, declared their errand, and said that Râmânuja must go with them to the King's Court forthwith. The door-keepers rushed inside and whispered the news softly to Kûrêsa,<sup>1</sup> who was then engaged in serving bath-water to Râmânuja. Kûrêsa foresaw the dangers of persecution that threatened; and without telling Râmânuja what he meant doing, he donned the colored robes of Râmânuja, and taking up his tridanda, emerged from the monastery; and saying: "I am Râmânuja, proceed," to the King's men, stepped on. Mâhâpûrna, observing this, followed Kûrêsa on this ominous expedition

<sup>1</sup> बालमूकजडान्धाश्च पंगवोबधिरास्तथा।
सदाचार्यैश्च संदृष्टा प्राप्नुवन्ति पराङ्मुक्तिम् ॥

<sup>2</sup> शिवान्परमं नान्ति

Râmânuja, coming from his bath, called for his colored robe and staff, but Dâsarathi told him that Kûrêsa had worn them and departed with the King's messengers, who had come for Râmânuja, in order to compel them to sign a declaration-paper maintaining Sîva's superiority over all other gods. On hearing this, Râmânuja exclaimed in sore distress of heart thus:—"Oh, what will become of Kûrêsa and Mahâpûrna, in this war of bigotry! Pray let me wear the white garments of Kûrêsa, that I may not be discovered by that heretic-chief's myrmidons!" "You must not, Holy Sire, even remain in this spot," submitted Dâsarathi in fear, "lest harm should come to your valuable life." Râmânuja's fears were further aroused, but he knew not how he should act in such an emergency; and so he hurried to his Chapel—Deity Varada, and made supplication to him meltingly to ward off the evil which threatened to engulf them all and to obliterate, by one stroke, all the good work that had for years been so patiently done. And in giving vent to his feelings, he prayed in the fashion of St. Bhaktānghri-Renu<sup>2</sup> thus:—

"If the luckless Buddhas, Jains and those,
That follow Rudra's feet, in poignant words,

<sup>1</sup> Read Topic 146 Pp. 161 ff. in our "Divine Wisdom of Dravida Saints"

<sup>2</sup> Read his life in our Lives of Āṣhvārās. The verse is the 8th in his Tirumālai:—"Veruppoḍu Ṣamaṇar, ḡc."

Do hateful talk of Thee, O, Lord! Thy slaves,
 With anguish keen pierced, sure sickening die.
 Hence Thou, that swellest Rangam huge, pray list,
 If chance e'er throws athwart my furious path,
 Such God-denying souls, but righteous work I ween,
 I then and there their heads lay low."

"Good God," "said he" the Chōḷa king is very powerful just now. I leave to Thee how and when thou wilt do away with him. I will now leave this country; and elsewhere, I will, if necessary, resort to measures which will hasten this tyrant's destruction." So saying, he looked northward in the direction of Melkote,<sup>1</sup> and taking his disciples with him, left Srīrangam with a heavy heart. In the meanwhile, Chōḷa's men coming to know that it was not the real Rāmānuja who was trapped, came in pursuit. By this time Rāmānuja was crossing a broad sandy river; and sighted the pursuers. "What shall we do?" he cried, addressing his disciples, "let us take handfuls of sand and with this mantra<sup>2</sup> repeated over it, throw them in their path as we proceed; and leave the rest to God." They all did as he said. When the royal emissaries trod on the enchanted sand, their feet stuck, and their pursuit was thus checked. "Ah, these Brāhmanas have used magic against us" exclaimed they, and beat back in confusion. Rāmānuja proceeded now on his way with Lord Ranga for his help.

They threaded their way through trackless wilds and before they arrived at the base of the Nilagiri Hills, Rāmānuja and his disciples missed each other in the wilderness. They were wandering in search of each other, when one disciple met a few forest men busy ploughing land. These happened to be the disciples of Tirumalai Nallān Chakravarti,—an old disciple of Rāmānuja. Meeting a Srīvaishnava, they naturally felt themselves attached to him, and accosting him asked:—"Sire, whence art thou coming?" "From Srīrangam, good folk,"

<sup>1</sup> Or Śrī-Nārāyaṇa-puram, on a hill, 30 miles north of the city of Maisūr.

<sup>2</sup> The 4th verse. "Kaḍal-kaḍaiṇḍu" of Periyāzhvār's Tirumozhi. [V-4-4.]

he replied. "There, is our Rāmānuja doing well? Is all going on well with our blessed Lord Ranga?" asked they. "Good folk, where is God? What do we care for His blessed state? Know that our Master Rāmānuja had to desert Srirangam on account of Chola's persecutions, and we know not whither he has strayed away in this wilderness", replied they in grief. On hearing this, the men ceased their work in the fields, and for six days searched for Rāmānuja without food and water. On the sixth night, in the gloom, they heard men's voices. They were sure the voices were like the voices of Brāhmanas. They listened. Rāmānuja's party also had sighted a fire which the searching party had lit on a field to warm themselves. For it was a dark night, rainy and chilly. Rāmānuja had reached the foot of a hill and his other disciples had joined him. They were all wet and hungry and shivering with cold. And Rāmānuja, after descrying the light, was asking his disciples to carry him thither. The search-party guessed already they must be the objects of their search; but of course were not sure; and so, as soon as they heard their conversation, cried out:—"Hither, sirs, come hither, we shall show you the way." They joined one another. The guests were led to the blazing fire and warmed; dry clothes were provided and every service was gladly rendered to make them comfortable. And then they inquired: "Whence are you all coming, sirs?" "From Srirangam," they said. "What is our Rāmānuja doing there?" they queried. Rāmānuja kept silent, but his disciples asked;—"How do ye, good men, know Rāmānuja?" "Sirs," they said, "our guru is Nallān Chakravarti.<sup>1</sup> The last advice he left with us was that Rāmānuja should be cherished in our hearts as the Grand Guru; and that His holy feet alone were our Way to salvation. Thus we know Rāmānuja." "Then here he is" So saying, they pointed out Rāmānuja amongst them. On this

---

<sup>1</sup> This was the personage who performed cremation to a Chandāla's dead body which came floating down the Vaigai river near Kānchi, inasmuch as the body bore the marks of Discus and Conch, the symbols of Vishnu. The townsfolk resented this, but Lord Varada said:—
'நாட்டுக்குப்பொல்லான், நாக்குநல்லான்,' i.e., "He is bad to you, but good to me" discovery, they fell on their faces and clinging fondly to his feet, wept for joy. They then brought grain and honey in abundance; and new pots, in which to fry the former, pound it into powder, and mix with honey and eat it. Rāmānuja and his men gratefully partook of the same, after having been greatly exhausted by journeys and elemental inclemencies; and retired for a long-wished-for rest.

The next morning, they were all up and prepared to continue their journey northwards towards the hills and beyond. One of the forest-men and one disciple<sup>1</sup> were chosen to carry tidings to Śrīrangam and inquire how it fared with Kūrēsa; and the rest—forty-five disciples, it is written—journeyed northward, guided by the forest-men. They performed about six days' journey and reached a certain fastness in the heart of the Nīlagiri Hill range, where the chief of the forest-men lived. The chief was gone out hunting. The guides conducted their holy party however to his house, where they were introduced to the chief's wife, whom, as their high mistress, they addressed thus:—"Madam, these holy men are our Gurus; we commend them to your care. Pray attend to all their wants, and whatever it may cost, debit it to us and write off the same in the accounts against wages due to us by your master." Thus entrusting their holy burden to good hands, they departed. The chief now returned from his hunting, and was told all. "How can we eat, while these good men are hungry," he said, and despatched his men to conduct them to a neighbouring village, to the house of a Brāhmaṇa, named Kattalai-vāri, sending an abundance of provisions to entertain them with, without the least delay. The messengers saw this done and returned and reported the same to their chief.

The wife of Kattalai-vāri was the reputed Kongil-pirāṭṭi or Chelāñchalāmbā<sup>2</sup>. She prostrated herself before them and asked whether she might not cook for them. They replied in the negative. "To whose feet, sirs, do ye belong?" she inquired. "Rāmānuja," they replied. "Doubt not, sirs, I also belong to him," rejoined she. "Strange, pray give an account how that came about," asked the guests. "Sirs," she began, "once rains failed, and famine was on the land. We therefore left our native land and went to Srirangam; where myself and my husband engaged a house, living on the second floor thereof. I was daily watching Rāmānuja emerging into the streets, after his morning's duties in the temple were fulfilled, for the sake of entering seven houses to collect his daily alms. As his holiness strolled in the streets like a very god on earth, many people fell at his feet; among the number I particularly observed Akalankanātt-āzhvān, the husband of Tripurā-dēvi. 'One day, Rāmānuja entered my poor house. Observing it, I ran down the stairs and stood behind a door, attentive. "Good dame, what is in thy mind," he asked me, and I humbly said:—"Holy Sire, thou comest a-begging to poor peoples' houses, whilst I see kings fall at thy feet in the streets. Please solve this mystery for me." He said:—"Dear daughter, I tell these men bits of news about God; and they become attached to my person. And it is my duty to go to poor houses, and go anywhere where there may be people who wish to hear good tidings of God." Then, Holy Father," said I, "may I not be the recipient of a little of it?" "Surely," said he, "and he told me what was good for me and took his departure. Now rains fell, and famine had left our land, and we resolved to join our native country; but I had forgotten the good advice given to me by Rāmānuja. I was troubled and did not know what to do. As I was pensive however, Rāmānuja suddenly dropped into our poor house again. I ran down the stairs to meet him and excusing myself for my bad memory, begged of him to tell the tidings of God once more to me, as I was about to leave Srirangam for my native village. Looking upon me graciously, he impressed upon me once more the Dvaya-mantra, along with the Holy Names of all the Apostles of our faith, God downwards and ending with himself. He was leaving me; but I entreated him to stay a while and bestow on me something which I might carry in remembrance and which I might worship as my saviour. And he was so kind as to grant me his holy sandals. And then myself and my husband returned home with this blessed gift. Never since have I had the joy of seeing Rāmānuja again. It is many years ago now." Rāmānuja heard all this, but he was half in cognito, wearing the white garments of Kūrēsa and many days had gone past, so that Kongil had not recognised him yet. Learning, as he did, the account given, he gave her permission to cook and commanded a disciple of his to watch her performances. She left and her procedure was thus.—By repeating 'Blessed be Rāmānuja,' she sprinkled her head with water so consecrated. She washed the whole house with cowdung and water, took fresh pots, and wearing a clean washed cloth, cooked meals, all the time muttering the holy prabandha, and after placing the viands in clean baskets, entered into her chapel. Here she placed Rāmānuja's sandals on a raised dais, and repeating: "Rāmānuja's Holy Feet are my sole refuge," offered the viands she carried, and returning to the guests, begged them to wash their feet and get ready to discuss the meals before it became cold. The disciple, told out to watch her, was now called aside by Rāmānuja to give an account and he recounted exactly all that she did, but he said:—"It was dark in the chapel. There were two black objects, which looked long, which she worshipped and to which she offered food." "Daughter," called her Rāmānuja, "please let us see what you worshipped in the dark." She brought them and said:—"Holy Sire, these are the sandals of my Rāmānuja, which he gave to me at Śrīrangam. I daily worship them and eat only after offering food to them. And this day I did the same. Nothing more." Rāmānuja measured them with his feet, and said:—"Curious enough, they suit me; but come here, daughter." She approached and he whispered into her ears thus:—"Daughter, know that these disciples of mine are very strict. They see the sandals suit my feet, but this does not quite satisfy them however, please let me hear what Rāmānuja taught thee." Kongil repeated the mantra taught her before. "Good, but dost thou discover Rāmānuja in this band?" asked Rāmānuja. Kongil returned inside and bringing a light examined Rāmānuja's feet, and exclaimed:—

<sup>1</sup> This is said to be Māruti-yāndān. Another, Ammangi-ammāl, is said to have also accompanied them.

<sup>2</sup> For brevity, we shall call her Kongil.

“Sire, your feet are indeed like Rāmanuja’s, but you wear white robes which he did not and could not as a Sanyāsin. I am confused, Father.” Rāmanuja, moved by her anxiety and no longer wishing to hide himself from her said :—“Dear daughter, I am Rāmanuja.” On hearing this, her confusion turned into joy and wonder. She fell on her face and nestling to his feet, wept for joy. “Disciples,” said Rāmanuja, turning to them : “now there need be no more hesitation on your part to eat her food. Śrī Kṛṣṇa ate Vidura’s food, for it was pure and good.<sup>1</sup> Such is our Kongil’s food. Go and eat.” They did so, but Rāmanuja did not. So Kongil was troubled and cried : “But how about you, father ?” “Daughter,” he said, “you see the food has been offered to my sandals. So I cannot eat that.” “Then, father,” said she, “I shall bring milk and fruits ; offer them to your God and eat.” Rāmanuja did so, and all then rested, steeped in bliss.

The devout Kongil collected the remnants of food left, after they all ate, and taking it and the foot-washed water of Rāmanuja to her husband, who was sleeping aloft, roused him and let him eat. But he saw her fasting. “Why dost thou not eat, dear ?” asked he. “Lord,” she answered, “Rāmanuja and his disciples have come to our house from Śrī-rangam, and they have slept away without taking food.” “What can I do, lady ?” he asked. “Cannot you, Lord, become Rāmanuja’s disciple ?” “If you please,” said he. On obtaining this promise on the ruse, she ate and went to rest after her hard day’s loving labour. Next day, she awoke and approaching Rāmanuja, entreated him to stay yet longer, and deign to take her husband to his fold by administering to him necessary Vaishṇava-sacraments. He gladly consented and did every thing needed and reading to them many a useful lesson for their future welfare, sojourned in their good home for a few days, and taking leave of the good pair by blessing them, pursued his journey.

<sup>1</sup> विदुरास्नानिबुभुजे गुचीनिगुणवन्निच. [Mahābhārata, Udyoga : 90-42.]

CHAPTER XXVIII.

RÂMÂNUJA AND MAISÛR.

The Nilagiri Range was thus traversed, and threading their way with toil north-west,<sup>1</sup> they reached Vahni-Pushkarinî<sup>2</sup>, Resting here for a few days, they made their way to Mithilâ-Sâligrâma<sup>3</sup>. Here they found the place full of Vîra-Saivas, or staunch adherents of Sivaism, who gave the new arrivals scant or no welcome. Râmânûja hit upon a method to turn their minds. He called Dâsarathi to his side and said:—"Son, here is the fountain from which the village folk carry their drinking water for their households. Unnoticed by them, dip your feet into the water and watch the effect." He did as bid. The villagers drank the water and their hostility for the new comers turned into civility. They even went so far as to become Râmânûja's followers in Faith. A memento of this incident of the water, magnetized by the holy feet of the best of his disciples, effecting a miracle, is to this day still preserved in the shape of a small shrine erected on the spot, in which are installed the feet of Râmânûja for devout worship by all, and the holy fountain is close by, connected with the shrine by a flight of steps, by which every pilgrim descends into it and reverently sprinkles the waters over his head. "The town deserves the name of Sâligrâma, i. e., the stone symbol of Vishnu," said Râmânûja in joy, on account of this strange event.

Of the many who embraced the Faith here, the chief was Vaduga-nambi or Ândhra-pûrṇa,<sup>4</sup> who became a most devout and intimate follower. Râmânûja taught him all the arcane truths of religion for days, in the Temple of the Lord Nara-

<sup>1</sup> The exact route is not recorded as far as our information goes. Râmânûja seems to have followed the course of the Kâveri as far as Satyarrangalam, then taking a short cut, he reached Kâveri again at Maisûr. Kâveri River, about 40 miles west of Mysore.

<sup>2</sup> Now known as Mirle and Sâligrama, two villages, about 30 miles west of Mysore.

<sup>4</sup> The Shrine abovenamed belongs to the descendants of this disciple who are related to myself, the writer of this book. The village is reputed to be unaffected by cobra-poison, for Râmânûja is Śeṣha.

simha, in the outskirts of the village. And here also, it is chronicled, Rāmānuja prayed fervently to Lord Śrīnivāsa of Tirupati to put an end to the cruel Parāntaka or the Chōla king and heretic, his tormentor, persecutor and the declared enemy of the Śrīvaiṣṇava-faith. It would appear that this intense invocation to the Deity produced its effect inasmuch as Chōla found a carbuncle—the king's evil—forming on the nape of his neck, festering with worms, and eventually killing him after much torment. Hence he is known as Krimikanṭha Chōla, or worm-necked Chōla.

Rāmānuja now left Sāligrāma and proceeded eastwards to Tondanūr, which seems to have been then the capital or a capital outpost of the Hoysala Ballāla kings of the Jain persuasion ruling at Dvāra-samudra or Halēbīd.<sup>1</sup> Viṭhala-Deva-Rāya was the name of the ruling king and he had his head quarters at the time, at Tondanūr.<sup>2</sup> He had a daughter whom an unclean spirit had taken possession. The king had called many physicians and magicians to treat her, but it was all in vain, and he was very grieved. There was a good man in the town by name Tondanūr-Nambi, who lived by alms. He used to frequent the palace, and one day finding the queen, Śāntala-Dēvi<sup>3</sup> in grief, asked her the cause thereof. She explained that it was due to the condition in which her daughter was found, who even shamelessly ran about the streets naked, and did other antic things, all in consequence of the devil which had entered into her. T. Nambi said: "Noble Queen, may I tell you that a great and holy man, by name Rāmānuja, has arrived at our town. I have become his disciple; and I have learnt that he once treated a similar case to that of your daughter, and succeeded in delivering a princess from an evil spirit—a Brahma-rakshas.<sup>4</sup> If you will get him

<sup>1</sup> Vide Rice's Gazetteer of Mysore.

<sup>2</sup> Known now as Tonnūr, about 16 miles north of Mysore on the way to Melukote. Even so late as 1816 A.C. the kings used to retire to Tondanur. [Pp: 441-2 Vol. I Rice's "Mysore Gazetteer."] to see your daughter with his gracious eyes, I have hopes of a speedy cure for her." The queen was overjoyed at this revelation and communicated it at once to her royal spouse. He said:—"Lady, if Rāmānuja will cast the devil out of our daughter and restore her to a sense of shame, we shall fall at his feet and accept him as our guru."

<sup>3</sup> See p. 41 Introd. Rice's "Belagola Inscriptions."

<sup>4</sup> See pages 41, 42.

In the meanwhile, the king intended to give a feast to his caste-men, the Jainas who abounded in the country. The queen however warned her husband thus:—"Lord, thou givest a feast no doubt, but thy castemen, the Jainas, will reject thy invitation on the score that thou art wanting in a finger of thy hand." "How can they dare refuse a king's invitation?" said the king irritated, and consulted his kinsmen about it. They said:—"King, the Turushka<sup>1</sup> emperor of Delhi, captured thee and thy country; and set a mark on thee to show that thou hadst lost thy independence and sovereignty, by depriving thee of a finger. But our custom does not allow us to eat in the house of a finger-less man. Dost thou forget thou art called Bitti-dēva,<sup>2</sup> or the finger-Lord? We refuse to eat in thy house." This greatly incensed the king and he vowed vengeance against them.

The queen approached Bitti-deva and said:—"Lord, why art thou concerned thus? What care we for our kinsmen? Let us dissociate ourselves from their community and join the Vaishnava ranks by becoming disciples of Rāmānuja. Hast thou forgotten what our Nambi told us about him? And is not our mad daughter also to be set right?" "Well said, we shall at once send for Rāmānuja," said Bitti-deva, and sent out men to invite Rāmānuja to his palace. But when the men delivered their message to Rāmānuja, who had camped outside the town limits, he told them that he would not plant his foot in kings' cities. Nambi was there at the time. He rose and falling before Rāmānuja, pleaded thus:—"Holy Sire, we beseech thee not to be so determined, but enter the king's house.

<sup>1</sup> Or Turk, a general name for all foreign invaders, except the Yavanas and the Feringhees. Read A. Barth's Religions of India: P. 211.

<sup>2</sup> Converted into Sanskrit as Vitthala-deva.

He will be an invaluable gain to our faith. Melukote or Tiru-Nārāyaṇa-puram,<sup>1</sup> about which thou hast been dreaming, is situate in this king's dominions. Thy desire is to restore this old and forgotten place of worship. To do this we want a king to espouse the cause. So we earnestly pray thee not to reject the king's overtures. Enter his house and shower on him thy graces." Rāmānuja was won by this persuasion and immediately made his entry into the city and the king's mansion. Bitti-deva was elated with joy, and as the holy sage advanced, he ran to him and threw himself at his feet. Rāmānuja made kind inquiries, and entering the royal apartments was told the sad plight in which the king's daughter was. He commanded his disciples to have the girl brought before him and sprinkle her with the water made holy by the washing of his feet. This they did. And lo, the evil spirit left her; she was no more demented but returned to a sense of shame, ran into the inner apartments and shrouding herself in garments, returned and fell before Rāmānuja, saying: "Holy Saint, thou art no ordinary mortal. Thou art a celestial being descended from heaven. Else I should not have recovered. Praise be to thee. I bow to thee." Viṭṭhala-deva was simply carried out of himself on witnessing these miracles, and needless to say, at once became a disciple of Rāmānuja, and devoted himself to his service for ever. Rāmānuja bestowed on him the name of Vishṇu-Vardhana-Rāya.<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Rāmānuja knew of this from the Yādavagiri-Māhātmya contained in the Nārada and the Matsya Purāṇas.

<sup>2</sup> The Indian Antiquary Vol. II. May 1873 quotes a passage from Śrāvana Belagula Śthalapurāṇa thus—"In Śaka year 1039, Durmakhi (=1117 A. C.), Betṭa-var-dhana, under the taunts of his favourite concubine(?) and the arguments of Rāmānujāchārya, received Tapta-mudrā (mark of religion) and thus became a convert to the Vaiṣṇava religion. He then changed his name to Vishṇu-var-dhana, and with a bitter hatred against this (Jaina) religion, discontinued or abolished

all the ināms, destroyed 790 Basti temples, and set up Pañcha Nārāyaṇas, viz:—Chennigi-Nārāyaṇa at Bēlūru, Kīrti-Nārāyaṇa at Talakādu, Vijaya-Nārāyaṇa at Gadugu, and Lakshmi-Nārāyaṇa at Haradanahalli, transferring to these all the svāsthyas or ināms that had formerly been given to the Basti temples. He built the tank at Tondanūru from the stones of the destroyed Basti temples and called it Tirumalasāgara. Having abolished different kinds of Jaina ināms * * * he established below this tank Tirumalasāgara chatra for the feeding of the Rāmānuja-kūṭa.

The Jainas rose in revolt against Rāmānuja. It is said that a body of 12,000 of them marched to Rāmānuja, who had taken his abode in Lord Nṛsiṃha's temple at Tondanūr, and demanded of him that he should first argue with them on religion and philosophy, before he interfered with their king. Rāmānuja seeing this tremendous onslaught of an infuriated crowd, thought to himself thus:—"In order to escape from lightning, I have courted thunder; fearing the scorpion, I have fallen a victim to the fangs of a cobra; breaking away from fetters, I have thrust myself into stocks. What is the way now?" Nambi, finding his guru thus embarrassed, said:—"Holy Sire, thou art no ordinary mortal. Is not it thy worth while at such a crisis to reveal thy true celestial nature? May not all men realize thy greatness and be saved?" Rāmānuja, saying: "let it be so then," retired into an ante-chamber in the temple, and commanding a curtain to be hung up between him and the crowd, became a thousand-headed serpent,<sup>1</sup> and argued with the Jaina disputants in a thousand ways, vanquishing them completely. This incident is memorialized to this day by means of a painting of Rāmānuja, overshadowed by the thousand heads of Śeṣha, on a wall in the Nṛsiṃha temple, existing to this day in good repair in Tonda-

(Continued) foot note on page 181.

He gave the name of Melukōṭe and Tirunārāyaṇapuram to the village of Doddagurugahalli, constructed several temples and places, and caused steps to be erected to the hill of Melukōṭe." According to the Belūr inscription: Nārāyaṇa Pratiṣṭhā took place in '1039. S '(1117

A. C). So Rāmānuja must have lived for not less than 20 years in the Mysore country. Mudaliyāndān (Dāsarathi) was deputed to Belūr (=Velāpura) to inaugurate Nārāyaṇa there. So sings the verse:—

விஞ்சபுகழாண்டானே வேலூர்சொல்லிடுத்தருளி
பஞ்சநாரணனை பிரதிட்டைபண்ணி, நாரணப்பதியில்
அஞ்சலென்று தன்னடிமை யாகுமைப்பத்திருவர்தமைக்
கஞ்சமலரான் நாயகனை காத்திருமென்றுகழறா.

[P: 218. Rāmānuja-Divya-Charitam.]

<sup>1</sup>Rāmānuja being known as the Ādi-Śeṣha, is the Lakshmana of Rāmāyaṇa, and Palarāma of Mahā-Bhārata [See p: xiv.—our Bhagavad-gītā with Rāmānuja's commentary.]

rûr (called Chaturvedi-mangalam) Most of them embraced the Vaishṇava faith by becoming the disciples of Rāmānuja. Viṣṇu-Vardhana, the king of the Poysala (Hoysala) country became more and more attached to Rāmānuja. Out of the materials of Jain temples pulled down, he got a tank constructed, intercepting the drainage of the river Yādava coming down from Mēlukôte or Yādavāgiri, 10 miles to the north.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> A few notes bearing on these events may be of use to the reader.

(A) Rice's Mysore Gazetteer Vol. II, p. 274 [1897]:—"Moti Talāb" or lake of pearls, a large tank at Tonāṇṇ in Seringapatna Taluq. It is formed by an embankment carried across a gap between two rocky hills, which stems the water of the Yādava-nadi and other mountain torrents that there unite their streams. The mound, whose dimensions are given as 78 cubits high, 150 long, and 250 thick at the base, is said to have been constructed by Rāmānujāchārya, the Sri Vaishṇava Brāhman reformer, who had taken up his abode at the neighbouring town of Mēlukôte. He named the tank Tirumalasāgara."

(B) Ibid., Vol. I, p. 474.—"He (Rāmānuja) then travelled over great part of Southern India, defending and expounding the Vaishṇava creed. He established several maths, the principal one being at Ahobala. He also converted or restored many Siva temples to the worship of Viṣṇu, among others the celebrated temple of Tirupati. The Chola King Karkāla Chola, in whose dominion Sri Ranga was situated, was an un-compromising Śaiva, and on Rāmānujāchārya's return thither after these religious successes he was required in common with all the Brāhmins to subscribe to a declaration of faith in Siva. To escape persecution he fled to the Hoysala kingdom in Mysore. Here he converted from the Jain faith the king thenceforward known as Viṣṇuvardhana, the date assigned to this event being 1117 (?). Having put down the Jains by the severest measures, he settled under the royal favour and protection at Melukôte, and there established his throne, which is still occupied by the guru known as the Parakālasvāmi (?). After twelve years, on the death of the Chola king, he returned to Sriranga and there ended his days."

(C) Ibid., Vol. I, p. 338.—An important event in his (Ballāla or Bittideva) career was his conversion from the Jain faith to that of Viṣṇu by the apostle Rāmānujāchārya, who had taken refuge in the Hoysala territory from the persecutions of the Chola king, an uncompromising Śaiva. This step, accompanied by a change of his name to Viṣṇuvardhana, by which he is principally known, was probably taken in about 1117 (?). Different reasons are given for it. One is that he had a daughter who was possessed—the Jains being unable to effect her cure, it was undertaken by Rāmānuja, who cast out the evil spirit, and further, in eighteen days of public disputation, refuted the Jains and convicted them of heresy; those who after this would not submit being ground in oil-mills (?). Another version is, that the king had a Vaishṇava wife who, by instigation of Rāmānuja, hinted to him that the Jaina priests were so haughty they would not even accept food at his hands. He was indignant at the idea and resolved to put it to the proof. Now the king had lost a finger, a mutilation that would prevent the Jain priests from eating with him. When, therefore, he found himself dishonoured by a refusal of his invitation, he went over in resentment to the other side, and abandoned the Jains to persecution. Rāmānjan demolished nearly all the Jain temples at the capital, said to have been 720 in number, and used the stones in embanking the large tank."

(Continued) foot note on page 183.

(D) Ibid, Vol. II, p. 295:—"* * Subsequently, about 1117, (P) Rāmānujāchārya, the celebrated apostle of the Vishnuvite sect, on fleeing from Dravida to avoid a confession of faith prescribed by the Chola Rāja to be made by all his subjects, which was to establish the superiority of Śiva over Vishnu, took refuge in the Mysore country, where he succeeded in converting from the Jain faith the powerful Hoysala king, Bitti-Deva, thenceforth known as Vishnuvardhana. This royal convert conferred on his apostle and his followers the tract of country on each side of the river Kāveri at Srirangapatna, known by the name of Ashtagrāma or eight townships, over which he appointed his own officers under the ancient designations of Prabhus and Hebbārs."

(E) Rice's Śravana Belgola Inscriptions (No. 53), P. 48:—(Śāntaḷa-Dēvi, Queen of Vishnuvardhana). "Some details are also given of her family, from which it appears that her father was the senior preggade Narasinga, a Śaiva, while her mother was Māchikabbe, a devoted Jaina. The conflict between her own position as a Jaina and as the queen of the now Vaiṣṇava monarch Vishnu-varohana is reconciled by the statement that Jinanātha was her favourite and Vishnu her God."

Rice's Mysore Gazetteer Vol. II, P. 350.—"Belur, in the Purānas and ancient inscriptions, bears the name of Velapura and Velur, and is styled the Dakshina Vāraṇāsi or Southern Benares. Its sanctity is due to the celebrated temple of Chenna-Kesava, erected and endowed by the Hoysala King Vishnuvardhana, on the occasion of his exchanging the Jain faith for that of Vishnu, in the beginning of the 12th century."

CHAPTER XXIX.

MĒLUKOTE OR ŚRĪ-NĀRĀYAṆAPURAM.

Rāmānuja was thus employed. He not only expounded the profound truths of the Vedānta in Nrisimha's temple at Tondanūr, but with those truths converted thousands of alien faiths to the royal roads of Vedāntic Vaiṣṇavism. While thus employed he ran short of Tiruman,<sup>1</sup> or the holy white earth, with which Śrivaishnavas are required to illumine their foreheads. To go without this distinguishing mark<sup>2</sup> is the greatest misfortune to Śrī-Vaiṣṇavas. Naturally therefore Rāmānuja was much concerned. He had a dream in which Lord Śrī-Nārāyaṇa of Melukote appeared and spoke thus:—"I am very near thee, Rāmānuja, on the Yadugiri hill, awaiting thy arrival; and there thou shalt have thy Tiruman<sup>1</sup> also as well. Come soon." Rāmānuja awoke and related his wonderful dream to all his comrades, and sending for Vishnu-Vardhana, the king, delivered to him the message. The king marvelled and immediately ordered gangs of men to clear the forests in the direction indicated by Rāmānuja, and as Rāmānuja advanced, the king devoutly followed him behind. Steadily progressing thus, they arrived at the foot of the Yadugiri hill, and ascend-

<sup>1</sup> Some notes from Rice's Epigraphica Carnataka Vol. III. p. 20. are here added "—Inscription 80 Sr. records the grant of the title to the sacred earth at Mēlukote, which, it is said, was discovered by Embenmānār, or Rāmānujāchārya, the great Vaiṣṇava reformer. It is a fine white clay or decayed schistose mica, which is used by the Śrivaishṇava Brāhmins for making the nāma or sectarian marks on their foreheads; and is in such demand for this purpose, on account of its purity, that it is transported to distant places, even as far as Benares. It is failed to have been brought to Mēlukote by Garutman, the bird of Vishnu, from Śvētadvīpa in the Kshīrasamudra or milk-ocean.

"Some Vaiṣṇavas work it by digging the whole substance out of the beds in which it lies, and throwing it into large vessels of water, it is stirred about; and while the mica swims, the fragments of quartz remain at the bottom and are taken out by the hand. The mica is then allowed to subside and forms into a mass, which is divided into small pieces, and afterwards made into balls by being moistened in water. These are sold for use, and are perfectly white" [Buchanan. I. 348].

<sup>2</sup> Cp (a) "We sign the servants of God in their foreheads" [Rev. 7. 3].

(b) "Which have not the seal of God in their foreheads" [Rev. 9. 4].

(c) "Having his Father's name written in their foreheads" [Rev. 14. 1].

ing it, arrived at the fountain called Vêdapushkarinî, and sighting the holy slab, (paridhânasila), where of yore Dat-tâtreyâ had worn his ascetic robes, Râmânûja bathed in the fountain and laying aside Kûrêsa's white robes, worn when leaving Srîrangam, put on his colored ascetic robes. The date of entry into Yadugiri is chronicled as the Bahudhânya year, in the month of Tai (or about 1090 A. C., or when Râmânûja was about 80 years of age).<sup>1</sup> From the Vêda-pushkarinî, they silently walked forward in search of where Lord Nârâyana (i.e. His statue) lay hidden. They failed that day to find the place Râmânûja however saw in a vision vouchsafed to him that He lay covered up in an ant-hill, between a Champaka and a Vakula tree on either side, and to the south-west corner of the Kalyâni-pond, and that the ant-hill was overgrown with the sacred basil. He also saw that the place where tîruman was deposited lay to the north-west corner of the same Kalyâni-pond, and he also heard as if Nârâyana telling him that fragments of basil leaves would be strewn along the path which lay between Râmânûja and the places indicated. Râmânûja awoke from his reverie and followed the directions given. This led to Kalyâni, and thence on to the ant-hill. This was covered with basil as prophesied. Râmânûja was transported with joy and prostrating himself before the place, removed the earth, and lo, the statue of Nârâyana was found underneath. Inexpressible joy animated the devout band who were privileged to be present on this most auspicious and blissful occasion; and the divine sight so intoxicated them that they deliriously danced, chanted praises, sent forth peals of hand-clappings and ejaculations, and with king Vishnu-varadhana in their midst, celebrated the occasion with a blast of trumpets and a beat of tom-toms and a burst of instrumental and other music—all, a united outburst and demonstration of the intense spiritual glow in which they had become enveloped by an event, the most unusual and extraordinary in the annals of mankind. Pails of milk were brought and emptied over the Holy Statue followed by a detail of ritual prescribed by the Pañcharātra Śāstra. Rāmānuja himself personally worshipped the Deity for three days, and Nārāyaṇa was thus reinstalled after ages of oblivion, and the decad of St. Nammāzhvār, beginning with Oru-nāyakam [Tiruvāymozhi, v-1], was dedicated to this God, inasmuch as Rāmānuja was the rightful inheritor of all the spiritual wealth of the apostles preceeding him,<sup>1</sup> and was thus the authority to interpret forgotten traditions.

---

<sup>1</sup> Mr. Rice puts 1117 A.C., as the year of Bitti-Deva's conversion. This must be wrong. Bahudhânya tallies with 1090, A.C., when Râmânûja was exactly 82 years of age.

Rāmānuja next proceeded to the north-west corner of the Kalyāṇi-pond, and made a furrow on the ground with his holy staff. It revealed white beds of clay, and thus was another act of his vision realized, to the marvel of all present. Rāmānuja thus obtained the holy earth he wanted, (described in the beginning of this Chapter), with which he signed himself on the twelve parts of the body prescribed, and to his great delectation.

The jungle over the summit of the Melukote (Yādavagiri) hill was cleared away, streets were aligned, rows of houses built, a temple erected for Lord Nārāyaṇa over the ant-hill; and a series of festivals, monthly, annual and so on were instituted. But an utsava (processional) image was wanting—an image cast of a compound of five select metals in fixed proportions. But this was difficult of accomplishment, and Rāmānuja fell to musing deeply as to how this difficulty was to be overcome. He was again given a vision, in which Nārāyaṇa appeared to him and spoke thus :—“ Rāmānuja, our moveable representative is alive, named Rāmapriya, which is now in Delhi with the Turk Emmādu Rāya. Proceed there and bring it. Rāmānuja accordingly made preparations and journeyed all the way to Delhi and there meeting the Rāya or king, prevailed upon him to grant his request. The Turk king gave orders that Rāmānuja be taken to the apartments where his plundered treasures were hoarded. There were many idols, but Rāmānuja failed to find among them Rāmapriya; and he fell into a reverie as he pondered how to trace it. He was given a dream in which Rāmāpriya appeared and said—"I am with the daughter of the king. She has made a plaything of me. To her dallyings and caresses, I am a living person. Come there and find me." Rāmānuja awoke and reported to the king that the idol he sought was with the Sultāni. The king's curiosity was roused at the revelations, a foreign Sanyāsin of a different persuasion was making to him; and not only curiosity but respect and adoration for the holy saint. The King took the Sanyāsin Rāmānuja into the seraglio, where no other man dared enter; and wonderful to relate, Rāmāpriya was there found, fondled by the Sultāni, his daughter, to whom He played the husband. Rāmānuja, entering, called Him by His name, and lo, the Image jumped down from the couch on which the Sultāni had placed Him, and walked to where Rāmānuja stood, in all the glory and grace of an incarnated deity, embellished according to all the ideals of taste natural to Āryan imagination. Rāmānuja embraced the advancing Divine Beauty with all the fondness of a parent finding his long-lost son; and in commemoration of the discovery, called him by the endearing name of Śelva-p-pillai, which in Samskrīt is Sampatkumāra, by which name the Image is still called. The king, who witnessed all this procedure was simply astonished beyond measure, and loading Rāmānuja with gifts and honors, sent him back from the scene of his holy mission.

---

<sup>1</sup> Read verse : ஏழந்த பெருங்கீர்த்தி [Rāmānuja's tanigān by Anandāzhvān or Anantasūri.]

The daughter Sultāni would not bear the separation from the, to her, living doll. She wanted it back for herself. But the father said: "It is their god, daughter; how can we claim Him?" "Then," cried the Sultāni piteously to her father: "Send me with my God." "Most cheerfully," said the father, and allowed her to depart with untold wealth and other things, telling Rāmānuja:—"Holy hermit, thy God goes not alone, but with a wife as well—a precious wife. I consign her to thy care." Rāmānuja proceeded with his Divine treasure, and reached Yādavagiri in due time. Here he inaugurated Sampat-kumāra in all ceremony, and instituted all the festivals which must be celebrated throughout the year, with the necessary establishment to conduct them for all time to come.<sup>1</sup> And Rāmānuja assured all who made Yādavagiri their holy residence, that they would be entitled to attain to the same spiritual state as himself. By the name Nārāyaṇādri in <sup>1</sup> Our readers, we are sure, would like to have some historical light thrown on this most curious incident in the life of Rāmānuja. We shall try how far it can be thrown. The word Emmādu is a clue,—a philological clue which comes to our help. Emmādu is a most probable corruption of the word Mahommed, Mahmūd, Ahmed, Masūd or Modūd. These are the names of the Turk Kings of Ghazni and Mahmūd of Ghor, at the period between about 1090 and 1102, A.C. 1090 A.C., is the probable year of Rāmānuja's entry into Yādavagiri or Melukōṭe; and the probable year in which or before which the Jain King of the Hoysalas, Viṭṭala-deva, was converted to Vaiṣṇavism, receiving the name of Viṣṇu-var-dhana. The death of this king was about 1133 A.C., as we learn from Rice's Śrāvana Belagoḷa Inscriptions. [Intro: p. 23].

Purāṇas (read Yādavagiri-Māhātmya) tell us that Rāmāpriya, the image descended as a holy heritage from Rāma of the Solar Race to Kuṣa his son and came to Krishna of the Lunar Race, as dowry, who worshipped Him as his tutelary God.

Mahmūd (Emmādu?) or Mahommed of Ghazni's various expeditions into India are known, and his foundation of the Muslimān Empire at Lahore in A.C. 1022 [See p. 6, Ch. II, Lethbridge's History of India], the sack of the Somnāth Temple in A.C. 1026-27, when Rājput princes from all parts flocked to defend their holiest shrine assembled. In the sacking and booty obtained thus from various parts, Rāmāpriya appears to have been carried away. How He was carried away from Melukōṭe is buried in the obscure tradition of prehistoric days. Mahmūd died in A.C. 1030. Ahmed (Emmādu?) succeeded him, and then came Masūd the Second (Emmādu?) in A.C. 1098 who resided chiefly at Lahore, and whose generals carried his arms beyond the Ganges [vide p. 305, Elphinstone's History of India]. Then comes Modud (Emmādu?), and lastly Mahmūd (Emmādu) of Ghor. The latter established the Delhi empire no doubt in 1191, but he had exploited often in India. But he might be left out of account for our purpose.

Rāmāpriya's image seems to have been carried hither and thither in these days of turmoil, and thrown into lumber in Delhi or perhaps Lahore gauded by some king, a general or viceroy of any of the Emmādus, at the time Rāmānuja visited the place.

It is probable that by the chief name Mahmūd (or Emmādu), any king, or his general or viceroy who stationed himself at the time at Delhi, was known in the far south. And even a Hindu sovereign at Delhi might have been called by that name, if there was one at the time, inasmuch as he was subjected to the onslaughts of Musalmans of the period. But an account given by Buchanan [p. 351, Vol. I], confirms what otherwise would be a mere conjecture. He says:—"Near the place (Tondanūr), there is a monument dedicated to one of the fanatical followers of Mahmūd Ghazni, who had penetrated this length, and had here suffered martyrdom." By this it is clear that Mahmūd Ghazni's depredations had extended as far as Melukōṭe, the temple of which he would surely have desecrated and despoiled of its riches.

If all this is not quite satisfactorily tenable, we must speculate upon Rāmānuja's visiting Lahore or Ghazni itself; but then we have no tradition to that effect unless by the Kṛita-yage, Vedādri in the Trīta-age, and Yālavādri or Yādavagiri in Dvāpara age is the holy hill of Melukote known, and in the Kali-age, as having been restored by the Yati (asectic) Rāmānuja, it is called Yati-saila. Thus it is written in Sātvata-Samhita<sup>1</sup> (Pāñcharātra).

Foot note on page 189—(continued).

the general term Delhi, any chief city or even the country generally of the Musalmans in the far north-west of India, was understood by the far Southerus of India in those days.

Buchanan's account of this incident given in his Journals, I, 342, is very interesting, and deals with what became of the Moslem Sultāni as soon as she arrived at Melukote; and how the Pariahs or Chamars or Panchamas who assisted Rāmānuja were given by Rāmānuja the honorific title of Tiru-k-kulattār, &c. This word means The blessed caste. Rāmānuja gave them the privilege of entering into the Holy Temples of Melukote, Srirangam and Belur (in Mysore), once in the year Rāi Dās, a Pariah or Chamar, and a disciple of Rāmānandi, the disciple of Rāmānuja, set afoot a movement for the regeneration of his class, between 1820 and 1830, in the district of Chattisgarh. They called themselves Satnamis. Readers are referred to Pp: 206, ff. of Theosophist, Vol. XI, 1890, for an account of this reform. We refer our readers to our pamphlet on the Pāñchamas, and also to pp. 272-3, of Rice's Gazetteer, Vol. II, 1897, where other interesting information as regards Melukote Temple and its endowments is given, as also the fact of the Mahārājas of Mysore having been Vaishnavas. We shall add an interesting account which may be of some philological use, even though the account may not be true. A work called Yavaniparnaya has been written by Prabhākara, the subject matter being the marriage of Sampat-kumāra with the Sultāni. It is usual in Hindu-marriages to read the lineal pedigree of both the bride and the bridegroom. For Sampat-kumāra, Harita-gotra is assigned as He is the holy son of Rāmānuja, and for Sultāni, who is Yavani, Gārgya-gotra is assigned. To Hindus, all foreigners are Yavanas and Mlecches. So the Turk-girl is Yavani. The philological interest to us here consists in introducing Rishi Gārgya. Yavanas proper are Greeks; and Gārgya is said to have begotten Kāla-Yavana; and thus Gārgya (Greek) becomes the patriarchal progenitor of the Greeks. Vishnu-purāna V. 23, 4 and 5. — “तंकालयवनं नाम राज्यस्त्वेयवनेश्वरः। अभिविच्यवनं यातो पुत्रोभूदाक्षिसन्निभः॥ तंकालयवनं नाम, &c. Also see Harivamśa 115-15. — “मानुष्यागाग्यभार्याया नियोगाच्छूलपाणिनः। सकालयवनो नाम जज्जेश्वरो महाबलः॥” See also Asiatic Researches Vol. VI, p. 506; Vol. XV. p. 100.

<sup>1</sup> कलौयुगेतुसंभासे यतिना पूजितस्ततः ।

यतिशैलमिति श्रेष्ठं नामधेयान्तरंगिरे ॥

[47-48, Yādavagiri-Māhātmya.] Also in Īṣvara Samhita, 20-278 ff. —

“प्रथमं शेषरूपो मे कैङ्कर्यमकरोद्भवान् ॥

ततस्तुलक्ष्मणो भूत्वा मामाराधितवानिह ।

इदानीमपि मां यदुं बलमद्वत्त्वमस्मि ॥

कलावपियुगेभूयः कश्चिद्वत्वा द्विजोत्तमः ।

नानाविधैर्भोगजात रचने मे करिष्यसि ॥

CHAPTER XXIX.

MĒLUKOTE OR ŚRĪ-NĀRĀYAṆAPURAM.

Rāmānuja was thus employed. He not only expounded the profound truths of the Vedānta in Nrisimha's temple at Tondanūr, but with those truths converted thousands of alien faiths to the royal roads of Vedāntic Vaiṣṇavism. While thus employed he ran short of Tiruman,<sup>1</sup> or the holy white earth, with which Śrīvaiṣṇavas are required to illumine their foreheads. To go without this distinguishing mark<sup>2</sup> is the greatest misfortune to Śrī-Vaiṣṇavas. Naturally therefore Rāmānuja was much concerned. He had a dream in which Lord Śrī-Nārāyaṇa of Melukote appeared and spoke thus:—"I am very near thee, Rāmānuja, on the Yadugiri hill, awaiting thy arrival; and there thou shalt have thy Tiruman,<sup>1</sup> also as well. Come soon." Rāmānuja awoke and related his wonderful dream to all his comrades, and sending for Vishnu-Vardhana, the king, delivered to him the message. The king marvelled and immediately ordered gangs of men to clear the forests in the direction indicated by Rāmānuja, and as Rāmānuja advanced, the king devoutly followed him behind. Steadily progressing thus, they arrived at the foot of the Yadugiri hill, and ascend-digging the whole substance out of the beds in which it lies, and throwing it into large vessels of water, it is stirred about; and while the mica swims, the fragments of quartz remain at the bottom and are taken out by the hand. The mica is then allowed to subside and forms into a mass, which is divided into small pieces, and afterwards made into balls by being moistened in water. These are sold for use, and are perfectly white" [Buchanan. I. 348].

<sup>1</sup> Some notes from Rice's Epigraphica Carnataka Vol. III p. 20, are here added. "—Inscription 80 Sr. records the grant of the title to the sacred earth at Mēlukote, which, it is said, was discovered by Embērumanār, or Rāmānujāchārya, the great Vaiṣṇava reformer. It is a fine white clay or decayed schistose mica, which is used by the Śrīvaiṣṇava Brāhmins for making the nāma or sectarian marks on their foreheads; and is in such demand for this purpose, on account of its purity, that it is transported to distant places, even as far as Benares. It is failed to have been brought to Mēlukote by Garutmān, the bird of Vishnu, from Śvētadvīpa in the Kshīrasamudra or milk ocean.

"Some Vaiṣṇavas work it by

<sup>2</sup> Cp (a) "We sign the servants of God in their foreheads" [Rev. 7. 3].

(b) "Which have not the seal of God in their foreheads" [Rev. 9. 4].

(c) "Having his Father's name written in their foreheads" [Rev. 14. 1].

Rāmānuja also established a śeṣ of his at Yati-saila, called the Yatirāja-math, where a Sanyāsīn is always to live and manage the affairs of the Fane. The building still exists intact, and the monastery has had a line of illustrious successors to this day. An old badari tree still lives in it.

During the time Rāmānuja was so installed in his high pontificate, he is said to have gone to Padmagiri,<sup>1</sup> and engaged also awarded to them the rare and valued privilege of visiting the temple at Melkote three days in the year. Thus the emancipation of the Pariah commenced long ago, and if it has not been yet accomplished, the cause is not solely the absence of consideration for the class on the part of some of the most illustrious founders of religious sects in India. Though at the present day the followers of Sri Rāmānuja-chariār form probably the most exclusive among the Brāhman community, still the fact remains that the founders of the sect laboured for the elevation of the depressed and despised castes * * * the hallowed name of Tirukkulattār carries us back to those good old days when the practice and the preaching of religion meant really the elevation of men, and the greatest of saints considered it a part of their duty to minister to the religious cravings of the lowest classes of people."

Foot note on page 191—(continued).

In these days we have the spectacle of a Mirādās a Mahomedan, who has embraced Vaishnavism, and is performing Harikathas all over the country and of a Chenchudās, (a Tirukkulattār), at Kolar (Mysore State), who is working for the religious elevation of his class, by establishing temples, Muths and Bhajana-kūṭas, and to whom his spiritual guru, of Tirukkovaḷur, has delegated the privilege to administer himself, to his men, the Pancha-samskāra sacraments and receive dues called the Pancha-kāṇikās.

<sup>1</sup> The Bauddhas and Jainas are grouped together in the one category of anti-Vedic. But Bauddhas seem to be the first who came to Maisūr, followed by the Jainas, as the Sravana Belagola Inscriptions, by Rice, tell us. Padmagiri appears to be one of the names of this place. The following extract is from Rice's Belagola Inscriptions— [P. 37] "We now come to a series of inscriptions connected with Ganga Raja. The first of them are the last lines in Nos. 75 and 76, which state, in Jaina, Mahārāshtri and Hale Kannada respectively, that Ganga Raja had the enclosure or cloisters round (suttālayaṇa) made for the colossal statue of Gomateśvara. The inscriptions are on either side the image, immediately below those of Chamunda Raya, and in characters to correspond. Their date, for the reasons already given (p. 23), is fixed as A.D. 1116. The erection of this enclosing parapet walls and other buildings around has certainly detracted from the imposing and picturesque effect the gigantic image must previously have presented when standing alone in its naked sublimity on the summit of the hill. But probably the walls were now required for its protection from injury. For when it was erected the Jainas were in the ascendant, and Jainism was the state religion. But, with the conversion to the Vaiṣṇava faith of there with the Bauddhas in a philosophical controversy. He succeeded in vanquishing the atheists, and owing to a wager made evidently by them that, in the event of defeat, they would submit themselves to be ground in an oil-mill<sup>1</sup>, in case they were not willing to become adherents to the new faith, they seem to have been allowed to undergo the self-imposed punishment.

---

Foot note on page 192—(continued).

the Hoysala king Bitti Deva (subsequently called Vishnu Vardhana), in probably this very year, by the reformer Rāmānujāchārya, great animosity was excited against the Jainas, albeit they were too powerful to be altogether set aside. There are even stories of Rāmānujāchārya's having mutilated the image, so as to ruin it as an object of worship. No trace remains of such injury, unless it be that the fore-finger of the left hand which is shorter than it should be, had a piece struck off below the first joint and was afterwards sculptured into a perfect finger again. This particular form of revenge would easily have suggested itself if it be true, as one tradition states, that the change of the king's religion was in some degree brought about by the refusal of his Jaina guru to take food with him because the king was mutilated, having lost one of its fingers.

<sup>1</sup> As for the grinding in oil-mills, this seems to have been a stock-punishment, either true or an allegory to express the total overthrow of the disputants in wordy war. Such oil-mill-grinding accounts are common as between Bauddhas and Jainas, and Jainas and Saivas. [Vide p. 45, Rice's Sravana-Belagola Inscriptions and p. 471, Vol. I. Rice's Mysore Gazetteer 1897 in the latter Kumarila having ground Bauddhas and Jainas together]. If this was literally true, then we have parallels in Jesus Christ, of whom we are thus told in the Epiphany, p. 14, Jan'y, 24, 1903, Vol. XXI, Calcutta—"The hands that worked loving miracles of mercy, lifted also the lash of cords, to scourge the sacrilegious and the covetous out of the temple courts. Terrible words issued from those lips so full of grace. * * * 'Depart ye cursed into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels'." Such were some of the sayings of the Incarnate Love of God—Actions, utterances, which those who seek to emasculate that Character int'gan 'Oriental Christ,' destitute of everything but a weak tolerant benevolence, are fain to ignore or obscure, as scarcely to be fitted into their imagined scheme of human perfection." So if Rāmānuja is not to be emasculated, we may also credit him literally with the mill-grinding story!

CHAPTER XXX.

CHOLA'S PERSECUTIONS.

Twelve years, it is written, did Rāmānuja stay in the Maisur Country, with his head-quarters at Śrī-Nārāyaṇapura (Mēlukôte). All this time he had no news of what events transpired at Śrīrangam, which he had left owing to the Sivite king Kṛimikantha-Chola's persecutions. Now a Śrī-Vaiṣṇava arrived, and fell with his face flat before Rāmānuja. Raising him, Rāmānuja eagerly inquired :—"Is all going on well with Lord Ranga and all His holy affairs?" "All is well, Sire," said he, "save that you are very much missed." "But," asked Rāmānuja with a fluttering heart, "how did Kûrêṣa and Mahâpûrṇa fare, who were forced to appear before the apostate Chola?" "Sire," he began, "the two good men, as you are aware, were taken to Chola's presence, and Chola commanded them to set their signatures to the written declaration : No higher being than Śiva exists. But Kûrêṣa poured out before him voluminous authorities from the Vedas, Upanishads, Smritis and Purāṇas, proving that Nārāyaṇa was the Highest God, being the Cause of the cosmos, as also its Author for creation, sustention, and dissolution, and therefore the only Object of worship and contemplation ; and that Chatur-mukha Brahmā and Rudra were respectively His son and grandson ; and cited other verses to demonstrate his position<sup>1</sup>. But Chola after all said in angry tones :—"Look here, thou art indeed a very clever person, and therefore capable of interpreting authoritative texts to suit thy own preconceived prejudices. I will not hear all this. Here is my circular containing the statement : "There is no higher than Śiva" I command thee to sign it without another word of protest". Kûrêṣa took the paper, but before attaching his signature thereto, wrote :—

<sup>1</sup> Two are cited here for the use of our readers :—

एक-प्रासीसरत्याद मन्य-प्रचालयन्मुदा ।

अपरो, दीधरन्मूर्ध्ना कोधिकस्तेषुगणयताम् ॥ [Kûrêṣa]

यन्मूर्ध्नाचिन्तितमस्मिन्प्रबोधकेन तीर्थेनमूर्ध्नाविधूनेनशिवशिवोभूत ।

ध्यातुर्मनश्शमलशैलविसृष्टवज्रं ध्यायेच्छिखरंभगवत्तत्परगारविन्दम् ॥

[Bhāgavata III. 28-22.]

'Droṇam asti tataḥ param,' and then signed his name under it. The meaning of this passage is: "But droṇa is higher than that." This, and "Śivāt parātaram naṣṭi," meaning: 'there is no higher than Siva,' together make a couplet in Sanskrit verse. Taken together, they read:—"There is no higher than Siva; but Drōṇa is higher than that (Siva)."<sup>1</sup> By this Kūrēṣa implicated a pun on the terms Śiva and Drōṇa; Śiva meaning a small measure, and Drōṇa, a greater measure. This play on words was taken as a slight and affront which necessarily threw the king into a rage, who exclaimed "Pull out the eyes of this daring jester." "But" exclaimed Kūrēṣa in return, "thou needst not take that trouble, tyrant; I will do that act with my own hands, for my eyes ought not to remain after seeing a sinner like thyself."<sup>1</sup> A martyr to the cause of Vaishnavism, Kūrēṣa, so saying, gouged out his eyes, striking terror into all who witnessed this blood-curdling scene. The cruel king now turned to the venerable old āchārya Mahāpūrṇa, and cried:—"Now, Sir, will you sign this circular or no?" Pūrṇa said he could not, supporting his refusal by citations from various scriptures. On this, the king commanded his myrmidons to catch the dissenter and pluck out his eyes. This cruelty having been inflicted the king drove the two martyrs out of his palace.

Blood streamed out of the eye-less cavities of old Pūrṇa, and the poignant agony consequent may be better imagined than described. Pūrṇa's daughter Attuzhāy-amṛtā had followed the martyrs unobserved. When they emerged from the palace with gore dripping and drenching their persons, she ran to them, and leading them by their hands, passed out of sight, and comforted and consoled them as best as she could, wiping their bloody faces, bathing with water, and thus doing her best to stop the blood and alleviate their terrible sufferings. Kūrēṣa was middle-aged, and had besides a strong will, which he further strengthened by the reflection: "Ah, God, what grace of Thine indeed that thou hast chosen me as Thy vessel to give eye for eye," the second eye meaning faith—the Vaishṇava-faith. Thus he bore the pain with a courage, superhuman. But Pūrṇa was in his declining years, and tottering as he was in the weakness of old age, found the pain beyond his powers of endurance, and therefore laid himself down on the way in the open, his head resting on the lap of Kūrêsa, and his feet on his poor daughter's lap. "Holy Sire," said they to him, "what cruel fate has befallen us, and you in particular. Your birth-place is Srīrangam, your God is Ranga, and your disciple is Rāmānuja himself, and yet to think that destiny should have ordained your grave in an out-of-the way field near Gangai-konda-sôzha-puram! Does this cause you grief?" To this, Pūrṇa said :—"My beloved children, have ye not heard that 'wherever a Vaishṇava may chance to die, there God is present with him'<sup>1</sup> even as Blessed Rāma was present at the dying of Jatāyu, in the wilderness?<sup>2</sup> And have ye not heard that, "the best place for a Vaishṇava to die is on a Vaishṇava's lap or in a Vaishṇava's house?"<sup>3</sup> And this besides is holy land too where I am dying, for it is where our holy ancestors Nāthamuni and Kurugai-kāval-appan died. Also know that if we grieve, because we did not die at Srīrangam itself, all our posterity will think that for salvation, death in Srīrangam alone is necessary. No, no, our rule is that a good soul, which has capitulated to God (prapanna) may meet his death anywhere, and yet be sure of God beside him there." So speaking, Mahâpūrṇa expired with his last thoughts lovingly fixed on Yāmunaçhārya, his Gurn, and sped to ineffable Rest in the bosom of God.<sup>4</sup>

<sup>1</sup> For other particulars of conversation, see Topic 101, in our Divine Wisdom of Dravida Saints, p 118

According to custom, Pūrṇa had to be cremated with due ceremony and honors. There came some way-farers and said :

<sup>1</sup> यत्रवाप्ययवादेशे वैष्णवोऽस्मियतेयदि ।

तथातन्नाशुसन्निध्यं करोतिगरुडध्वज ॥

<sup>2</sup> Rāmāyaṇa III, 69.

<sup>3</sup> वैष्णवस्याकशय्याया वैष्णवस्यगृहेऽपिवा ॥

<sup>4</sup> A place called Paṣupati Kōil, about 7 miles from Kandiyūr (Tanjore District) is pointed out as the place where Mahâpūrṇa breathed his last.

“O man, you have a corpse, and we help those who are abandoned by all, as you evidently are.” Kûrêsa cried :—“Sirs, God is with us ; so proceed on your way and succour those who are really abandoned. These searches, then, after anâtha-pretas (helpless corpses) went their way. And now turned up suddenly Srîvaishnavas, people of Kûrêsa’s own faith, by the help of whom he cremated Pûrṇa by the special rite called the Brahma-mêdha.

Kûrêsa was now gently led to a shelter, and after resting there for a while, after the tremendous trials he had undergone, was brought to Srîrangam by night-marches to elude pursuit by the king’s emissaries, if he still did intend to persecute the fugitives. Kûrêsa was spending weary days lamenting over what had happened, and grieving that he was denied the privilege of dying with the veteran Mahâpûrṇa.

One day, Kûrêsa desired to visit Lord Ranga, for the first time after the chapter of disastrous events related above. Being blind, he slowly groped his way to the shrine. But king Chola had strictly decreed by his royal mandate that none should be allowed to enter it, who was a follower of Râmânuja. When then Kûrêsa was about to step into the Temple, the guards said : “Sire, our orders are strict. No one belonging to Râmânuja are to be admitted. But you are a good man par excellence, and so we make of you an exception. Enter, but pray make an avowal that you have seceded from Râmânuja.” On hearing this, Kûrêsa closed his ears and said : “Good guards, what have I heard ? If I have to secede from Râmânuja, and recant as you wish, I had better give up this God Ranga. Without Râmânuja, no God exists for me.” So saying, Kûrêsa groped his way back, bent with grief, and fell on the ground weeping, uttering, in despairing tones, the holy verses of saints. Soon after, he left Srîrangam, with his two children, to Tirumâlirunjolai (near Madura) to spend his days there in grief and solitude.

Such was the narrative given by the guest who had arrived at Melukote from Srîrangam. Râmânuja listened to the bitter tale, which was to him like molten lead poured into his ears.

With difficulty he suppressed his rising emotions ; and at last, containing himself no longer, burst into a passion of grief, dropped on the ground like a felled tree and rolled in the dust, wetting it with his burning tears. His disciples gathered round him and did their best to console him. And he resigned himself at last, thanking God that Kûrêsa at least was alive, whom thus he had yet a chance to see, though the thought of the loss of his eyes was to him unbearable.

Mahâpûrṇa, being his Guru, all the sacraments to be celebrated after death were duly performed such as Śrī-chârṇa-paripālana, and memorial verses<sup>1</sup> were dedicated to him.

Râmānuja's heart was wrung with agony. He called M. M. Āndān<sup>2</sup> to his side, and directed him to proceed to Śrī-rangam, carrying condolences and a budget of news to Kûrêsa, and return with all the intelligence of that place ; and engaged himself more vigorously than ever in prelections on the Vedānta which he delivered to his devoted audiences.

About this time, GoshtĠhĠ-pûrṇa, one of the Gurus of Râmānuja, also died. His dīciples gathered round him and asked him what were his thoughts in his last moments. He said he was thinking of his Guru Yāmunaçhârya, and the meaning of his verse :—

रघुवरयदभूस्त्वंतादृशोवायसस्य प्रणतइतिदयालुर्यस्यचैयस्यकृष्ण ।

प्रतिभवमपराद्धुर्मुग्धसायुज्यदोभूर्वदकिमपदमागस्तस्यतेस्तिचमायाः ॥

' O Rāma Great, who forgave the miscreant Kḍka !

O Krishna Great, who forgave the miscreant Chaitya !

How can my sin persist against such grace of Thine ?

So saying Pûrṇa died. And Terk-Āzhvâr, his son, performed

<sup>1</sup> कमलापतिकल्याणगुणामृतनिषेवया ।

पूर्णकामायसततंपूर्णायमहतेनस ॥

आचार्यायामुनेयादधिगतनिगमान्तार्थजातंप्रपत्ति

ओपादिचद्रहस्यानपियातिपतयेयश्चतद्रक्षणार्थम् ।

चोलेन्द्रप्राप्यचोक्त्वासदसिपरपुमान्भीपतिर्हीतिपीडा ।

शरीरान्तकृताञ्जल्यसहतमनवैतमहापूर्णमार्यम् ॥

<sup>2</sup> Full name :—Mar-onrillā-Māruti-y-andān.

all the funeral ceremonies. Memorial verses were dedicated to him.<sup>1</sup>

Tirumâlai-Andân<sup>2</sup>, Tiru-v-aranga-p-perumâl-Araiyaṛ,<sup>3</sup> Sṛi-saila-pūrṇa,<sup>4</sup> and Kāñchi-pūrṇa,<sup>5</sup> the other gurus of Rāmānuja also soared to the ETERNAL Regions, at this time ; and memorial verses were dedicated to them as custom demanded.

Thus ends a black chapter.<sup>6</sup>

[It is chronicled of Kāñchi-pūrṇa that it was a very dark night at the close of a day, when he had finished his services to Lord Varada, and had to go home. A torch-bearer by name Arulâlan attached to the Temple was found on the premises. Pūrṇa begged of him to conduct him back to his retreat lighting the dark way with his torch. But he excused himself saying he was much tired that day, and slipped away, to sleep snug in a corner. Pūrṇa thought he would find his way in the pitch-dark night as best as he could ; but hardly had he crossed the threshold of the Temple-gate, when there was found a torch-bearer with his torch, ready to conduct him home. Pūrṇa was glad that the man had kindly changed his mind for his sake. The next morning, however, when Pūrṇa came to the Temple to do the round of his duties, the torch-bearer ran towards

<sup>1</sup> श्रमदमगुणपूर्वं यामुनार्यप्रसादात्
अधिगतपरमार्थं ज्ञानभक्त्यादिसिन्धुम् ।
यतिपतिनतपादं श्लोकतत्त्वार्थनिष्ठम्
श्रितदुरितहरन्तंगोष्ठिपूर्वनमामि ॥

यामुनार्यपदाम्भोजं धीमक्त्यमृतसागरम् ।
श्रीमद्गोष्ठीपुरीपूर्वं देशिकेन्द्रं भजामहे ॥

<sup>2</sup> रामालुजमुनीन्द्राय द्रामिडीसंहितार्थदम् ।
मालाधरगुरुवन्दे वावदूकविपश्चितम् ॥

<sup>3</sup> अध्यापयतीन्द्राय पराङ्मुखसहस्रिकाम् ।
तन्नाथवर्चस्यवन्दे श्रीरङ्गाधिपदेशिकम् ॥

<sup>4</sup> पितामहस्यापि पितामहाय प्राचेतसादेशफलप्रदाय ।
श्रीभाष्यकारोत्तमदेशिकाय श्रीशैलपूर्णयिनमोनमस्तात् ॥

<sup>5</sup> करुणाकरपादाब्ज शरणायमहात्मने ।
श्रीमद्गजेन्द्रदासाऽकाञ्चीपूर्णयितेनमः ॥

<sup>6</sup> "Yes they are gone, and round us, too, the night,
In ever-nearing circle weaves her shade." [Matthew Arnold.]

him, and with a look of great repentance, fell at his feet craving pardon for his refusal, the previous night, to light him home. Pûrna was taken aback at this demonstration, for he had had him actually the previous night. It now however flashed upon his mind that it must have been Lord Varada Himself after all (whose tamil name is Arulâlan also), who had personated the torch-bearer. With joy bubbling in his breast at this additional evidence of God's love for his humble votaries, he dismissed the real torch-bearer, of course forgiving him <sup>1</sup>]

[A tradition also has been handed down, with regard to Arulâlan that he was the favorite of Kâñchîpûrna, so much so that he daily received from the latter the remains of Varada-offered food in the temple, after having been eaten by him. One day Pûrna gave the food on a leaf to Arulâlan. Somehow a leaf had found its way into one of the holy vessels with which food was offered to Lord Varada; and Pûrna was shown this. He identified it with the leaf he had given to Arulâlan, and the latter, when asked, said he could not explain how it found its way into the shrine and into a holy vessel. Of course the temple-officials resolved to perform a great purificatory ceremony. But Lord Varada declared to them that he would brook no such ceremony, inasmuch as Arulâlan was such a dear servant of his, and Pûrna was a sacred person, whose touch of the food and Arulâlan's touch of it again made the leaf so holy that he would rather have the day's food served to him with the leaf. This was, accordingly done and no purificatory ritual customarily binding, was gone through. It is said that Râmânuja had come to learn the extraordinary sanctity of Pûrna and of all that concerned him and of the esteem in which Lord Varada held him; and that it was on this account Râmânuja had been eager to partake of the food first taken by Pûrna. It was for this purpose, it may be remembered, that Râmânuja invited Pûrna to his house; but he was thwarted in the design by the indiscretion of his wife—which has already been related on page. 70.]

<sup>1</sup> This account fortuitously [a miracle I should say] fell into my hands on the day of my paying a chance visit to the Holy Shrine of Koviladi (Tanjore District) on the 21st February 1905, vide Prapancha Mitran (Tamil) dated Friday 17th February 1905.

CHAPTER XXXI.

RĀMĀNUJA'S RETURN TO SRÎRĀṄGAM.

M. M. Āndān, who was despatched by Rāmānuja to Srîrangam, arrived there in due time and making obeisance to Kîrêsa, announced himself to the now blind but heroic martyr. Kîrêsa fell into ecstasy and looked upon Āndān as Rāmānuja himself arrived, and hurriedly asked, in anxious tremulous tones, how it was faring with Rāmānuja. Said Āndān:—“He is well enough; but his grief at what has happened here and especially at the loss of your eyes, is inconsolable. He has sent me to tender you his heart-felt sympathies”. “Good,” said Kîrêsa, “but inform my master that so long as his life has been saved from the bigot Chola—a life which sustains the world—the loss of my eyes is of no account whatever.”

Intelligence arrived at this time that king Chola had died<sup>1</sup> of a carbuncle on his neck, festering with worms. Āndān, to make sure of this, journeyed to Gangai-konḍa-Sozhapuram (near Chidambaram?), and obtaining corroboration of the glad news, hurried on to Melukote, taking with him Ammangi-ammāl, whom he met on his way.

In due course they arrived at Melukote, and finding Rāmānuja busy at the time bathing in the holy pond Kalyāṇi, fell before him, and shedding tears of joy, related to him the news of Chola's death. Rāmānuja was transported with joy at the death of the sworn enemy of his Faith, and raising up the two disciples, embraced them, himself shedding tears of joy and

<sup>1</sup> From inscriptions it is made out that Kulottunga Chola I or Vira-Chola or Rāja-Rajendra Chola's time was 1064 to 1113 A.C. And he is said to have died a few years earlier than Viṣṇu Vardhana of Hoysala, who is found at Yādavapura (Mēlukote) in 1125 A.C. (No. 16, Inscription, Mysore.) He is also known as Krimi-kanṭha and also Karikāla, as is seen in the verse:—

“பூப்பதுமத்தவன் படைத்தமைத்த புவியையிரண்டாவதும் படைத்துக
காப்பதுமென் கடனென்றுகாத்த
கரிகாலச்சொழினை வாழ்த்தினவே.

[Kāṇḍattupparan̄i.]

said:—‘O faithful sons, how far indeed have you travelled, bearing so many hardships simply to carry me this joyful message! How can I sufficiently reward you? The best that I can give you is the Holy Dvaya-mantra. Receive it. So saying he initiated them in the Holy Formula, and looking round to the group of followers who had surrounded him, addressed them thus:—“O my faithful, our bitterest foe is gone. Our faith has stood this most severe and crucial trial. This holy pond Kalyânî is really kalyântî, auspicious, and this Mâruti-Ândân is really mâruti, Hanumân.”<sup>1</sup> “Yea,” all cried jubilantly. In a body they all mounted the sacred Hill of Lord Nṛsiṃha, rising from the edge of the pond. Prostrating himself before Nṛsiṃha, Râmânuja praised him thus:—“O Slayer of Hiraṇya, of yore, even now hast thou slain Chola, the demon. Even as thou savedst thy devotee Prahlâda then, hast thou saved Kîrêṣa now.” Tîrîha and prasâda were duly bestowed on Râmânuja who thereon descended the hill, and entering the adytum of Nârâyaṇa, asked leave of Him to return to Śrīraṅgam, now that his work was completed. Nârâyaṇa returned no answer for a long time, when Râmânuja urged his request again: “Almighty, Ranga’s command was that I should stay for ever in Śrīraṅgam. Owing to unexpected calamities, I was forced to leave the place. Now that all has been accomplished here, may I not return?” Lord Nârâyaṇa’s voice now came: “Be it so, then.”

Râmânuja had* established in Melukote, fifty-two officers (Aimbattiruvâr) for the restored Fane of Nârâyaṇa. These magnates, hearing that Râmânuja was about to leave them, fell at his feet weeping, and said: “Holy Sire, how can we live without you?” Râmânuja raised them up lovingly and brushing away their tears, said:—“Take heart, sons, I shall let an image be cast after my own likeness, and leave it here, filled with my power. It shall answer all your purposes. Further, I lay it on you all to take care of our Sampat-kûmâra brought from Delhi. He is like my son standing near the brink of a well. Such is my love for Him. See to the proper discharge of all the sacred functions connected with Nārāyaṇa's Temple. See that you do not cheat God of what is due to Him, or cheat each other. Remain ever firmly friendly to one another, and be not remiss in your loving services to God whom we have installed in this country."

<sup>1</sup> The messenger who brought Râma the joyful tidings of Sîtâ.

Leaving besides a detailed code of temple-procedure, he left Mēlukote, after passionate grief had been displayed, by him on the one hand at having to part from his beloved Sampat-kumāra and his disciples, and on the other hand by his disciples and all at having to part from their cherished master and pontiff. Rāmānuja's progress thus from the Temple was very slow for some distance out of the town. He looked back at every step, drinking in with his eyes, the sight of the temple, its turrets, corridors, the streets, and the homesteads which had risen all round, and with a heart overflowing with kindness for all that he was going to leave behind. Nor would the townsfolk allow him to depart quietly. After he had gone some way forward, they waylaid him and cried:—"Sire, how can we be sure you are in your Image? Give us evidences; else you cannot leave us in bereavement." "Beloved men," said he, "return, and standing before my image, call me by my name." They ran back and did so. "Rāmānuja, our Lord!", cried they. "Yes, I am here and for ever,"<sup>1</sup> came the voice from the Image. They were satisfied, and running back to Rāmānuja, fell before him and after a vehement outburst of grief and of gratitude, and consolation by Rāmānuja, he was allowed to bid adieu to them all.

In rapid marches,—love for Sampat-kumāra restraining him, but prospect of seeing Lord Ranga urging him forward—he arrived at the banks of Kaveri at Srīraṅgam. He stopped there to bathe and decorate himself with the twelve holy marks and make other preparations before planting his foot on the sacred land. In the meanwhile, the magnates of Srīraṅgam were apprised of his arrival. Their joy was indescribable. They all ran up to him in breathless excitement, and welcomed him back home with a salvo of greetings. After having been away for nearly twenty long years, he was now making triumphal entry in the midst of a seething crowd,—all eyes and hearts turned to him—after having undergone so many hardships and trials for the Faith. A ceremonial entry was made into the adytum of Ranga, with prostrations at every step. “Son,” said the Lord, opening His mouth, “thou hast been away from Us far and long; sure thou must be very tired. “Merciful God,” replied Râmānuja, “while Thou art alive with Thy elect by Thy side, there is no fatigue to me or all the universe put together.” Ranga was pleased and commanded tirtha and prasāda to be administered, and granted him leave to go and join his monastery and rest after his toils and trials.

---

<sup>1</sup> Cp "For where there are two gathered in my name, there am I in the midst of them". [Mat XVIII, 20]. "Behold I am with you all days, even to the consummation of the world" [Mat. XXVIII, 20].

But as Râmānuja threaded his way round the streets of Śrîrangam, where he gladly witnessed the charming scenes which he had long missed, his thoughts were occupied with Kûrêṣa, and the first thing that he would, and did, do was to step into his dwelling. Of course blind Kûrêṣa, who had ere this returned from Tirumālirunjolai (near Madura), was informed beforehand of his master’s return; and as he heard Râmānuja approach, rushed forward from his door, and prostrating himself, firmly clasped Râmānuja’s feet, and bathed them in a flood of tears, and lay there speechless like one bewitched and stricken. Râmānuja was himself greatly moved. He gently lifted up Kûrêṣa, and firmly embracing him, was himself made speechless by the mingled sentiments of joy and grief shaking the very foundations of his soul. with great difficulty, obstructed by tears and by voice made tremulous with emotion and refusing utterance, spoke the one phrase: “Kûrêṣa, thou hast given thy eye—the eye of our faith—for the faith!” Kûrêṣa who had lost his voice so long, recovered somewhat, and was able to say:—“Master, beloved! I must at least have sinned by thinking, ‘this man’s mark on the forehead is crooked.’ Hence my punishment is deserved.” Râmānuja said: “Beloved, thou, to sin? Rather mine must be the sin, for which thou hast atoned. Come, let us go.” So saying, Râmānuja reached his own monastery, leading Kûrêṣa lovingly by the hand, followed by the immense host of devotees and others mustered thick.

CHAPTER XXXII.

SHORT EXCURSIONS AND INCIDENTS.

After twelve (or some say fourteen) years<sup>1</sup> of absence, Rāmānuja had returned to his central see, the centre of his operations. The faithful gathered round him. Love and veneration for him had multiplied and deepened; and they all said:—“Worshipful master, by the loss of Mahāpūrṇa, a blank has been created in our hearts, and by the loss of our Kūresa’s eyes, a sore. Have we lived to see you,—a salve for our ills? Listen, master, the apostate (infidel) Chola not only persecuted us and our leaders, but carried his vandalism to great excess by destroying our Vaishnava temples everywhere. He had thus demolished the Vishnu Images in Chitrakūta,—about which you shall anon hear more, and was on his way to Śrīrangam to do the same. But when he halted for the night in a village, he was suddenly taken ill, a fatal sore burst out on his neck,<sup>2</sup> and killed him after terrible suffering. Śrīrangam, the centre of our faith, was thus miraculously saved. Listen now to what happened at Chitrakūta (Chidambaram). The place, as you are aware, is infested with Śaivas, and their leader Chola, had torn up Lord Govinda-rāja from His seat—both the mūla and the utsava Images—, and had directed their being cast into the sea. But there was a courtesan by name Tilyā (or Tillai) who is a staunch Vaishnava devotee. She managed to divert the king’s attention at the time, so far as to enable the Vaishnava adherents of the place to avert the sea-grave from their Lord, and secretly make away with Him to Tirupati up in

<sup>1</sup> Like Rāma who would not return to Ayodhya for 14 years in spite of Bharata’s prayer, the Lord Ranga would not fulfil Rāmānuja’s prayers to end Chola’s persecution, till he also (being Rāma’s brother) travelled for 14 years. According to a Belur inscription (vide foot note 1, p. 182) Dāsarathi established the Belur Temple in 1039 Śaka, (A.C. 1117), so that taking Rāmānuja’s entry into Melukōṭe as about 1099 A.C., it gives 18 years for Rāmānuja’s sojourn and plus 2 years for travel, makes in all 20 years as the interval between Rāmānuja actually leaving Śrīrangam and rejoining it, 6 years being allowed for his travels to other Shrines &c., after leaving and again joining Śrīrangam.

<sup>2</sup> This is said to have been caused by God Venkaṭeṣa striking his neck with the discus, in answer to Rāmānuja’s prayers.

the north." Rāmānuja heard all this vandalistic tale with a troubled heart, and hot tears rolled down his cheeks. "Beloved disciples, take heart and be comforted, I will set matters right." So saying, he again girded himself up for action, though now very old and exhausted.<sup>1</sup> "Start," commanded he, "let us go to Venkatēsa." So they all went to Tirupati, arriving at which place, Rāmānuja had a temple built at the foot of the hill, by the help of a Yādava-rāja or Kattiyadeva,<sup>2</sup> and had Govindarāja of Chitrakūta installed there. He called Him by the name Tillai-Govindarāja,<sup>3</sup> and created a town round the Temple, Govindarāja-pattana (Pādapuri), which is still flourishing at the present time. Rāmānuja now recollected the old Saint's verse —

தென் தில்லை சித்திரகூடத்தென்செல்வனை

மின்னிமழைதவழும் வெங்கடத்தென் வித்தகனை;

and wondered how prophetic it was of the Saint to have sung the Shrine of Tirupati along with the Shrine of Chitrakūtam

<sup>1</sup> Rāmānujārya-Divya-Charita of this Vishnu Shrine by Kulottunga Chola as —

அம்பொற்குடைச்சகனாபிரத்தொன்பதாம்வாஷ்த்துத்

தென்பாட்சென்னிகுலோத்துங்கன்,

சித்திரகூடச்செங்கண்மால்

தன்னை அலையெறிநாள் தான்.

i.e., 1009 Śaka = 1087 A.C., so that it must have been just immediately or after Rāmānuja left Srīrangam for the table-land of Mysore.

1117 A.C. finds Rāmānuja at Melukote, and thus he must have now been past his centenary, when he was back at Srīrangam 20 years more brings it to 1137 A.C., the year of his death

<sup>2</sup> See p. 86, Venkatāchal-etihāsa-māla. His capital is said to have been Nārāyaṇa-pura.

<sup>3</sup> The reader will perhaps run away with the idea that the Vaishnavas are polytheists—not monotheists as we profess—inasmuch as we speak of God Ranganātha, God Varada, God Venkatesa and so forth. These names are various names given to but one God, a different name for a different Shrine. The Names have also their etymological significations and associations. We are thus rigid monotheists. It is the One God under different symbols and images, one Light lighted from another Light as we say. Dipād-utpanna-pradīpavat;—one God pro-lating or hypostasi-ing so to say. This reminds us of what Dionysius the Areopagite said, though he said it with reference to another matter, —'That light is one and entirely the same through all things and although there is diversity of objects, the light remains one and undivided in different objects, so that, without confusion, variety may be assigned to the objects, identity to the light.' [P. 474, Max Muller's Psychological Religion].

See Topic 171 in our Divine Wisdom.

in one verse<sup>1</sup> He then ascended the High Holy Hill of Tirupati to pay his homage to the Lord Venkatesa. Here, Rāmānuja imparted the Art of worshipping God in His Images (Ārādhana),—called the Nitya—to his two disciples Kūrēsa and Hanumad-Dāsa. There was another disciple Vangi-p-Purattu Nambi, to whom he had promised this knowledge for some time, but an opportunity had not presented itself so far. As however he was concluding his instructions, V. P. Nambi suddenly presented himself before Rāmānuja, who felt somewhat difficult therefore in the delicate situation, viz, his unbosoming secrets to some, while he had not done so to those whom he had promised; but Rāmānuja excused himself to Nambi thus :—“Listen, Nambi! Hitherto I could not solve to myself the riddle how Lord Krishna who is God all-powerful, submitted himself to be bound by a rope by an ordinary woman Yasoda. To-day I find the solution inasmuch as by the importunity of my disciples Kūrēsa and Hanumad-Dās, my own strong will bent to impart knowledge to them though I had promised it thee first. My own experience then, of how supplication made my own will to give in, supplies me with the key how even God will allow his resolve to melt before the fire of His votaries’ love. So saying, he gave the promised knowledge to Nambi.<sup>2</sup>

Rāmānuja took leave of the Lord and descending the Holy Hill, wended his way back to Srīrangam via Kānchī. Settled thus in his see, the High Pontiff dispensed his teachings to crowded audiences, who received them, it is said, as cool showers and balmy zephyrs lulling their parched souls to heavenly rest.

Kulōttunga Chōla II (1128—1156 ?) or Vikrama-Chōla (1113—1128) who perhaps was also called Kulottunga, the son

<sup>1</sup> Consult pp. 87 ff. of Venkatā-chaletihāsamāla for further details. Hence in the Ashtottara Hymn to Srīnivāsa (Venkatesa), His name is coupled with Govinda thus.—
गोविन्दाय नमो नित्यं श्रीनिवासाय तेनम ॥
[P. 78, Venkatāchala-Māhātmya-

Vārāhe]. On Venkatesa, see Rig Veda VIII, 8, 18. अरायिकाणे विकटे गिरिगच्छसदान्वे । शिरिबिठस्य सत्त्वभिः तेभिः स्वाचातयामसि ॥ of Krimikantha-Chôla who was a pro-Vaishnavite and who had in vain tried to convince his father of the futility of his schemings against the Vaishnavas inasmuch as their strongholds, the Râmâyana and the Mahâbhârata could never be repressed, though he might demolish all the Vaishnava temples on earth, and had also suffered reverses of fortune<sup>1</sup> on account of the sins of his father, hearing of Râmânûja's arrival, repaired to Srîrangam in haste, taking with him the Pândya and Chera Kings. Approaching Râmânûja, he fell at his feet and craved pardon for his father's faults. From the largeness of his heart, Râmânûja granted it; and took Kulottunga, by his request, into the Vaishnava fold by administering due sacraments and made him a disciple of Dâsarathi. "No more", cried the king, "shall I exercise any jurisdiction over the Temples August Sire. I pray you to assume the entire control yourself from this day." Râmânûja consented, and calling Dâsarathi, had the entire administration of the Temple formally bestowed on him as a gift in the manner prescribed by the Śâstras. It is written in the work, called Koil-ozhugu, that a stone inscription to this effect was caused to be installed at the Ârya-bhaṭṭâl gate.<sup>2</sup> Râmânûja is stated to be past his centenary by this time.

<sup>2</sup> Vide Commentaries on Tirumozhi 57, 4.

<sup>1</sup> These reverses appear to have been an invasion by the Pândyans, and subsequent vassalage under the kings of Vijayanagara. [Vide p 37, Contributions to the Imperial Gazetteer, Trichinopoly, 1904 A.C.]

<sup>2</sup> See No. 23, Map of Temple to the second collection of Papers relating to Srîrangam, 1894, A.C. From Epigraphica Indica, Vol. V, pp 97-99, it may be seen that the grant of Vîra-Chôla, or son of Kulottunga I gives more than 245 Vaishnava names; showing how Śrî-Vaishnavism had been well established and its adherents venerated. And Viṭhala, a Mâdhva sang of Râmânûja thus—(Rev. Kittel's Translation in Indian Antiquary Vol II).

Refrain.

Râmânûja, Doctrine-supporter !

Rod for the great mountain of Dark heretics !

Song.

"They say the Chôla put up a post (Kambha) saying—

'He with the eye on his forehead (Śiva), and no other Godhead there is' !

The Master of the Yatis (Yatipati) seized and flayed him alive,

Rāmānuja was sore at heart at Kūrēṣa's having become blind. One day, he called him anxiously to his side and said:—"Son, beloved! Lord Varāda of Kāñchī is, as we know, a ready granter of wishes. I enjoin thee to sing a hymn to Him to bestow sight on thee again." "Sire," submitted Kūrēṣa, "this material sight, I desire not." "But, beloved, do as I desire," often exhorted Rāmānuja. Kūrēṣa accordingly sang the hymn known as Varadarāja-stava—one of the five stavas—beginning with —

स्वस्तिहस्तिगिरिमस्तशेखरस्सन्तनोतुमयिसन्तनंहरि ।

निस्समाभ्यधिकमभ्यधत्तयदेवमौपनिषदीसरस्वती H

'Hari' who deck the top of the Hasti-Hill, whom the Vedas declare as to have neither equal nor superior, bless me.' And in the twenty-third stanza, he prayed.—

नीलमेघनिभमञ्जनपुञ्जश्यामकुन्तलमनन्तशयत्वात् ।

अञ्जपाणिपदमबुजनेत्रनेत्रसात्कुरुकरीशसदात्मे ॥

'Hasti-Lord of bluish hue! Recliner on Ananta! I beseech Thee to ever let my sight see Thy bewitching beauty.' That very night, the Lord appeared in his dream and said: "granted," Kūrēṣa rose next morning with a joyful heart, and after performing the day's ablutions, &c., finished the stava, and proceeding to Rāmānuja, repeated before him the whole stava, and said.—"Sire, the previous night, the Lord appeared in my dream and he has granted me such spiritual sight as is able ever to enjoy his Beatific Vision—Vision such as obtains in Vaikuntha, according to the verse—

वैकुण्ठेतुपरिलोके नित्यत्वेनव्यवस्थितम् ।

पश्यन्तिचसदादेवनेत्रैर्ऽर्जनेनचामरा ॥

(Continued) foot note on page 238.

And made a Chola Shed (Chappara, a shed of the Chôla skin) ?

See, my brother' [verse 1]

Saying.—'It is a Vyāsa-Tôlu! they (the Lingāyatas), not minding,

Fasten a bull (Nandi) to a standard (Dhvaja) and worship it.
Hear!

For one (or, for that one) Vyāsa-Tôlu, our master (Ayya) [Rāmānuja]

Stripped of a thousand arms of Śiva's followers (Śaṣaṇṇa)

[verse 11]

‘In that Vaikunṭha, beyond the visible universe, the Immortals see the Eternal Lord with their spiritual eyes.’

“My beloved, that is not what I want; come let us proceed to Lord Varada,” said Rāmānuja, annoyed, and went with him to Kāñchī, and bade him repeat the Stava. Kūrēsa began and as he was proceeding, Rāmānuja was obliged to leave the place for a few minutes on some business. But before he returned, Kūrēsa had gone to the end of his Stava; and Lord Varada having appeared and bidden him to ask what he wanted, he had absent-mindedly prayed that Nālūrān might be saved even as he might be saved.<sup>1</sup> ‘Be it so,’ said the Lord. By this time Rāmānuja ran in, and learning what had taken place in his absence, chided Kūrēsa thus:—“Son, thou hast acted contrary to my wishes. Thou has spoilt matters. Oh Lord, canst Thou not deign to grant my prayer that Kūrēsa regain (physical) sight?” The Lord was moved at this earnest appeal of Rāmānuja, and spoke thus:—“We grant him that sight; but except Me and thee, he shall see no other material object.” Rāmānuja was at least satisfied with this, and immediately put Kūrēsa to test by asking him to look at Lord Varada, and describe Him. Kūrēsa did so. ‘And now describe me,’ asked he next. Kūrēsa, his face lit up with heavenly joy, described his preceptor’s person accurately in all detail. Rāmānuja was satisfied and taking leave of the Lord, returned to Śrīrangam.

Rāmānuja was, after his return, engaged with his disciples, in reading St. Āṇḍāl’s Hymnal, the Nāycchiyār-Tirumozhi; and coming to verses IX. 6 and 7: Naru-narum and Inru-vandu, in which the Saintess declared that “she would place before the Lord Sundara-rāja of Tirumālirunḱolai, one hundred vessels of nectareous food; and if He but came down and ate it all, she would place a hundred thousand more.” Rāmānuja stopped at this and looking at his disciples, said —“Why do not we proceed to the Holy Shrine at once and carry out her wish?” So saying, they all rose and journeyed to the place, and spread a great feast before the Deity. Rāmānuja proceeded thence to Śrī-villiputtūr, the birth-place of St. Āṇḍāl, <sup>1</sup> This was the person who instigated Chōḷa to send for Rāmānuja to sign the Paper of his faith. He is a disciple of Kūrēsa. See p. 170.

and as he was standing before her, lost in devotion, the Saintess by the voice of her priest on duty, conferred upon him the title of Kōil-anṇar.' Rāmānuja next proceeded to Tirunagari of St. Nammāzhvār. From Tirunagari, Rāmānuja paid a visit to Tirukkōlūr, about two miles north of it, the birth-place of St. Madhurakavi. As he was proceeding, he met a damsel by name Tiruk-kōlūr Ammai coming from Tiruk-kōlūr. 'Whence art thou coming?' asked he of her. "From Tiruk-kōlūr," said she. To this, Rāmānuja chidingly said:—"I wonder, lady, thou shouldst emerge from a Holy Place, into which, according to the verses of St. Nammāzhvār, every one should enter?" "To this, Ammai gave the following long reply* :—

Holy Sire I who am I to deserve to live in such a Holy Place? for:—

1. Did I go on such a holy mission as Akrūra?
2. Did I entertain in my house like Vidura?
3. Did I cast off my body like the Rishi's wife?
4. Did I cause a Rāvaṇa to be killed like Sītā?
5. Did I raise the dead like Tondamān?
6. Did I offer a corpse like Ghaṇṭākarna?
7. Did I adorn (a Sītā) like Anasūya?
8. Did I seek for a Father like Dhruva?
9. Did I repeat the Three-lettered Name like Kshatra-bandhu?
10. Did I get trodden like Ahalya?

---

* See Topic 117 and foot note thereunder, p. 133, Divine Wisdom of Drāvīda Saints.

<sup>1</sup> Viṣṇu-Purāṇa.

<sup>2</sup> Mahā-bhārata, Sabhā-Parva.

<sup>3</sup> Śrī Bhāgavata, X, 23, 38:— तत्रैकाविदुताभक्ता भगवन्तं ययाशुतम् । हृदोपगृह्य विजहौ देहं कर्माबुध्नयन् ॥ Sudarṣanā of Itihāsa-samucchaya(?)

<sup>4</sup> Rāmāyaṇa.

<sup>5</sup> Mahālakṣmi, Kūrma's wife, Venkateṣa-Māhātmya (Bhaviṣyottara, 14th Adh).

<sup>6</sup> Harivamṣa.

<sup>7</sup> Rāmāyaṇa.

<sup>8</sup> Viṣṇu-purāṇa.

<sup>9</sup> Viṣṇu-dharma. The Name is Go-vin-da; also see Tīrumālai, 2, 4.

<sup>10</sup> Rāmāyaṇa, or Adhyātma-Rāmāyaṇa, 14th Adh.

11. Did I ripen, while yet raw, like Āndāl ?
12. Did I establish (or proclaim) Nārāyaṇa like St. Periyāzhvār ?
13. Did I ransack religions like St. Tirumazhīsai ?
14. Did I know Him as "the Subtlest" like St. Namāzhvār ?
15. Did I say : " anything," like St. Kulasekhara ?
16. Did I say : " I pledge my word," like Krishṇa ?
17. Did I give clues (to Rāmā), like Kabandha ?
18. Did I reveal secrets like Trijata ?
19. Did I recognize God (in Rāmā) like Mandōdari ?
20. Did I say : " I know Thee," like Viśvāmitra ?
21. Did I say : " I know of no other God," like St. Maḍhurakavi ?
22. Did I give birth to a God like Devakī ?
23. Did I say : " conceal Thy discus," like Vasudēva ?
24. Did I bring up a Cowherd like Yaśoda ?
25. Did I do a mite (of service) like the squirrels ?
26. Did I take fried rice like Kuchēla ?

<sup>11</sup> A precocious prodigy in divinity. Read her life in our Lives of Āzhvārs.

<sup>12</sup> Read his life in our Lives of Āzhvārs.

<sup>13</sup> Do. do. , and verse Puṇi-āya in Tiruchanda-viṛuttam.

<sup>14</sup> Do. do. Also v. 75 "Puviyam" of Periya-Tiruvandādi may be read.

<sup>15</sup> Do. do. verse IV, 10. Perumāḷ Tirumozhi.

<sup>16</sup> Bhagavad-gītā XVIII, 65. सत्यंते,प्रतिजानेप्रियेसिमे. Also Bhārata story is referable, where a dead boy was restored to life by Krishna—all others having failed. He is said to have spoken thus :—यदिमेब्रह्मचर्यस्यात् सत्यञ्चमयितिष्ठति । अय्याहृतंममैश्वर्यं नेनजीवतुबालक ॥ Also see Aśvameḍika-Parva, 70 and 18 ff. beginning with नब्रवीन्पुत्ररेमिथ्या सत्यमेतद्भविव्याति. &c.

<sup>17</sup> <sup>18</sup> Rāmāyaṇa.

<sup>20</sup> Do. अहदाय I, 19, 14

<sup>21</sup> Verse Tevu-matt-aṟiyēn in Kaṇṇinun-Ṣiṛuttāmbu.

<sup>22</sup> <sup>23</sup> Viṣṇu-Purāṇa.

<sup>25</sup> Pādma-purāṇa (?). Also v. 27, Tirumōḷi.

<sup>26</sup> Śrī Bhāgavata.

-
- 27 Did I bestow weapons like Agastya ?
 28 Could I enter the seraglio like Saṅjaya ?
 29. Could I, by 'works' obtain bliss like Janaka ?
 30. Did I bite the toe and see Him like St. Tirumaṅgai ?
 31. Did I become the umbrella and so on, like Âdi-Sêsha ?
 32. Did I carry Him, like Garutmân ?
 33. Did I keep promise, like Nam-pâduvân ?
 34. Did I behold God in a nook, like the First Âzhvârs ?
 35. Did I guard two princes, like Vâlmiki ?
 36. Did I offer two garlands, like St. Tondaradippodî ?
 37. Did I obtain truths, like Tiru-kacchi-nambi ?
 38. Was I absorbed into God, like St. Tirup-pāṇāzhvâr ?
 39. Did I say : " send," like Vaṣishtha ?
 40. Did I worship sandals, like Koṅil-pirâṭṭi ?
 41. Did I offer clay-flowers, like Kuruva-nambi ?
 42. Did I vociferate : " Oh : 'The Origin !,' " like Gajendra ?
 43. Did I offer scents, like the hunchback Kubjâ ?
 44. Did I offer wreaths, like the Mâlākâra ?
-

<sup>27</sup> Rāmāyaṇa.

<sup>28</sup> Sri Bhāgavata and Bhārata.

<sup>29</sup> Bhāgavad-gītā, III, 20, Karmaṇaivah, &c.

<sup>30</sup> Read his life in our Lives of Âzhvârs.

<sup>31</sup> Stotra-Ratna v, 40; and v. 53, Ṣaṇṇal, 1st Tiruvandâdi.

<sup>32</sup> See Gajendra-Moksha, Bhāgavata.

<sup>33</sup> Kaiṣika-purāṇa.

<sup>34</sup> See our Lives of Âzhvârs.

<sup>35</sup> Rāmāyaṇa, the two princes being Lava and Kuṣa.

<sup>36</sup> Read his life in our Lives of Âzhvârs. Flower-wreath and Hymn-wreath (Tirumālai).

<sup>37</sup> See Life of Rāmānuja.

<sup>38</sup> See his life in our Lives of Âzhvârs.

<sup>39</sup> Rāmāyaṇa (sending Rāma with Viśvāmitrâ).

<sup>40</sup> Read Life of Rāmānuja. (Rāmānuja's Sandals), p. 176.

<sup>41</sup> Kuruva-nambi or Bhīma. [Venkatêṣa Māhātmya, Bhaviṣhyottara,

11th Adh.]

<sup>42</sup> Bhāgavata.

<sup>43</sup> and <sup>44</sup> Viṣṇu-purāṇa.

45. Did I keep my assigned place, like Bharata ?
 46. Did I serve on the way, like Lakshmana ?
 47. Did I land on the other shore, like Guha ?
 48. Did I fight with the demon, like Jatāyus ?
 49. Did I land on this shore, like Vibhishana ?
 50. Did I offer sweet fruits, like Sabari ?
 51. Did I say : " Here He is," like Prahlāda ?
 52. Did I hide (Krishna) like Dadhibhānda ?
 53. Did I go to the forest, like Rāma ?
 54. Did I proclaim discovery (of Śītā), like Hanumān ?
 55. Did I relinquish both hands, like Draupadi ?
 56. Did I say the excuse : " milk boils over," like Vaduga-nambi ?
 57. Did I hold my throat, like Śelvappillai ?
 58. Did I deserve the command : " stop here," as Idaiyāttru-k-kuḍi Nambi ?

45, 46, 47, 48, 49 and 50 Rāmāyana.

51 Vishnu-purāṇa.

52 This is said to be related in Āgneya, Mahābhārata or Brindāvana-Māhātmya ? Dadhibhānda was a curd-seller. He is said to have given shelter to Lord Krishna when He was hotly pursued after by His associates in the play called hide and seek and when Krishna asked the curd-seller to ask his reward, he asked for Moksha for himself and for those who belonged to him, down to the curd-pot in which Krishna had hid himself. This was granted.

53, 54 Rāmāyana.

55 Mahābhārata, Sābhā-Parva.

56 Vaduga-nambi alias Āndhra-purṇa. See his life p. 221.

57 It appears one day very hot milk was offered to the Lord at Tirunārāyanapuram (Melukote). Śelvappillai, who was a great devotee felt the milk scorch his throat; and hence held it in pain. Also the incident of Lord Sampat Kumāra embracing Rāmānuja is referable.

58 By oversight we omitted this Topic in our Divine Wisdom of the Dānda Saints. I. K. Nambi was a regular visitor to Śrirangam when festivities of Lord Ranga came on. After one set was over and before another came on, he constantly dwelt in the interval in his mind on the happy scenes which he witnessed during the previous festivities. Another season of celebrations came round. But Nambi had grown nearly a hundred years old, and could not go to the first day of the ceremonies (Ankur-ārpana). But Lord Ranga was never happy without his devotee being present. He was however able to attend on the sixth 59. Did I carry the message : " He is dead," like Māruti-yāṇḍān ?

60. Did I go in pursuit (of God) like Nāthamuniḡal ?

61. Did I say : " I want Him not," like Kūrēsa ?

62. Did I refute Advaita, like Rāmānuja ?

63. Did I see the discus, like Nallān ?

64. Did I go to Anantapuram (Trivendram), like Āḷa-vandār ?

65. Did I feel separation like Teyva-vāriyāṇḍān ?

66. Did I compose Andādi like Amudanār ?

67. Did I give counsel, like Mālyavān ?

68. Did I opine : ' mere ocean-roar,' like Maḥāpūrṇa ?

Foot note on page 214—(continued).

day, when the Lord asked : " what can we do for thee. beloved ? " " Lord," he said, " so long has the body, Thou gavest me, served me well ; now it is so old and worn out that it cannot serve any good purpose. It is on that account that I have this season been for five days absent." " In that case return no more from Us," said the Lord. And by the time the Lord's procession approached the middle entrance of the Temple, Nambi had shuffled off his mortal coil.

<sup>60</sup> Read Rāmānuja's Life. He refers to Krimikantha-Chōḷa [Bhagavad-vishaya Vol. VII, p. 3538, Vāyakkum VII, 10, 4.]

<sup>61</sup> Read his life.

<sup>62</sup> Where Kūrēsa refused to enter Lord Ranga's Shrine [Page 197].

<sup>63</sup> See Rāmānuja's Life.

<sup>64</sup> Nallān was a Brāhman disciple of Rāmānuja, and a great devotee of Lord Varada of Kāñchi. He saw a corpse floating down the river Vaigai which bore on its arms the Vaishnava symbols of discus. This was enough for Nallān to drag it to shore and perform funeral rites. The Brāhmanas of Kāñchi resented this and declined to eat with him. But Lord Varada put on a Brāhmana's disguise and attended the funeral meals. The Lord thereon gave him the title Nattukku pollān, Namakku nallān i.e. ' Though the whole world is against him, we are for him,'

<sup>65</sup> See Yāmunāchārya's Life.

<sup>66</sup> See Yāmunā's disciple who wasted away without his guru.

<sup>67</sup> Disciple of Rāmānuja who composed Rāmānuja-Nuṭṭ-andādi in praise of Rāmānuja.

<sup>68</sup> Rāmāyana. Mālyavān's advice to Rāvaṇa.

<sup>69</sup> See Rāmānuja's Life, with reference to funerals performed on a Śudra, Māranēri-Nambi, which when Rāmānuja objected, Pūrṇa declared all the ordinary regulations on the subject, having strict reference to caste etc., were as useless as the ' roar of the ocean,' [Pp : 167-168].

69. Did I exact promise, like Gôshthî-Pûrṇa ?

70. Did I obtain mercy like the dumb-person ?

71. Did I give up my body, like Tiru-naraiyûr-araiyar ?

72. Did I profess insignificance, like Śrîsaila-pûrṇa ?

73. Did I thrust my finger into the snake's mouth like Embâr ?

74. Did I vanquish (a Paudit) by showing marks on arms, like Bhattârya ?

75. Did I seek a secluded spot like Villiputtûr Bhagavar ?

76. Did I jump into water like Kaṇapuratt-ammai ?

On hearing this, Râmânuja was thunderstruck and taking Ammai with him back to Tirukkolûr, rested under her roof, and partook of the food prepared by her as a token of his admiration and appreciation of her spiritual enlightenment and attainments evinced by her most erudite discourse. Before

<sup>69</sup> Râmânuja's Life, where Pûrṇa exacted a promise of secrecy from Râmânuja not to divulge religious secrets, but which Râmânuja infringed. [P. 97]

<sup>70</sup> Râmânuja's Life where he gave salvation, unsolicited, to a poor dumb creature. [P. 169.]

<sup>71</sup> See Sri-Vachana-Bhushan I. In order to quench the flames in which the Lord's car had by accident been enveloped, he rushed into the flames with his sons and perished in the act.

<sup>72</sup> Râmânuja's Life where Śrî Saila came in advance to meet Râmânuja on the Tirupati-Hill.

<sup>73</sup> See Râmânuja's Life.

<sup>74</sup> See page 156.

<sup>75</sup> He was a Sanyâsin. When he went to a bathing place which was resorted to by all, he left the crowds and sought out a secluded spot. Jûḍa-Sâr of A. P. Emberumânar, verse 13. "Pandâ" and Periya Jiyar's Comment thereon, may be consulted.

<sup>76</sup> This lady is said to have been a disciple of Sage Yâmunâ. He was once crossing the Kâveri in full flood—from Uttamarkôil (Karambanûr) to Śrîrangam, in a boat. The boatman complained of too much load. He was rowing in midstream with all his might, and now feared the boat would sink. K. Ammai, in order to save the life of her guru and others in the boat, undertook to ease the boat by jumping into the river. The boat, thus relieved, was rowed away in safety to the shore. But Providence saved the lady's life, for when she jumped, she found herself landing on a rock just below the water-surface.

returning, he blessed her, and saw to the due performance of all festivals connected with Lord Nikshepavitta and St. Madhurakavi. Rāmānuja now returned to Srīrangam.

An interesting incident is chronicled<sup>1</sup> as having occurred about this time. The washerman employed to wash the clothes of the Śrīvaiṣṇavas of Srīrangam, one day washed Lord Ranga's garments as well. He brought them and showed to Rāmānuja. Rāmānuja was so pleased with him that he took him to the Lord in the Temple and prayed to Him thus: "Lord, deign to notice the careful way in which this washerman has washed Thy garments. Indeed, with these wound round Thee, Thou wouldst appear to such advantage." Lord Ranga accepted the recommendation and replied to Rāmānuja thus:—"For the loving services rendered to us this day by this washerman, we forgive the offence of his ancestor, the washerman of our Krishna-avatār."<sup>2</sup> To this day it is the custom for the Lord to receive the clothes from the washerman just as he brings them and use it for the Lord. This is a privilege inasmuch as in Indic Society, the washerman is a low-caste man and the clothes brought by him have to be washed again before a Brāhmaṇa will wear them.

It is here chronicled that there was a disciple of Rāmānuja called Paṭṭiṇi-p-perumāl. He is said to have been of low-caste. He lived away from the sacred town of Srīrangam, in an out-of-the-way hut, and used to drown himself in the joy of singing the psalms of the Holy Āzhvārs. Rāmānuja's way from the river Kaveri to Srīrangam lay where this disciple thus lived. One day he was returning from his bath accompanied as usual by a large number of his followers. He stopped short at the hut, and bidding his followers leave him and proceed to Srīrangam, entered the hut, and spent the time with the disciple as long as it pleased him, in the sweet ecstasy brought on by the singing of the Holy Hymnal. Had an ordinary person consorted thus with a low caste man as Rāmā-

---

<sup>1</sup> Vide Bhagavad-vishaya, on Tiruvāymoḥi V. 10, 6, Ninṇa-vāṇṇu also Topic 53 of our Divine Wisdom of Drāviḍ Saints.

<sup>2</sup> Read the story in foot-note, op cit.

nuja did, he would have been outcasted, but they dared not utter a syllable of reproach against Rāmānuja's doing it—another illustration of the canon that great men alone can do such things, as laid down in the Dharma-sāstras, साहसंचमहताम्, 'the daring acts of the Mahātmas,' and तेजीयसानदोषाय of Śrīmad Bhāgavata. No reproach thus attaches to the character of glorious souls. Such incidents though trivial in themselves, are fraught with great significance and important issues as affecting and moulding the organic-character of a new community which would at the time be taking definite shape and acquiring special functions in the body-politic of the Āryan-Drāvidas

This new community of Śrī-Vaiṣṇavas was not confined exclusively to the Brāhmanas. It was catholic and entertained in its fold every man and woman regardless of caste or color. The community was growing fast and counted millions, of which a definite number as constituting the elite, and as calculated to carry on the evangel set on foot by Rāmānuja, is memorialized in the verse:—संसेवितस्संयमिसप्रशस्त्या पीटैश्चतुस्तत्त्रिभिस्त्र्यमेतैः । अच्यैरनैस्त्रिोपावृष्णुमकै रास्तेधिरङ्गयतिसार्वभौम ॥ i e "The King of the ascetics, Rāmānuja, had in his following (700) seven hundred Yatis (ascetics), (74) seventy-four (episcopal) Thrones, known as the Āchārya-purushas, and countless others,—(12,000) twelve-thousand Ēkāṅgis (monks of all classes), (300) three-hundred Kotti-ammais (nuns), many kings, and others both 'of the Holy Thread' and 'the Threadless (Sāttāḍavar).' A list of the names will be given separately. And here, only the chief members with the work allotted to them in the immediate establishment attached to the see, will be noted. Kūrēsa, Dāṣarathi, Nāḍādūr Ālvān and the Bhaṭṭars were to attend Śrī-Bhāṣhya Discourses; Yajña-mūrti (Arulāla-p-perumāl-Emberumānār) was to attend to the worship of the chapel; Kidāmbi-p-perumāl and Kidāmbi-ācchān were to superintend the culinary department; Vaṭu-pūrṇa or Āndhra-pūrṇa (=Vaduga-nambi) was for oil-bathing and other sundry services to Rāmānuja; Gomāṭham Siriy-ālvān was to carry the kamandalu (vessel) and sandals; Dhanurdāsa was to be the treasurer, Ammangi was to boil milk; Ukkal-ālvān was to serve meals, Ukkalammāl was to fan; Māruti-p-periyāṇḍān was to minister on occasions of natural impulses; Maṇḍilla-Māruti-y-āṇḍān was to be the steward; Tāya-muni-velam was to be the waterman; Tiru-v-aranga-māligai was to be the storekeeper; Vandar and Sundar were to take service under kings and fill the see-coffers; Rāmanuja-vēlaikkārar was to be the body-guard; and Akalanka-nāṭṭālvān was to win polemical victories over dissenters.

---

---

CHAPTER XXXIII.

VATU-PÛRNA OR ÂNDHRA-PÛRNA.

Vatu-pûrna or Ândhra-pûrna, whose first entry into our history may be remembered as having taken place when Râmânûja was at Sâligrâma (Mysore),<sup>1</sup> is known, above all other disciples, to have been the closest attached adherent of Râmânûja, and the staunchest follower of the Path, known as the Pañchamopâya, or the Fifth Path—the Âchâryâbhimâna,<sup>2</sup> in other words, unswerving faith placed in the Saviour, who is incarnated on earth, and never dividing such faith between a saviour who has taken on humanity, and God who ever remains Divine. Vatu-pûrna was not a mere theoretical believer in this mode of salvation, but exemplified it forcibly by his personal example. In the exclusive worship he paid to Râmânûja's Holy Feet, he excluded all thoughts of God. His Saviour was his God. He recognized no other rival Saviour-God to his visible human Saviour. Once on an occasion, Râmânûja went to the Holy shrine Tiruvellarai (about 10 miles north of Srîrangam). Vatu-pûrna followed him of course, carrying the Tiruppul-kûdai<sup>3</sup> containing washed clothes, images, articles of worship, &c. Râmânûja, after reaching Tiruvellarai, went to bathe and returning, opened the cover of the wallet to find to his surprise and chagrin that his own sandals had been placed on the top <sup>1</sup> The descendants of this disciple are close relatives to the writer of this work; and to this day enjoy the rights and privileges of the shrine built over Râmânûja's Holy Feet at this place—a place of holy pilgrimage to this day. In the days of Krishna-râja Odeyar, two brilliant lights of this family known as Sidlaghatta Sudarśanâchârya and Raṅgâchârya (brothers) shed their Vaidic glory in his court; and wrote many works such as Charamârtha-vivṛiti, Ghata-Karpara-Bhedi, Pada-reṇukâ-Sahasra, Râmânûja-Sârva-bhauma-Satâka, Yâdavâdri-vilâsa, a Sûtra-Bhâshya, Kamalâpta-karâṇvaya, Bhaja-yatirâja-Stotra, Bhaje-bhâshyakâra Stotra, Siddhânta-bheri (nâlak),

Âchârya-stuti, and many songs in Sanskrit, Telugu and Kannada. Their descendant Râmâchârya has been winning laurels in the court of the Baroda Mahârâja and has made many disciples in Bombay and Guzerat side. Their memorial vere is thus sung.—श्रीमद्रामानुजाचार्यसिद्धान्तजयभेरिका । आचन्द्रभास्करजै-धादात्रपूर्ययिसन्तति ॥ of all other things.irate, he called Pūrṇa and asked him to explain this sacrilege—the sacrilege of placing his sandals over the heads of his holy Images of worship! “Sire,” promptly answered Pūrṇa, “how is my God inferior to thine?”

<sup>2</sup> For which, see our Soteriographical Table, pp. 573-4 of our Bhagavad-gîtâ. That Vatu-purna is an illustrious example of this Path is prominently shown in Lokâchârya's Srîvachana-Bhûṣhaṇa, and Periyar-Tiyyar's Ârti-prabandha.

<sup>3</sup> A kind of wallet or portmanteau made of reeds.

Rāmānuja went to visit the Lords in the temples, but Pūrṇa’s gaze was steadily fixed on Rāmānuja’s handsome person. Rāmānuja often marked this; and once remarked: “Son, why dost thou not direct thy sight to the charming eyes of the Lord?” Pūrṇa then looked at the Lord and looked at Rāmānuja alternately for a few seconds and then exclaimed; “Sire, the eyes that have seen thee cannot see other objects.”<sup>1</sup>

Rāmānuja used to hand over the remains of food, after he had eaten, to Pūrṇa to eat; the latter, after eating, wiped his soiled hands on his head. Rāmānuja fretfully chided him for this slovenly habit and directed him henceforth to wash his hands with water. “Yea,” said Pūrṇa. The next day, Rāmānuja handed over to him to eat consecrated food given to him in the Temple. Pūrṇa ate and washed his hands with water. “What hast thou done, son;” exclaimed Rāmānuja, “the Lord’s food is too holy to be thus washed away, thou oughtest to wipe it on thy head.” “Sire,” reported he, “I have done as thou badest me yesterday.” Rāmānuja simply said. “Son, thou hast overcome me.”

On another occasion Pūrṇa was busy boiling milk for Rāmānuja in the Math, when Lord Ranganātha was conveyed in procession, decked in all the glory of decorative art. Rāmānuja rose to go, see and pay homage to the Deity, calling Pūrṇa, as he went, to come and do the same with him. But Pūrṇa, immediately excused himself saying: “Holy sire, if I come out to see thy God, the milk that is on the fire for my God (Rāmānuja) will boil over.”

At one time, some kinsmen of his came to his house as guests, and used his cooking pots for preparing their meals. But as soon as they left him, Pūrṇa broke them all and threw them into the rubbish heap; and picking up cast-away pots in the backyard of Dāsarathi, brought them home and used them ;<sup>1</sup> thus showing that everything that belongs to the Saviour is holy, and all else is unholy. This demeanour proves the acme of the state of a spiritually risen soul dissevered from all touch of worldliness (vairāgya.)

<sup>1</sup> என்னமுத்தினைக்கண்டகண்கள் மற்றொன்றினைக்காணவே.

Pūrṇa was strict as regards the taking of Śrī-pāda-tīrtha, for he sipped no water washed off any other's foot save that of his Saviour, Rāmānuja. He memorialized this faith of his, by shaping an image of his feet and setting them up for worship for all time to come at the village of Sāligrāma—as the most cherished treasure for himself and all posterity ; and that it must be looked upon as such by all the coming generations, was the most solemn trust which he imposed on those near and dear to him, at the time of his translation from the mundane. Vatu-pūrṇa is thus assigned a place in the inner circle of Rāmānuja's hierarchical institutions, called the Ashta-diggajas, or the Eight Elephants of Faith to guard the eight cardinal points of the compass.<sup>2</sup> This sage it was who sang the famous hymn to Rāmānuja, called the Rāmānuj-āsthottara-ṣata-nāma, sung every day by every Śrīvaiṣṇava. The last verse runs thus :—

यदान्त्रपूर्णेनमहात्मनेदं स्तोत्रं कृतं सर्वजनावनाय ।

तज्जीवभूतं भुवि वैष्णवानां बभूव रामानुजमानसानाम् ॥

<sup>1</sup> The meaning of this is that when a spiritual relation with spiritual men is established, that becomes holy, and all affections contracted with kinsmen who are worldly are contaminations. Their very touch is considered as antagonistic to the growth of the new spiritual relation. The parallel to this idea is Jesus saying —“ Every one that hath left house, or brothern, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands for my name's sake &c.” [Mat. XIX, 29] ; and “ if any man come to me and hate not his father, and mother &c ” [Luke XIV, 26].

<sup>2</sup> The holy descendants of Pūrṇa mentioned on page 220, foot note 1, have sung thus in their Yatirāja-sārva-bhauma-Ṣataka :— आन्त्रपूण्या-युक्तिं सर्वभौमाख्यं दुः &c.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

ANANTA-SŪRI OR ANANTÂCHÂRYA.

Some interesting incidents in the life of Anantârya, another staunch disciple of Rāmānuja, are related thus. From previous pages it is known that he was the person who had undertaken to settle in Tirupati and do all the services of Lord Srinivāsa. It may also be remembered that he had created a flower garden to which he was paying personal attention. He now wished to construct a small reservoir for water for that purpose. He began excavating it by his own manual labour. But a Brahmachârin suddenly put in his appearance and saying : “ Aged sire, the task is too much for thee. Let me help and lighten it,” stretched his hand to take off his head the basket, in which he was carrying earth. Anantârya arrested the boy’s hand and said :—“ Son, if I resign my basket, I shall faint; if you take my basket, you will faint.” But he was a stubborn boy and rejoined :—“ No fear of that, Sire, trust me.” Anantârya remonstrated and said :—“ Son, this service is my life; if you also want life, go, fetch your own basket, and carry it.” The boy disappeared for the present. Anantârya went on with his work and pressed his poor wife into the service, though she was pregnant at the time. She was employed in carrying loads of earth and emptying the same on to the bank. Her returns were at first slow, but they became soon rapid. Anantârya remarked it with surprize and asked her to explain how she managed to return so rapidly. She naively said :—“ A Brahmachârin boy ” sire, “ meets me half the way, carries the load for me and brings me back the basket. Hence Sire, your work is done more speedily.” “ Who is that impertinent urchin meddling with my work, uninvited !” fulminated Anantârya in anger, and running after the boy, gave him a poke under the chin with his crow-bear, saying : “ Take that for thy trouble, and get thee gone ” The boy took to his heels as if in fright. But the temple authorities found, and Anantârya too after, that Lord Srinivāsa in the shrine was profusely bleeding in the chin. This they stopped by stuffing camphor into the wound [This is done even to this day, and the camphor is distributed to devotees as prasāda].

As Anantārya was fast progressing with his work, he was one day bitten by a cobra. But he went simply to the holy Svāmi-Pushkarinī pond, bathed and returned to his work. People observed to him that he should put himself under treatment, unless he meant to die. But he quietly remarked: "No treatment is needed." He now went to the Temple on a visit to Lord Śrīnivāsa, when the Lord remarked:—"Son, beloved, what was thy thought when thou wouldst do nothing to extract the fatal poison from thy system?" "Lord," said he, "if the bitten serpent (i.e., I) is more powerful, it will simply bathe in thy holy pond and do service here below; but if the biting serpent is more powerful, the bitten serpent (i.e., I) will bathe in the Virajā-Stream and do service there above (in Thy Heaven). This was my thought when the cobra bit me."

Anantārya, once upon a time, left Tirupati to go to his native land, Pōsala-country<sup>1</sup> taking food for the journey. After doing a stage, feeling hungry, he sat down to discuss it; but lo, when he opened the box, he found the food swarming with ants. "Curse me, I have sinned," cried he, vexed "The best Saints have desired to live on the Holy Hill of Tirupati, even as stocks and stones<sup>2</sup> And I a sinner, have deprived these holy ants of their holy abode." So saying, he carefully closed the box and retracing his steps, hungry as he was, released the ants on the hill, and went his way.

Yamunai-t-turāivan is a chamber in the Tirupati Temple premises, named after sage Yāmunāchārya. Anantārya sat here usually to make flower-garlands for the Lord. When he was once thus busy and had not finished, he was called to attend on some other work in the Temple, but he refused to stir. And when he went there with the finished garland, the Lord asked him to explain his disobedience. Anantārya said.—"What have I to do with Thee, Lord, when my flowers are just blossoming, and I should not delay stringing them together lest their fragrance be lost for Thee" The Lord said:—"what if we dismiss thee from this place?" "Lord, our Saints have sung that Thou art a sojourner on this Hill<sup>1</sup> like myself; Thou mightest have come to stay here a little earlier than myself; and that is all the difference between us. This Hill is therefore not Thine, it is our common property. Thou hast no authority therefore to dispossess me of it." The Lord was mightily pleased with His curious devotee, which Anantārya was.

<sup>1</sup> Present Mysore. His birth place is Kirangūr (Śiruputtūr) near Śrīrangapatna.

Op. St. Kulaśekhara-Āzhvār's Tirumozhi "எம்பெருமான் பொன் - மலேமேலேதானுமாவேன."

---

---

<sup>1</sup> "பாண்டென்றுசேர் திருவங்கடம்"

CHAPTER XXXV.

THE SALVATION OF KÛRÊṢA.

Tradition here takes up the finishing episodes in the life of the most exemplary disciple and martyr Śrī Kûrêṣa. It is said that his figure forms the alto-relievo in the Life of Rāmānuja, and his exit from the world's stage takes place in advance of that of his revered Master, Śrī Rāmānuja as will appear in the sequel.

Rāmānuja must have been about 110 years and even more by this time. As redoubtable as he was in his championship of Vaishnavism, he was in his strength and zeal unflinching. A recluse, in quiet seclusion, he was importing to his hosts of disciples the quintessence of the doctrines it was his mission to propagate. One day, Kûrêṣa went to visit Lord Ranganātha all by himself. "Thou seemst as if thou hast something in thy heart to tell me," said the Lord. Kûrêṣa broke out into praise which took the shape of a splendid Sanskrit verse,—gifted poet as he was—which he explained at great length by his own commentaries. The Lord was so pleased as to press Kûrêṣa to ask any favour of him. But Kûrêṣa humbly said that he had every favour bestowed on him; there was nothing more to ask. "No," said the Lord, "once more ask, and ask for more, if not for thee, for the love that I bear to my beloved Spouse, Śrī, and love for my Rāmānuja. Kûrêṣa submitted his wish that he be released from the prison of the body, and be gathered to His Feet. "Ask some other thing than that," the Lord said; but Kûrêṣa declared that he could think of nothing else.<sup>1</sup> "Let it be so, then," the Lord said; "what thou askest shall not only be boon for thee, but a boon conferred on every one that has any sort of relation with thee." Kûrêṣa, receiving this message, walked out from the sanctum in all the dignity and glory of a crown-prince, soon destined to occupy the throne in the Kingdom of Parama-pada; and instead of going to his own house, sped beyond the outermost rampart of the Temple and took shelter in Âzhvar's (his father ?) house. Intelligence soon reached Râmânuja as to what had happened. Agreeably startled, he stood up, and flung his upper garment into the air—an expression of infinite joy. The disciples who watched this, failed to understand what Râmânuja meant by this act, and humbly asked him to explain. "My faithful," he said "I bear also relationship with Kûrêsa. My salvation, about which I may have doubts,<sup>1</sup> is thus made safe and sure." This explains the important consequence that follows from the spiritual relation into which a Master and his disciples may enter; and that is, that saving power is as truly vested in a qualified disciple with regard to his Master, as is in a qualified master with regard to his disciple. But Râmânuja's joy soon gave way to grief, at the impending prospect of separation from his dearest disciple and associate, Sîri Kûrêsa, the like of whom there was none; and he forthwith left his Math with all his assembly to meet Kûrêsa ensconced in the Saint's shrine. They met and Râmânuja chidingly remonstrated with Kûrêsa for having done an act without previously taking counsel with him. Kûrêsa kept submissively silent. "Why dost thou not speak, Âzhvân," addressed Râmânuja, "What was thy object in asking the Lord to let thee go to the Blessed Realms in advance of me?" "Holy Sire," now spoke Kûrêsa. "My object was to preserve the order of precedence there." "Speak not, beloved, in conundrums," returned Râmânuja, "explain thyself." "Sire," began Kûrêsa, "the saint's hymn 'mudiyudai' tells us that the angels who are our elders in Heaven come out of its gates to welcome those younger brothers of theirs, who proceed thither from here. This is out of order; for younger ones should always go and welcome the elders. This is the order I wish to preserve. Hence I go in advance and welcome my Master when he comes." Râmânuja said—"My most beloved, thou forgettest the rule that obtains in heaven; नशास्त्रेनैवचक्रम्, obeyed, by revealing the mysteries of religion kept so long sacred, and this doubt vanished by the Lord's gift to Kûrêsa, to whom Râmânuja bore spiritual kinship. Read verse at the end of this chapter.

<sup>1</sup> தாம்வேண்டும்காமமேகாட்டும்கடிது. [2nd T. Andādi, 92].

<sup>1</sup> How could Râmânuja, himself a Saviour, doubt his own salvation? is a question which will naturally arise. The doubt had come to him on the occasion of his incurring the displeasure of his guru of Goshthipârna (vide P : Ch.), whom he dis-

all differences and distinctions disappear there ; and yet thou desirest to perpetuate even there the relation that obtains here between us as master and disciple. In all the spheres, is there a soul to match thee ! ” So broke out Râmânuja, and could not restrain tears trickling down his cheeks, attended by so ; but observing that Kûrêsa had little time now, checked himself and approaching closer, hugged him to his bosom and whispered into his ear the Holy Dvaya-Mantra ; and turning to the spectators, whose curiosity was evidently roused by this act of his, spoke thus .—“ Understand me, sirs. Our Kûrêsa does not need a sacrament of any kind, and yet I administer it in the last moments, lest our spiritual prince Kûrêsa miss the bliss of hearing the sacramental formula from my lips, even like the royal scion asking for his after-dinner aromatics, though he had chewed it a thousand times before. To our Kûrêsa, the Dvaya is his daily nutriment ; and I must serve it for the last time ” “ Dear son, beloved Âzhvân,” he said, now turning to Kûrêsa, “ thou art my very soul, how can I part with thee ? Canst thou not be kind to thy Master ? Take him with thee to Heaven. Why leavest him behind to suffer cruel pangs of separation ? How canst thou enjoy Heaven without him ? [On page 2527, Vol V of the Telugu Edition of the Bhagavadvishaya, the conversation is thus recorded —“ While I am yet here, son, how wert thou anxious for Heaven ? “ Sire,” said Kûrêsa, “ in the depth of my thoughts for the miseries of earthly existence, I forgot this point. Pray forgive me.” Râmânuja said, “ if Lord Ranga could grant thee a boon, he could grant me one too. So I will go and ask him to stop thee here.” So saying, Râmânuja, went a few paces towards the shrine, but stopped abruptly, and reflected thus :—“ God’s will is unalterable. What audacity on my part to go and force Him to change it ? Peccavi. Let me submit and be resigned to the inevitable.” So saying, he retraced his steps. Then followed the further conversation with Kûrêsa]. How can I exist here without thee ? Alas, the Lord in Heaven has attracted thee, though our Lord Ranganâtha here possesses every attraction. So then, thou wilt sever thyself from thy Ranga ? Happy is the Lord in Heaven and happy His celestial hosts to claim thee as their own! Luckless are we here and this sleeping Lord here, Ranga, to lose thee! But let me not, my dearest, change thy mind and disturb thy plans. Be it as thou wilt. All hail to thee, my son; go, go to the Blessed Eternal Kingdom and rule there in eternal peace and bliss!" So saying, Rāmānuja drew him closer into his embrace and fondly stroking him on the back, continued:—

"Āzhvān! I salute thee; thou hast now my leave to depart." Kūrēṣa spoke not a word. "His heart was too full for expression. He fell at Rāmānuja's feet like a senseless block of wood. Rāmānuja speedily raised him up, when Kūrēṣa pressed his holy feet on his head and to his breast, and prayed for the administration of the holy water washed of his feet. Rāmānuja administered it in serene solemnity and Kūrēṣa took it<sup>1</sup> after addressing the memorial verse.—

योनित्यमच्युतपदाब्जयुग्मरुक्म व्यामोहितस्तदितराखितृषायमेने ।

अस्मद्गुरोर्भगवतोस्यदयैकैर्मिथो रामानुजस्यचरणौशरण्यप्रपद्ये ॥

"Rāmānuja's Holy Feet are my Refuge—Rāmānuja, my blessed guru; the Ocean of Mercy,—Rāmānuja who so loves the gold of God's Feet that all else to him is dross."

Rāmānuja made a move now towards his Math, towards the North River (Kollādam), Kūrēṣa following him a little distance. "Pray stop now," enjoined Rāmānuja and Kūrēṣa with folded hands retraced his steps to a pandal close by Āzhvar's house. He now called his wife Āṇḍal-ammai to his side and asked her what her wish was. She said. "August Sire,, thy wish is my wish. My own, I have none." So saying she fell on his feet with folded hands. He now called his sons Bhaṭṭārya and Śrī-Rāma-p-pil'ai to his side, and counselled them thus: "Dear children, ye have no bereavement to be-moan, for ye have Lord Ranga, your Father, and His Holy Spouse is your Mother. By them ye have been brought up. But among the Śrivaishnavas is done in order to imbibe the magnetic influence of the spiritual person, as a cure both for physical as well as psychical ills.

<sup>1</sup> Washing the feet of holy men is an oriental ceremony, which Christ himself did to his disciples. The sipping of the water (known as Śrīpādātirtha) which prevails

forget not that Rāmānuja is your Saviour. Be obedient to Āṇḍāl! By thought or speech or deed sin not against Holy Men; on the other hand ever seek their company." The sons wept and fell at their father's feet. "Weep not, dear children," cried Kûrêṣa, fondly raising them, "for if your grief is caused on account of temporal relationship, ye meddle with spiritual relationship, ye hold with Rāmānuja, but if it is due to our soul-relationship, then ye call it in question by such grief. Either way ye have no cause for regrets. Cease then and rise above such worldly weaknesses." So exhorting, Kûrêṣa laid himself down,—head towards the Temple, resting on the lap of Pillai-p pillai-Āzhvān, and feet resting on the lap of Āṇḍāl ammai—and dismissing from his mind every other thought than that of the Holy Feet of Rāmānuja, winged his way into the ethereal spaces. Rāmānuja was soon apprised of the event. He at once hastened to the spot and consoled Bhaṭṭārya who was weeping, and telling him that no tears should be shed over an auspicious event, directed him to attend to the funeral ceremonies.<sup>1</sup> The Brahma-medha ritual combined with that of the Vaishṇava, was duly performed;<sup>2</sup> and the following verse was composed to his memory:—

श्रीवत्सचिह्नमिश्रेभ्यो नमःशक्तिमधीमहि ।

यदुक्तयस्वयीकरटे यान्तिमङ्गलसूत्रताम् ॥

श्रीमत्कूरकुलधर्षिं श्रीवत्साकसुपास्महे ।

अञ्जयतीन्द्रशिष्याणां मायवेदान्तवेदिनाम् ॥

<sup>1</sup>(a) श्लेष्माश्रुवान्धवैर्मुक्तं श्लेत्तोमुङ्गतेयतोऽ-वश । तस्मान्नरोदितव्येहि कार्यकर्मसमाचर ॥ Yājñyavalkya Smṛiti. Mr. Lead-beater says — 'All the ghastly paraphernalia of woe—the mutes, the plumes, the black velvet, the crape, the mourning garments, the black-edged note paper—all these are nothing more than advertisements of ignorance on the part of those who employ them. The man who begins to understand what death is at once puts aside all this masquerade as childish folly, seeing that to mourn over the good fortune of his friend merely because it involves for himself the pain of an apparent separation from that friend, becomes, as soon as it is recognized, a display of selfishness."

[Pp 59-60. Outline of Theosophy].
(c) Read St Paul's Epistles to the Thessalonians IV, 12 to 17, of which 12 runs thus:—"And we will not have you ignorant, brethren, concerning them that are asleep, that you be not sorrowful, &c. And 17:
"Wherefore comfort you one another with these words"

<sup>2</sup>The following authorities may of be use to our readers on this subject सर्वकर्मणि सूक्तेन गायत्र्यै वैष्णवेन च ।

नारायणानुवाकेन स्नापयेत्पितरंसुत ॥

Our Elders repeat the following beautiful verse in praise of Kûrêsa on his birth day every year :—

अर्वाञ्चोयत्पदसरसिजद्वन्द्वमाश्रित्यपूर्वेमूर्ध्नायस्यान्वयमुपगतादेशिकामुक्तिमापु ।
सोयंरामातुलमुनिरपिस्वीयमुक्तिंकरस्थायत्सम्बन्धादमतुतकथंवर्यतेकुरनाथ ॥

‘How can Kûrêsa be fitly praised, by |whom even Râmânûja’s salvation is made sure,—Râmânûja, who is the sure passport to others’ salvation ? <sup>1</sup>.

Tradition says that while Râmânûja or (Lakshmanâchârya) is Lakshmanâ himself of the Râmâyana fame, Kûrêsa is Râma himself, born again to render back to Lakshmanâ, all the services which Lakshmanâ rendered to him in those by-gone days.

It is said that without Kûrêsa, Râmânûja would not have been what he has been A. P. Embërumânar sung the praises of Râmânûja in his Drâvida Râmânûja-nuttran-dâdi, in imitation of Ândhra-Pûrṇa’s Samskrit Râmânûj-Âshṭottara ; but when Râmânûja heard it, he rejected it as it contained no reference to Kûrêsa Verse 7. “Mozhiyai” was then introduced. Then the hymn was sanctioned and assigned a place along with the 4,000 Prabandhas.

Foot note on page 230 – (continued).

केशवार्पितसर्वाङ्गं शरीरंमंगलावहं ।
नवृधादाहयेद्विप्रो ब्रह्ममेधविधिविना ॥
ब्रह्ममेधव्रतंप्रोक्तं मुनिभिर्ब्रह्मतत्परैः ।
महाभागवतानाहि कर्तव्यमिहमुत्तमम् ॥
नात परतरंतीर्थं वैष्णवाङ्घ्रिजलात्कुभम् ।
तेषापादोदकंपुण्यं गङ्गामपिपुनातिहि ॥
शुभादौद्विजवर्यैश्च सर्वसम्पत्कुभावहं ।
सहस्रशाखाध्ययनं कारयेद्भैदिकोत्तम ॥
अशुभान्तेविशेषेण द्रामिडीब्रह्मसंहिता ।
अध्येतव्याद्विजवरैः राशौचाघविनाशिनी ॥
वृद्धावादैर्ज्ञेयचान्ते द्रामिडीब्रह्मसंहिता ।
अध्येतव्याद्विजवैश्चै राधागीतसहस्रकी ॥
यथातुष्यतिदेवेशो महाभागवतार्चनात् ।
ययानतुष्यतेविष्णुर्विधिवत्स्वार्चनादपि ॥

<sup>1</sup> See foot note 1 on page 275.

CHAPTER XXXVI.

RĀMĀNUJA'S LAST DAYS.

Parāsara-Bhattārya, or Bhattārya shortly, the son of Kūrēsa, had now come to the estate of his father;—spiritual estate. Rāmānuja of course knew from the moment of Bhattārya's entry into this world, that he was destined to be the apostle of the Visishtādvaita Dispensation—having been presented to the world by Lord Ranganātha Himself as His own (God-)son. Providence designed that Kūrēsa should make his exit from the episcopal stage—for he was too saintly and retired from the world to be an active worker, the requisite for a propagandist. Bhattārya was of this type. So Rāmānuja led the budding young man one morning to the Holy Temple, to present him formally to the Lord, so as to make him the anointed, to authoritatively transmit to posterity the great Message he had brought from Heaven. Rāmānuja led then this juvenile apostle-delegate to the Lord, and presented him. “We again repeat and confirm our God-fathership to thee, son. We consecrate it by giving thee this turmeric-water to drink. Grieve not for the loss of our Kūrēsa, thy Father, for we stand to you in that position, more so even” So spoke the Lord. Rāmānuja interrupted —“Majestic Lord! Bless this scion with long life; and I will give him all education” Lord Ranga did not deign to reply, but simply gave them leave with his blessings, symbolized by the serving of tirtha and prasāda. Rāmānuja returned to his see and calling Embār (Govinda-Jīya), assigned to him the sacred task of preparing Bhattārya thoroughly for the position he was to occupy, by a complete course of studies, in doctrine as well as discipline. After thus discharging the sacred trust which had been vested in him, Rāmānuja settled down once more quietly, to spend his time usefully in imparting instruction to his large congregation in Bhāshya and Bhagavad-vishaya.

Kandādai-Āndān, the son of Dāsarathi, one day approached Rāmānuja reverently and said :—“Holy Sire, thou art to us in this Kali-Age, God Himself incarnate, come on this earth to establish Dharma, like Lord Krishna in Dvāpara-Age. If ररिज्ञाय<sup>1</sup> is said to Him, thou art : पुण्याम्भोजविकासाय पापध्वान्तक्षयाय । श्रीमानविरभूदुमो रामानुजदेवाकर ॥ Rāmānuja the Sun, incarnated, to open the lotus of virtue, and dissipate the darkness of vice." So, Holy Father, permit us to instal in Sri-Perumbūdūr (Bhūta-puri), thy image, that all posterity to the end of time may be enabled to know thee, love thee and serve thee as their Saviour, and secure their salvation." Rāmānuja granted the prayer. Āṇḍān accordingly brought a statuary to study Rāmānuja's figure and reproduce it in metal. This was done and shown to Rāmānuja. He scanned it closely from top to bottom. Being satisfied,<sup>2</sup> he embraced the statue pouring into it all the spiritual power and grace he had possessed, for the benefit of posterity and commanded that it be installed in Bhūta-puri in the month of Pushya when Jupiter would be in that constellation.<sup>3</sup> Āṇḍān carried the Image in state to Bhūta-puri, and installed it along with the Mūla or fixed Image, sculptured out of stone, exactly in the month and on the day fixed by Rāmānuja. As the installation ceremonies were being proceeded with at Bhūta-puri, Rāmānuja at Srīrangam was suddenly taken ill. He was startled at this, but recollecting that that was the moment his Image was being inaugurated at Bhūta-puri, understood the meaning of his illness. This he also took as a foreboding of the end of his stay on earth and the completion of his vocation. He therefore sent a message to Āṇḍān to return immediately. Āṇḍān obeyed the summons and joined Rāmānuja.

Rāmānuja had thus all his band of disciples and devotees remain by his side, and gave them the quintessence of his teachings thus :—"Listen, sons beloved, ' began he ; "Men are of three distinct types, the God-ward (anukūla), the God-against (pratikūla) and the God-indifferent (anubhaya). The first type

<sup>1</sup> Bhagavad-gīta IV 8.

<sup>2</sup> The figure answered the description :—

“पुण्ड्रैर्द्वादशभिर्धुतं विलसितं दण्डैस्त्रिभिर्मण्डितं काष्ठायेण शिखोपधीतरुचिरंदोर्भूलचक्राम्बुजं ।
आसीनं जलजासनैश्चतुलसीपत्राचमालाञ्चितं
युक्ताञ्जलिमुद्रयाराविनिभं श्रीभाष्यकारं भजे ॥

It is of this Image,—the frontispiece to this work.

<sup>3</sup> This star, it is significant, is the star of Śrī Rāma's coronation.

are the Śrī-Vaiṣṇavas; the second are the antitheists; and the third are the wordly (samsārins). If you meet with the men of the first class, joy as if you found flowers, scents, aromatics and so forth; as if the blush of moonshine spread about you, and zephyrs softly crept over you; as if you met your own most near and dear kith and kin. If you come across men of the second stamp, fear as if you faced a venomous reptile, fire and so forth. If you chance to meet men of the third description, mind them not as you would not mind the stocks and stones that lie on your way. If you discover willingness in them, teach them things of the spirit; if otherwise, treat them with pity. Why these men are turned away from God is because of their love for lust and lucre.

If out of pride consequent on lust and lucre, men condemn Śrī-Vaiṣṇavas it is nothing short of contempt for God Himself. If to such pride, holy men descend to paying courtship, it is like the king's wife wandering in the streets for begging. If to samsārins, holy men allow themselves to be lured on account of their wealth and so forth, vain is their wisdom, as they have not learnt to distinguish between gem and glass पठित्वाभाष्यम्, तत्प्रवचनमशक्तौशठरिपोर्गिरिभ्रष्टा, वास प्रमुप-रिचितस्याननिवहे । प्रभौ कैङ्कर्यवा, प्रपदनमनोरथमननसम्प्रपन्नानावा, मेभवतुपरिचर्यापरिचय ॥ There are six ways by which you can usefully spend your days : 1. Read Śrī Bhāṣhya and teach it to others. 2. If that is above your level, read Tiruvāimozhi and make others read it. 3. If that is beyond your ken, build a hut in any holy land, and live there. 4. If that is impracticable, do services in a Temple. 5. If that is inconvenient, dwell ever on the profound truths contained in the Holy Dvaya-Mantra. 6. If that also is difficult, take shelter or service under a holy man.

Rāmānuja now sent for all the servants of the Blessed Fane of Ranga, and addressed them thus :—" O Faithful Servants of our Lord, my time is over, and my services in your company have to come to an end. In the performance of my duties with you, I may have offended some and pained others. As I am now about to leave you, it is seeming that I ask of you, one and all, to forgive me for my short-comings." "Holy Sire," said they all in one voice. "Why do you speak thus to us your humble servants? your speech is strange—not only strange, but drives fear into our breasts! You, beloved father, to leave us orphans? You, the soul of the worlds, to leave us lifeless corpses?” “Speak not so, sons,” said Rāmānuja, comforting them:—“Ye lose nothing by losing me; for there is Your Lord Ranga here, ever present, and who never leaves you. He is safe sleeping on his serpent-couch and steadily gazing to the South,—for his Bhakta, Vibhishana dwells there. Never be sparing in your services to Him. Be vigilant and devout. I wish you all the constant company of the Lord’s own elect,—the Sri-Vaishnavas. Farewell.” So exhorting them and assigning to select disciples the care of the different sections of his large following, Sri Rāmānuja led Bhaṭṭārya to Lord Ranga’s presence, and let him receive the tirtha and prasāda, prior to him—signifying by this act that Bhaṭṭārya was to be the Head of the Srīvaishnava Church after his departure—and turning to his disciples, said:—“Gentle folk, he shall be next to me in succession. Look upon him as such.” Turning to Bhaṭṭārya, he said.—“Son, there is a servant of repute, by name Vedānti in the uplands (Mysore). Go there, win him by polemics, and convert him to our Faith.” After thus consecrating Bhaṭṭārya, Rāmānuja returned to his Maṭh, and once more addressing the assembly of his disciples, commanded them not to stray from the Path when he passed away; not to take his loss so much to heart as to interfere with the due performance of duties falling to their share, “for,” said he, “you will then forfeit your connection with me, Mahāpūrṇa and Yāmuna; and you will moreover act contrary to the will of our St. Śaṭhagōpa. Approach me, then, each of you, and swear by my holy feet, that you will carry out my behests, and will never swerve from the lines of virtue, I have marked out for you all.”

Rāmānuja now commanded that they should retire and return after eating of the consecrated food prepared for them. They obeyed; and when they returned, Sri Rāmānuja gave his last words and last blessings; and withdrawing himself gently,—as if he was falling into a quiet natural sleep—closed his eyes, and laid himself down, his head turned towards the Temple, and rested on the lap of Embâr, and feet placed on the lap of Vatu-pârna (Ândhra-pârna).

The whole Srîrangam and his wife crowded to the Math to witness the last moments of the Great Râmânuja. A party of the elders, in solemn tones, sang the Brahnavalli and the Bhṛiguvalli of the Vedas; and another party sang the hymns of the Drâvida-Prabandhas. As they watched Râmânuja lying in state, their hearts beating with the importance of the supreme moment, the crown of his head (âṭ the pineal-gland)<sup>1</sup> burst and the holy Ambassador of God winged his way back to the Native Land the feed souls, the Empyrean of the perfect.

Like the mighty trees of the forest, uprooted and blown down by the fierce blasts of the hurricane, did the assembly fall flat on the ground, senseless; when to recovering sense only to feel all the more the keen agony of their irreparable loss, followed by an uproarious outburst of grief, unparalleled by any other event of the kind. Torrents fell from their blinded eyes, and they ejaculated inarticulate words from their choked throats shaking with passion; and in short, their limbs lay as if bereft of motion by the paralytic stroke dealt by Râmânuja's passing away from the sphere of his labours, up to Heaven,—His Native Home,—to enjoy that unutterable rest there—the reward of all the benefactors of mankind. “Indeed,” cried they, “have we realized the truth of श्रीनिवासा,<sup>2</sup> and श्रीनिवास ॥ i.e., when you sprang into our midst, we obtained the ‘light of knowledge’; and now your exit envelops us in the ‘gloom of evil.’”<sup>3</sup>

When Râmânuja's Grand Guru Yâmunâcharya ascended to Heaven, a routine of observances and sacraments, processions and interment was gone through as prescribed by the Sâstras for a Vaishṇava and a Sanyâsin. All this, even to minuter elaborations, and greater detail was solemnly gone through. Thus passed away the Great Râmânuja.

<sup>1</sup> The Brahma-randhra.

<sup>2</sup> This is a muemogram indicating the birth-date of Râmânuja Śaka, 939 (1017 A.C.)

<sup>3</sup> Another muemogram enshrining the date of his departure. Śaka 1059 (1137 A.C.)

CHAPTER XXXVII.

RĀMĀNUJA'S GREATNESS.

"Endless are the incidents in the Chapters of Rāmānuja's life. It would be impossible to record them all. Only the salient features have been recorded," so says our chronicler, Pin-balagia-Perumāḷ-Jiyar. He collects now in one summarized compass all the evidences eloquently testifying to the greatness of Rāmānuja.

1. Lord Ranga declared with his own lips that all the riches of the Kingdom of Heaven as well as of earth were placed at Rāmānuja's disposal.

2. Lord Srinivāsa confirmed this grant by His holy word also; and to prove that this was not mere flattery, it is written that a milkmaid by name Tumbaiyūr Koṇḍi, was supplying curds to Rāmānuja. When he was once on his way to Tirupati, the woman appeared and presented her bill for payment. Rāmānuja commanded Kidāmbi-Ācchan to give her food in the Math. She ate and coming to Rāmānuja, prostrated to him and submitted to him that she had a favour to ask. He bade her ask it. She said:—"Holy sire, I desire not payment in coin for my curds, but grant me Moksha instead."<sup>1</sup>

"But that power I possess not," replied Rāmānuja, "Lord Srinivāsa alone can grant thy prayer." * "Then give me a written permit, sire, to take to the Lord" asked she. Rāmānuja, overcome by her faith, gave her one. She forthwith ascended the Sacred Mount, but she had hardly reached the summit, before the Lord Himself met her on the way, and receiving the permit, gave her Moksha on the spot.

3. Lord Varadarāja of Kāñchipura proved Rāmānuja on two occasions, when He appeared once in Yādava-prakāśa's dream and commanded that circumambulation of the world enjoined for a would-be Sansyāsīn was accomplished by once circumambulating round Rāmānuja; and when hot debates on philosophy waged between Rāmānuja and Yajña-mūrti, and the latter was scoring points for victory, the Lord appeared in Rāmānuja's dream and suggested certain Vedic passages<sup>1</sup> being quoted as those would level the adversary to the ground. Next morning the opponent was vanquished.

---

<sup>1</sup> i.e., Liberation.

4. Lord Nārāyaṇa of Melukote, proved Rāmānuja by His showing the way for Rāmānuja's future in a dream when he was staying at Toṇḍanūr; and further condescending to assume the position of a loved Son to Rāmānuja—Sampat-kumāra.

5. Lord Sundara-Rāja of the Azhagar-Hill near Madura, proved by summoning one day all the disciples of Rāmānuja before Him. They obeyed, but the kinsmen of Mahā-pūrṇa (the Âchārya of Rāmānuja), stopped away. Pūrṇa asked them why. "We are your kinsmen, are n't we? And Rāmānuja is our disciple therefore," said they. The Lord on hearing this spoke :—"Your taking Rāmānuja for a disciple is only matched by Dasarathi and Vasudeva taking Rāma and Kṛishṇa for their sons respectively. On another occasion Kiḍāmbi-âcchān repeated before the Lord the verse : Aparādha.....,<sup>2</sup> in which the expression agatim : 'wayless' occurs. "How darest thou utter this," interrupted the Lord, "when thou hast Rāmānuja for thy 'way'?"

6. Nambi, the Lord of Tiru-k-kurungudi, proved by expressing surprise that Rāmānuja should be able to bring many souls to God's fold, while He Himself could not ac-

<sup>1</sup> प्रणवोधनुशरोक्षात्माश्रितस्तद्वद्व्यमुच्यते ॥

[Mund-Up. II, 2-4. Dhyāna-B. Up. 19.]

(<sup>2</sup>) अपराधसहस्रभाजनं पतितंभीमभवार्यवोत्कुरे ।

अगतिशरणागतंहरे कृपयाकेवलमात्मसात्कुरु ॥

[Stotra—Ratna by Yāmunā.]

"Freighted alas! with a thousand sins,
A wreck in the dreadful sea of death, I pine '
Lost is my way, O Lord, my God '
I yield me up to thee ;
Thy grace alone must save,
Ah ' make me thine."

comply so much, despite His repeated Incarnations<sup>1</sup> on earth ; and He retired every time sad with the thought that souls were more prone to roll down and down into the depths of samsāra, than climb up to Him.<sup>2</sup> “Wouldest Thou know the secret, Lord?” said Rāmānuja, ‘then put thyself in the position of a disciple.’ Nambi did so, and Rāmānuja whispered the secret of his success into the Lord’s ear ; and ever afterwards, Nambi prided Himself on this kind of spiritual tie established with Rāmānuja.

7. St. Nammāzhvār felt so much compassion for the sinful world that he laid a wager with God Himself. “See, Lord, I shall convert the world unto Thee.”<sup>3</sup> “Know they not Thy Greatness, that I should tell?”<sup>4</sup> and so forth. But when he saw the world averse to his preaching, he retired disappointed, crying :—“Is it possible for me to correct this large world?”<sup>5</sup>; “Enough, myself and my mind have yielded to Him.”<sup>6</sup> But again when he looked forth into the future, he saw hope and exultingly cried.—“This dark world shall yet be set right. Yet, this dark age shall bring salvation”<sup>7</sup> Thus did this Saint ; refer to the advent of Rāmānuja, as the coming Messiah. Sage Nāthamunigal prophesied Rāmānuja’s advent by saying : ‘A plash may quench a sparrow’s thirst ; but a loch will feed a vale’<sup>1</sup> By loch he symbolized Rāmānuja. Embār sang this by the following beautiful metaphor.

லக்ஷ்மிநாநாப்யஸிந்நிபைசாதிருஜலம்.பாபகாரியநீரம் ।

நாயாநாப்யஸிந்நிபைசாதிருஜலம்.பாபகாரியநீரம் ॥

மதவாநாயுநாயுமரீதமயயநீநாப்யஸிந்நிபைசாதிருஜலம்

மதவாநாயுநாயுமரீதமயயநீநாப்யஸிந்நிபைசாதிருஜலம் ॥

<sup>1</sup>. बहनिमेव्यतीतानि &c. [Bh. Gītā, IV, 5.]

<sup>2</sup>. आसुरीयोनिमापन्ना &c., [Bh. Gītā, XVI, 20.]

<sup>3</sup>. நின் கண்டேவட்கையெழுவிபீடனே. [T. Viruttam 16.]

<sup>4</sup>. ஏ ! பாவம் பரமே ! [T. Vāyamoḥi, II, 2-2.]

<sup>5</sup>. அகவிடத்தையாராய்ந்து அதுதிருத்தலாவதே ! [P. T. Andādi, 26.]

<sup>6</sup>. யானுமென்னெஞ்சுமிசைந்தொழிந்தோம் [P. T. Andādi, 29.]

<sup>7</sup>. கலியும்கெடும்கண்டுமகாண்மின். [T. Vāy-moḥi, V. 2-1.]

“குளப்படியிலேதேங்கினால் குருவிகுடி துப்போம்
வீராரணபுரத்தேதரியிலே தேங்கினால்நாடுவிளையும்.”

8. Yāmnāchārya when he was at Kānchī-pura on a visit, and saw Rāmānuja, following in the train of Yādava-prakāsa, pointed him out to his disciples, saying :—" Look, He will be the first leader of our faith."

9. Mahāpūrṇa proved Rāmānuja's greatness thus :—One day he and his daughter Attulāy-amma, were seated in their house, when Rāmānuja happened to enter with his train of disciples. Mahāpūrṇa at once got up and prostrated himself before him. His daughter asked him how he could do such an act of obeisance to Rāmānuja, who was his disciple. Pūrṇa replied : " Those feet and this head are a match to each other."<sup>1</sup> Another day Rāmānuja was returning from his bath in the Kāveri, when Mahāpūrṇa meeting him did obeisance. But Rāmānuja stood erect instead of returning this customary homage, and simply lifted up his Guru. Rāmānuja's disciples asked him to explain his unusual conduct. He said ; " My Guru wishes to please himself by honoring me. If that is his pleasure, it is my pleasure. I should not cross him." The disciples next asked Pūrṇa to explain his unusual behaviour. " He said :—" Sirs, I saw in Rāmānuja my own Guru—Yāmuna after my own Guru, all the perfections of a Guru find their haven in Rāmānuja." And Pūrṇa made his own son Puṇḍarikāksha the disciple of Rāmānuja.

10. It has already been related, that Gossthī-pūrṇa—the second Guru of Rāmānuja,—revealed the secrets of religion to Rāmānuja by exacting a promise that he would not impart the same to others ; but that Rāmānuja broke the promise anon by openly declaring the secrets to all in the Temple ; that Pūrṇa became wroth on coming to know this and demanding an explanation from Rāmānuja, the latter confessed his fault, but sub-

<sup>1</sup> Ṣaṭhajit the cloud, from Śriṣa's Sea of Grace Drunk deep, rains down on Nātha-Hill ;
 Rāma, Padmāksha, two rills thence rippling down
 Unite in Yāmuna-Brook, to gulf
 Yatirāja's Lotus-Lake, by countless Floodgates
 To flood the Pastures of parched souls.

"அத்தாருக்குத்தக்கதலைகாண்டிது" mitted that if his disobedience did entail on him hell, he had the satisfaction of thinking that thousands were saved—a great price to get in return—, and that Pūrṇa, on hearing this embraced Rāmānuja exclaiming: “What a large heart thine for others, my shallow heart did not warm like this! Thou art no other than he (Yāmuna).” And he made his son Terk-ālvār, Rāmānuja’s disciple.

11. Tirumalai-Namhi or Śrīsaila-Pūrṇa—another Guru—it has already been narrated, replied,—when questioned by Rāmānuja why an elderly person like himself came to meet him on his way up the Holy Hill of Tirupati, when there were many young persons, any one of whom he could have despatched,—that with respect to Rāmānuja, he could find no other person younger than himself. And further Pūrṇa made a gift of Embār to Rāmānuja, and made his son Rāmānuja to become his disciple.

12. Tirumalai-Āndān or Mālādhara—another Guru—was teaching Tiruvāymozhi to Rāmānuja. When the verse ‘Ariyāk-kālattu’ [II. 33], was explained, Rāmānuja gave his own interpretations. This gave offence, the Guru ceasing to teach. Goshṭhi Pūrṇa, coming to hear of this speedily appeared on the scene, and gave Mālādhara to understand that Rāmānuja’s interpretations were correct, as they were those of Yāmuna-chārya, and that he must look upon Rāmānuja in the light of such a disciple as Lord Kṛishṇa was to Sāndīpa. On another occasion, when Rāmānuja, gave out an explanation, which, he said, was according to Yāmuna, “thou hast never spoken to Yāmuna, how dost thou know?” cried Mālādhara. “Sire” replied Rāmānuja, “am I not Ēkalavya to Yāmuna?” The Guru anon fell on the ground, saying: “Indeed thou art an avatāra,” and made his son Sundarabāhu, Rāmānuja’s disciple.

13 Rāmānuja did humble service to the venerable Tiruvaranga-p-perumāl-Aṛaiyar, when the latter, one day, said.—“The price of thy services, Rāmānuja, is my all”, and he taught him the secrets of the Fifth Way (Pañcham-opāya), and made his son Tiruvāymozhi Aṛaiyar his disciple

14. Āndhia-Pūrṇa was a firm believer in this Fifth Way, which to him was the Holy Feet of Rāmānuja.

15. Kaṇṇiyanūṭṭi Sīri-yācchān, declared on oath (i.e., when remaining half immersed in water) that faith in Rāmānuja was the only road to salvation

16. Yajñamūṛti (a convert from Advaitism), whom Rāmānuja set up in a separate see, as abbot, and to be looked upon as a second Rāmānuja, declared to his intimate disciples, Ecchān, Anandālvān, Tondanūṭṭi-Nambi and Marudūṭṭi-Nambi that Rāmānuja was the real Saviour, and his second Rāmānuja-ship was only a gracious honor bestowed on him, inasmuch as he felt it as a millstone hung round a sparrow's neck.

17. Pillai-p-pillai-y-āzhvān became the disciple of Kūrēsa. The latter when asked his pastoral fee (ācārya-dakṣhiṇa), stated it as the curbing by him of his three instruments of thought, speech and deed against offending holy men. But the disciple found it very difficult to carry this advice into practice, and evinced great perplexity. Kūrēsa observing it, called him and said:—"Here is a way out of thy difficulty, son! Thou canst avoid hurt by deed, for thy foe will return it, or the king will punish for it. Thou canst avoid hurtful speech, if thou wishest to keep peace with the world; for so says a stanza:—यदीधसिवशीकर्तुं जगदेकेन-र्मणा । परापवादसत्येभ्यो गात्रन्तीनिवारय । This is to thy advantage. There remains now thy thought which is difficult to curb. Hence if thou wishest thy mental sins not to offend God, trust to Rāmānuja's feet for reconciliation.

18. Miḷag-āzhvān challenged Dāsarathī for a debate. The latter consented and asked for a wager. "If I am beaten," said Āzhvān, "I will carry thee on my shoulders." This was agreed to; and Dāsarathī won. Āzhvān, true to his word lifted the victor on to his shoulders, ran a few paces, and setting him down asked forgiveness for his impudence. Dāsarathī lead him to Rāmānuja, and said. "There is thy forgiveness—his holy feet."

19. Embār counselled Bhaṭṭārya thus.—"Son, vaunt not thyself that thou art the Godson of Lord Ranga, Kūrēsa's son, and a servant. Faith in Rāmānuja alone will save thee."

* 20. Bhattârya counselled Nañjiyar thus.—“Son! pique thyself not on being a great Vedântist, on thy becoming my disciple, and on thy giving up all thy wealth to me, as my fee. But firmly believe in Râmânuja as our Saviour.”

21. Nañjiyar warned Nambillai thus.—“Grow not haughty that the world calls thee ‘World-teacher’ (Lokâchârya); that thou art a clever expert in expounding the Prabandhas Râmânuja’s feet alone can save thee.

22. One day Nambillai took hold of the hand of Siva-karai-p-pillai, to go out; and as he crossed the threshold of his house, he discovered a holy man asleep on the pial outside. S. pillai called out to him to withdraw his legs as his master was there. Nambillai immediately let go his hold of S. pillai saying:—“Son, our saints have declared that the legs of holy men are holy legs To call them “legs” in derision is against thee a proof of disrespect and ignorance. Begone from me.” S. pillai went to his village in disgrace and set up loud wailing, and cried.—“Oh master! thou hast cast me away like the stone in a sling, from thy holy place between the two rivers.” Nambillai on hearing this repentance, sent for him and enjoined.—“Trust in Râmânuja, all thy faults are remitted.”

23. Tiru-k-kurugai-p-pirân Pillân was once in a place called Siru-p-puttûr Sômasi-y-Âṇḍân read Srî - Bhâshya under him three times Pillân left the place for his native country, when Âṇḍân pleaded: Sire, I live in this country far from you. Deign to tell me the choicest article of faith for my life.” To this Pillân replied.—“Son, keep off intumescence that comes of thy ability to descant on the science of Pûrva-Mîmâmsa, and to discourse on Srî-Bhâshya; but place implicit faith in our Saviour Ramanuja.” And Gomathatha-p-pillan bade in a similar manner his disciple Kâkkai-p-pâdi-y-acchan-Pillai

24. “When God was angry with you, what didst thou do?” asked Engal-Âzhvân of K. P. A. Pillai “I resorted at such times to the appeasing power vested in our Saviour, Râmânuja;” he replied

25. A coterie of disciples read Śrī-Bhāṣhya under Naḍā-dûr-Ammāl. They asked —“ Father, Bhakti (love to God), we find is a hard thing to do.” Ammāl taught them the way of Prapatti (faith in God). They again pleaded : “ Sire, it is hard to get faith.” “ Then,” taught Ammāl, “ your only way is to depend on Râmanuja.” Naḍuvil Āzhvân administered similar instructions to his disciples Vangipuratt ācchi and others.

26. “ This is a mighty torrent, this Śrī-Bhāṣhya,” complained the Aimbatt-iruvār (52) magnates of Tirunârâyana-puram (Mêlukōṭe) when Veda-vyāsa-Bhaṭṭar expatiated on it before Râmanuja's shrine in the Temple. “ Then,” said Bhaṭṭar, “ trust solely to your household-God Râmanuja, and that is enough.” So again did Naḍuvil-Tiruvīdhi-p-pillai-Bhaṭṭar comfort his disciple Elaiya v-aḷagiyâr.

27. Āndhra-pûrṇa often reproached Kûrêsa and Dâsarathî for double heartedness inasmuch as they wavered in their devotion between God and Râmanuja, the Saviour ; whereas he was single hearted as being firm in his trust in the latter alone.

28. The devil Brahma-rakshas signified Râmanuja's greatness, by so declaring it to Yādava-piākāsa.<sup>1</sup>

29. The dumb lad was another illustration. He was born in Kāñchîpuram, dumb. After his fifth year he was found missing for two years. He suddenly appeared again. People surrounded him and questioned him as to whither he had gone. He replied that he had been charmed away to Kshîrâbhi (Milky Sea). “ What is the news there,” asked they. “ The only news of any importance,” said he, “ was that on earth an avatâr in the shape of Râmanuja has descended.” The boy was not seen again, after he delivered this message. This story, the holy Bhagavat-senâpati-Jîyar took pride in often relating, to vouch further for the greatness of Râmanuja.

30. As among Divine Incarnations, those of Râma and Krishṇa are notable ; Vyāsa, Parāsara, Suka, and Sannaka among the Rishis ; Śrīrangam, Tirupati, Kāñchi and Melukōṭe among the Holy places ; St Nammâzhvâr among the Saints ; so is Râmânuja among the Âchâryas (Apostles), such as Nâthamuni.

31. The importance of Râm-Âvatâra consists in Râmâ's declaring the Divine Gift of Free Grace to all who may approach Him, irrespective of caste or creed, color or condition ; in seeking friendship of humble folk like Guha in performing the obsequies of a Bîâhmaṇa for Jatâyû, in accepting food from the hands of a Sabarî, in eating in the company of Hanunân ; and so forth.<sup>1</sup>

The importance of Kṛishṇ-Âvatâra consists in Kṛishṇa's delivering the Apocalypse of Bhagavad-gîtâ, with its Charama-Sloka,<sup>2</sup> in rejecting the hospitality of Bhîshma and Droṇa for that of Vidura,<sup>3</sup> and so forth.

The reputation of Srîrangam comes of Lord Raṅga's having mixed with the (Pariah) Saint Tiruppâṇar, as intimately as body and soul, that of Tirupati comes of Lord Srînivâsa's having spoken to and moved freely with such souls as Bhîma, (Kurumb-arutta-nambî), the potter, and Tonḍaman ; that of Kâñchî (Perumâl-kôil) comes of Lord Varada's having been so intimate with Kâñchî-pûrṇa ; that of Melukote, of Lord Nârâyana's having eaten of the food offered by Sucharita's son ; and of His having deigned to become the son of Râmânuja—hence called Yatirâja-sampat-kumâra .

The distinction earned by Veda-Vyâsa is because of his Vedânta-Sûtras and the Sâtvika Purâṇas, by all of which he proclaimed the Ultimate Truth by his finishing stanza .—

सत्यंसत्यंपुनस्तत्यं उद्धृत्य भुजमुच्यते ।
वेदशास्त्रात्परं नास्ति नन्दैर्वक्त्रैश्चात्परम् ॥

'I declare, once, twice, thrice.

<sup>1</sup> See Râmâyana.

<sup>2</sup> Gîtâ, XVIII, 66.

<sup>3</sup> विदुरावाभिबुभुजे शुचीनिगुणवन्ति च &c., [Bhârata, Udyoga Parva] द्विषदन्नं भोक्तव्यं द्विषन्तं नैव भोजयेत्.

There is no Scripture like the Veda, nor God like Kêṣavā.<sup>1</sup> that earned by Parāśara is because of his Viṣṇu-purāṇa,<sup>1</sup> in which he gives a clear definition of the Three Eternal Verities, God, Soul and Matter,—hence styled by Sage Yāmuna as ‘The Magnificent’;<sup>2</sup> that earned by Śuka is by his Bhāgavata by declaring in it the greatness of Viṣṇu and his earning immediate mukti, शुकोमुक्तः; that earned by Śaunuka is by his famous work Viṣṇu-Dharma; that earned by Nārada is because of his declaration as the slave of the holy Vaiṣṇavas.<sup>3</sup> The distinction of St. Nammāzhvar arises from his composing four Prabandhas analogous to the Four Vedas, thus popularising Scriptures, and his revealing to Sage Nāthamuni the Four-Thousand Prabandhas, thus establishing the Vaiṣṇava Dispensation. But above all towers the reputation of Rāmānuja, inasmuch as he unbosomed to all, the Holy Sense of the Charama-Sloka, made clear the obscure and abstruse texts of the Vedas, made manifest the truths of St. Nammāzhvar’s Tiruvāymozhi, wrote exegetics on Brahma-Sūtras according to the Canons established by Sages Nāthamuni and Yāmuna in their Treatises; wrote other independent works such as the Gadyatraya; won victories over false prophets and philosophers; thus bequeathing to posterity a system pre-eminently known as Rāmānuja’s system, though it is a system of thought co-eternal with God Himself.

32. Rāmānuja was one day conducting his ministry in his congregation, taking up the Doctrine of God’s Free Grace to frail humanity, as illustrated by Rāmāyaṇa Vibhīṣaṇa, though born among the demons (Rākshasas), was angelic in nature. He tried to dissuade his brother Rāvāṇa from his evil ways, but he would not listen; so he severed himself swiftly

<sup>1</sup> वेदेषु पोरुषं सूक्तं धर्मशास्त्रेषु मानवम् ।

भारते भगवद्गीता पुराणेषु च वैष्णवम् ॥

<sup>2</sup> तत्त्वेन यन्निदं चिदीश्वरतत्त्वव भोगापवर्गतदुपायगतीरुदार ।

सन्दर्शयन्निरमिमीतपुराणरत्नं तस्मै नमोऽनुनिवराय पराशराय ॥ [Stotra-Ratna, 4.]

<sup>3</sup> भुजयुगमपि चिन्नैरङ्कितं यस्य विष्णोः परमपुरुषनाम्ना कीर्तनं यस्य वाचि

रुद्रतरमपि पुण्ड्रं मस्तके यस्य कण्ठे सरसि जमपि मालायस्य तस्यास्मिदासः ॥

from all connection with him, and soaring into the sky, crossed the ocean with four attendants and coming to Lord Rāma, who was encamped with his army on the other shore, cried thus:—

‘O Rāma,’ thus he cried, ‘in me
Vibhishan, Rāvan’s brother, see
By him disgraced thine aid I seek,
Sure refuge of the poor and weak.
From Lankā, friends, and wealth I fly.
And reft of all on Thee rely.
On Thee, the wretch’s firmest friend,
My kingdom, joys and life depend. [Rāmāyana, VI, 19.]

* * *

I left my children and my wife
And fly to Raghu’s son for life. [Rāmāyana, VI, 17.]

And yet the Vānar-chiefs of Lord Rāma said to Him:—
‘Rāma!

We wait thy word: the order give
And these thy foes shall cease to live.
Command us, mighty king, and all,
Lifeless upon the earth shall fall [Rāmāyana, VI, 17.]

On hearing this, Dhanurdāsa stood up and cried:—
“Godsire, if Vibhishana, who left wife, children and all in order to seek refuge with Rāma, deserved to be stoned by Rāma’s Vānar-chiefs, how much more indeed do I deserve that treatment,—I, who have made no renunciation at all like Vibhishana!!” “Peace,” cried Rāmānuja, “Listen to me, my son, I will unfold to thee the secrets of salvation. Śrī, the spouse of Lord Nārāyaṇa, ever stands by Him as our Mother-mediator. She is the personification of the most exalted attribute of God, viz, Grace or Mercy<sup>1</sup>. When our Lord through Śrī is ever anxious to shower His mercy unstintingly on His erring children on earth, what fear is there for us?

---

<sup>1</sup> Śrī also symbolizes love of God for man and love of man for God, She ever dwells in the bosom of God, like the Christ, the Son [John I. 13.]

We have an unbroken chain of apostles, reaching down to us from God, of which the first link is God, and His Grace, Srī, the next. St. Sathagopa is the next important link; and he has declared in unmistakable terms that he has obtained Heaven (moksha)<sup>1</sup> If he has won it, Nāthamani has won; if Nāthamani has won, Yāmuna has won; Yāmuna winning, my next guru above me, Mahapūrṇa, has won. If Pūrṇa has won, I have surely won. When I have, ye have all indeed won. Take comfort then from this thought. Dvaya-Mantra, which I have taught thee, declares, as thou art aware, the indissoluble unity of God with His Grace, Srī; and an unbroken chain binds God and His creatures in one bond, from which it is impossible to escape and stand aloof. With me goes my flock. What I share it undoubtedly shares. The areca tree is watered by the gardener, but the plantain trees round it take the moisture as well. I and my church are linked together for one testing. My destiny shall invariably be its destiny. When Vibhīshana was after all allowed to approach Lord Rāma, no separate invitation to the four Rākshasa-men, who accompanied with him, was needed, nor when the Vāna-chiefs wished to drive him away, did they think of driving those four persons separately. In other words, the four persons counted with Vibhīshana as one, in gains or losses. Even thus counts my flock with me.<sup>2</sup> Hence, son! thou mayst rest assured that if Heaven is mine, it is thine without question. As St. Bhaktisāra has said; 'the flock has even more merit than the shepherd,'<sup>3</sup> Satrugṇa has more merit in following Bharata, than Bharata, Lord Rāma; St. Madhurakavi than St. Sathagopa; St. Āṇḍāl than St. Vishnu-Chitta, her father; and so forth.

<sup>1</sup> அவாவற்று வீடுபெற்ற சடகோபன்.

<sup>2</sup> Cp. (a) "Where I am, there also shall my minister be. If any man minister to me, him will my Father honor."

[John, XII, 26]

(b) "And I, if I be lifted up, will draw all men unto me."

[John, XII, 32]

<sup>3</sup> ஏத்தியிருப்பாரைவெல்லுமே-மற்றவரைச்

சாததியிருப்பார்த்தவம். [4th T. Āṇḍāli, 18]

33 Hence Amudanār in his immortal work Rāmānuja-nūtt-Andādi, sung daily by all the Vaishnavas and in all the Vishnu Temples, testifies to Rāmānuja's greatness as Saviour of mankind, thus:—

“Our elders aver that God dwells in His Holy Shrines in heaven and on earth, but His Holiest Shrine is the Holy Heart of Rāmānuja. Hence we worship God by worshipping Rāmānuja; by resorting to Rāmānuja we shall have resorted to all the Holy Shrines.”<sup>1</sup>

34. Naḍadūr Ammāl declared, that the way to salvation is not by works (karma), not by knowledge (jñāna or gnosis), not by devotion (bhakti), not by faith (prapatti), but by implicit trust placed in Rāmānuja; and this was the ultimate truth proclaimed to all by Amudanār in his R. N. Andādi.<sup>2</sup>

35. “Here are two Holy Names,” Kūrēsa often said, “namely, Nā-rā-ya-ṇa and Rā-mā-nu-ja, each is made up of four syllables. But Nārāyaṇa as denoting God, can both save and damn, but Rāmānuja as Saviour, can only save. In this consists our stay, strength and safety

36. “Rāmānuja,” exclaimed Amudanār, “it matters not where I am, hell or heaven, but let thy Beauteous Figure haunt me ever. To this bliss, I will forego even the Lord whom thou canst show upon thy hand”<sup>3</sup> “Where those great souls, Rāmānuja's servants, dwell, that is my Empyrean.”<sup>4</sup> “Rāmānuja,” said he addressing him directly, “My very bones may split in agony, but let me at all times and all places indulge in love for Thy servants”<sup>5</sup> It is chronicled that so addressed, Rāmānuja looked on Amudanār with eyes beaming with benevolence and passed on. And Amudanār put a finis to his hymnal by the verse.—“I seek Śrī, the spouse of Ranga, that she may bless me with the bliss of crowning my head with

<sup>1</sup> Op. cit., 106: “இருப்பிடம் உட.”

<sup>2</sup> Op. cit., 76. “நின்றவன்கீர்த்தி உட.” and 45: “பேரென்று மற்றிலை.”

<sup>3</sup> & <sup>4</sup> B. N. Andādi, 105, கையில்கனி.

<sup>5</sup> Do. 107, இன்புற்ற.

the blooms of Râmânuja's Feet—blooms of the plant of love growing in my heart.”<sup>1</sup>

Lord Ranga declared: “Both Heaven and Earth are granted thee, Râmânuja.”<sup>2</sup>

37. One day St Kulasekhara's verse. சுற்றமெல்லாம் was being read. This meant that when Râma left Ayodhya for the woods, the whole Ayodhya's kith and kin of Râma accompanied him. But some one in the auditory objected. “They only accompanied a little way off and then returned. How then did this Saint say they companied with him throughout?” Râmânuja answered: “When Lakshmana who said: “All services I shall do,”<sup>3</sup> followed, it is as if all followed, referring to himself thus.

Thus was the greatness of Râmânuja.

<sup>1</sup> B. N. Andâdi, 108, வீங்குமல்.

<sup>2</sup> Cp Jesus saying:—“All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth” [Mat. XXVIII, 18.]

<sup>3</sup> “Aham sarvam karishyâmi.” [Râm. II, 31, 25] This is an indirect reference to himself.

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

ANCIENT AUTHORITIES ON RAMANUJA.

यादवगिरिमाहान्त्ये, पाञ्चरात्रेश्वरमं हेतायाम् ॥ 20 ॥ अध्याये ॥

श्रीनारायण ॥ अस्मिन्नेवमन्त्राभक्तिं भयिष्यादवनन्दनं । प्रथमशेषरूपो मे कैङ्कर्यमक
रोद्धवन् ॥ नतस्तु नःमणोभुन्यामामागन्धिनवानिह । उदानीमविमायद्बलभद्रम्बर्हसि ॥
नलःविषुगेभ्य कश्चिद्वन्त्रिजोत्तमः । नानाविधैर्भोगजालै र्चर्चनमेकारिष्यसि ॥

अन्यत्र ॥ यादवगिरिमाहान्त्ये ॥ 1. 32 ॥

अनन्त प्रथमंरूपं द्वितीयंलक्ष्मणस्तथा । तृतीयंवलरामश्च कलौकाश्रिद्विष्याति ॥

हारीतस्मृतौ ॥ हारीतं प्रतिभगवान् ॥ ब्रह्मनकलियुगेप्राप्ते धर्मेनष्टेभुतीरिते । मङ्गल-
स्मर्वधर्मज्ञ तवगोत्रममुद्धव ॥ शारीरकमहाभाष्यप्रत्यकर्ताजितेन्द्रियः । तस्यसम्बन्धिनश्शिश्या
स्तुराणामपिदुर्गमम् ॥ मामप्रार्थ्यैवतेसर्वेगमित्यन्तिपरागतम् ॥

ब्रह्माण्डेवदरिकाश्रममाहान्त्ये ॥ मन्त्रियागाद्भूतपुर्णामहीनामीश्वरःप्रभुः । श्रीरामानुज-रूपेणभविष्यतिमत्तामुदे ॥ विशिष्टाद्वैतराद्धान्तप्रतिपादनतत्परः । भाष्यनिर्मातिवेदान्तसूत्राणा- मास्तिवेदान्ततत्त्ववित् ॥ सदाश्रयास्सदाचारास्मात्त्विकास्तत्त्वदर्शिनः । वेदान्तद्वयतत्त्वज्ञाभविष्य-न्तिगुरुत्तमाः ।

भूतपुरीमाहान्त्ये ॥ 3-104 5.

मदंशोयोमहावीर्यशेषाख्योधरणीधर । जगतामुपकारायनववंशेभविष्यति ॥

ब्रह्मैवते 29 अ ॥ अगस्त्यःतेभद्रमस्तुनपोमानत्परोभव । त्वद्वेदाविधामङ्गलै
पालितास्यात्पुन पुन ॥ अनन्तगरुडादीनासूरीणानित्ययोगिनाम् । अंशोद्धतामहाभाग जायन्ते
हमदाज्ञया ॥ पराङ्मुख कविर्भूतःकलौरामानुजोमुनिः । एतेचान्येचबहवोमङ्गलास्सङ्गवर्जिता ॥

श्रीप्रपञ्चामृते ॥

श्रीरामोभगवान्पूर्वं तत्रज्येष्ठोभवद्यथा । तथैवाङ्गलियुगे श्रीमानुलक्ष्मणदेशिक ॥
शालीवाहशकाब्दानातवाष्टत्रिंशदुत्तरे । गतेनवशतेश्रीमान्यतिराजोऽजनिचिन्ता ॥

श्रीदिव्यसूरिचरिते 17 सर्गे ॥

आर्द्रमेममर्जनिचैत्रमासितस्मादाद्भ्युत्पन्नबहुलकृपारसेनकश्चित् । निस्सीमाखिलगुणस-
ज्जनाश्रयत्वाऽङ्गीरामानुजमकृताख्ययापितायम् ॥

कुरेशः—सत्यंसत्यंपुनस्सत्यंयतिराजोजगद्गुरुः । सगुणसर्वलोकानासमुद्भूतानसंशयः ॥

APPROXIMATE DATES IN THE CHIEF EVENTS OF RÂMĀNUJA'S LIFE.

- |   |                                    |
|---|------------------------------------|
| 1. Birth at Śrīperumbûdûr ..  | A.C 1017 (ŚālivāhanaSaka 939). |
| 2. Study with Yādavaprakāsa ..  | A.C. 1033                          |
| 3. First entry to Śrīrangam to see Âlavandâr. ,,  | 1042                               |
| 4. Taking holy orders ... ..  | ,, 1049                            |
| 5. Flight to Mysore (under King Cholâ'spersecution) ... ..  | ,, 1096                            |
| 6. Convension of Bitti-deva, the King of theHoysala Country (Maisûr), andnaming him Vishnu-varohana ... | , 1098                             |
| 7. Installing Lord Śrī-Nârâyana at Melukote. ,,   | 1100                               |
| 8. Stay in this Country up to ..  | ,, 1116                            |
| 9. Return to Śrīrangam ..   | ,, 1118                            |
| 10. Finis to earthly career ... ..  | ,, 1137                            |

---

Total length of life, years 120

The Holy Lives of Dravida

Saints (Azhvars.)

Table of Saints and Sages from God downwards—
Table of all Holy shrines sacred to the Vishishtadraitins.

CONTENTS.

Hagiology.	St. Andál .
Incarnation and other Holy	St. Poygai-Azhvár.
Mysteries.	St. Púdat-Azhvár.
Miracles and Myths.	St. Pèy-Azhvár.
Symbol.	St. Tiru-Mozhisai-Azhvár
Age of the Saints.	St. Kula-Sekhar Azhvár.
Lives of the Saints.	St. Tiru-p-pan-Azhvár.
St. Tondar-adi-ppodi	St. Tiru-mangai-Azhvár.
Azhvár.	St. Madhura-Kavigal.
St. Peri-y-Azhvár.	St. Nammāzhvár.

300pp.—Cloth—Re. 1-8.

“This work deals with the Qualified Monistic (Vishishtadvaita) Philosophy and the manner in which it is written is quite unique. The author is the first to place the philosophic literature of the Qualified Monists to the Western people. Therefore the author cites the very words of the Western Philosophers, whenever possible, if they conveyed the higher philosophic conceptions of the Azhvars better, to them, than did his own.”

THE RATIONALE
OF IMAGE WORSHIP

BY
YOGI S. PARTHASARATHIENGAR

Price Rs. 6.

IN PREPARATION

BY THE SAME AUTHOR

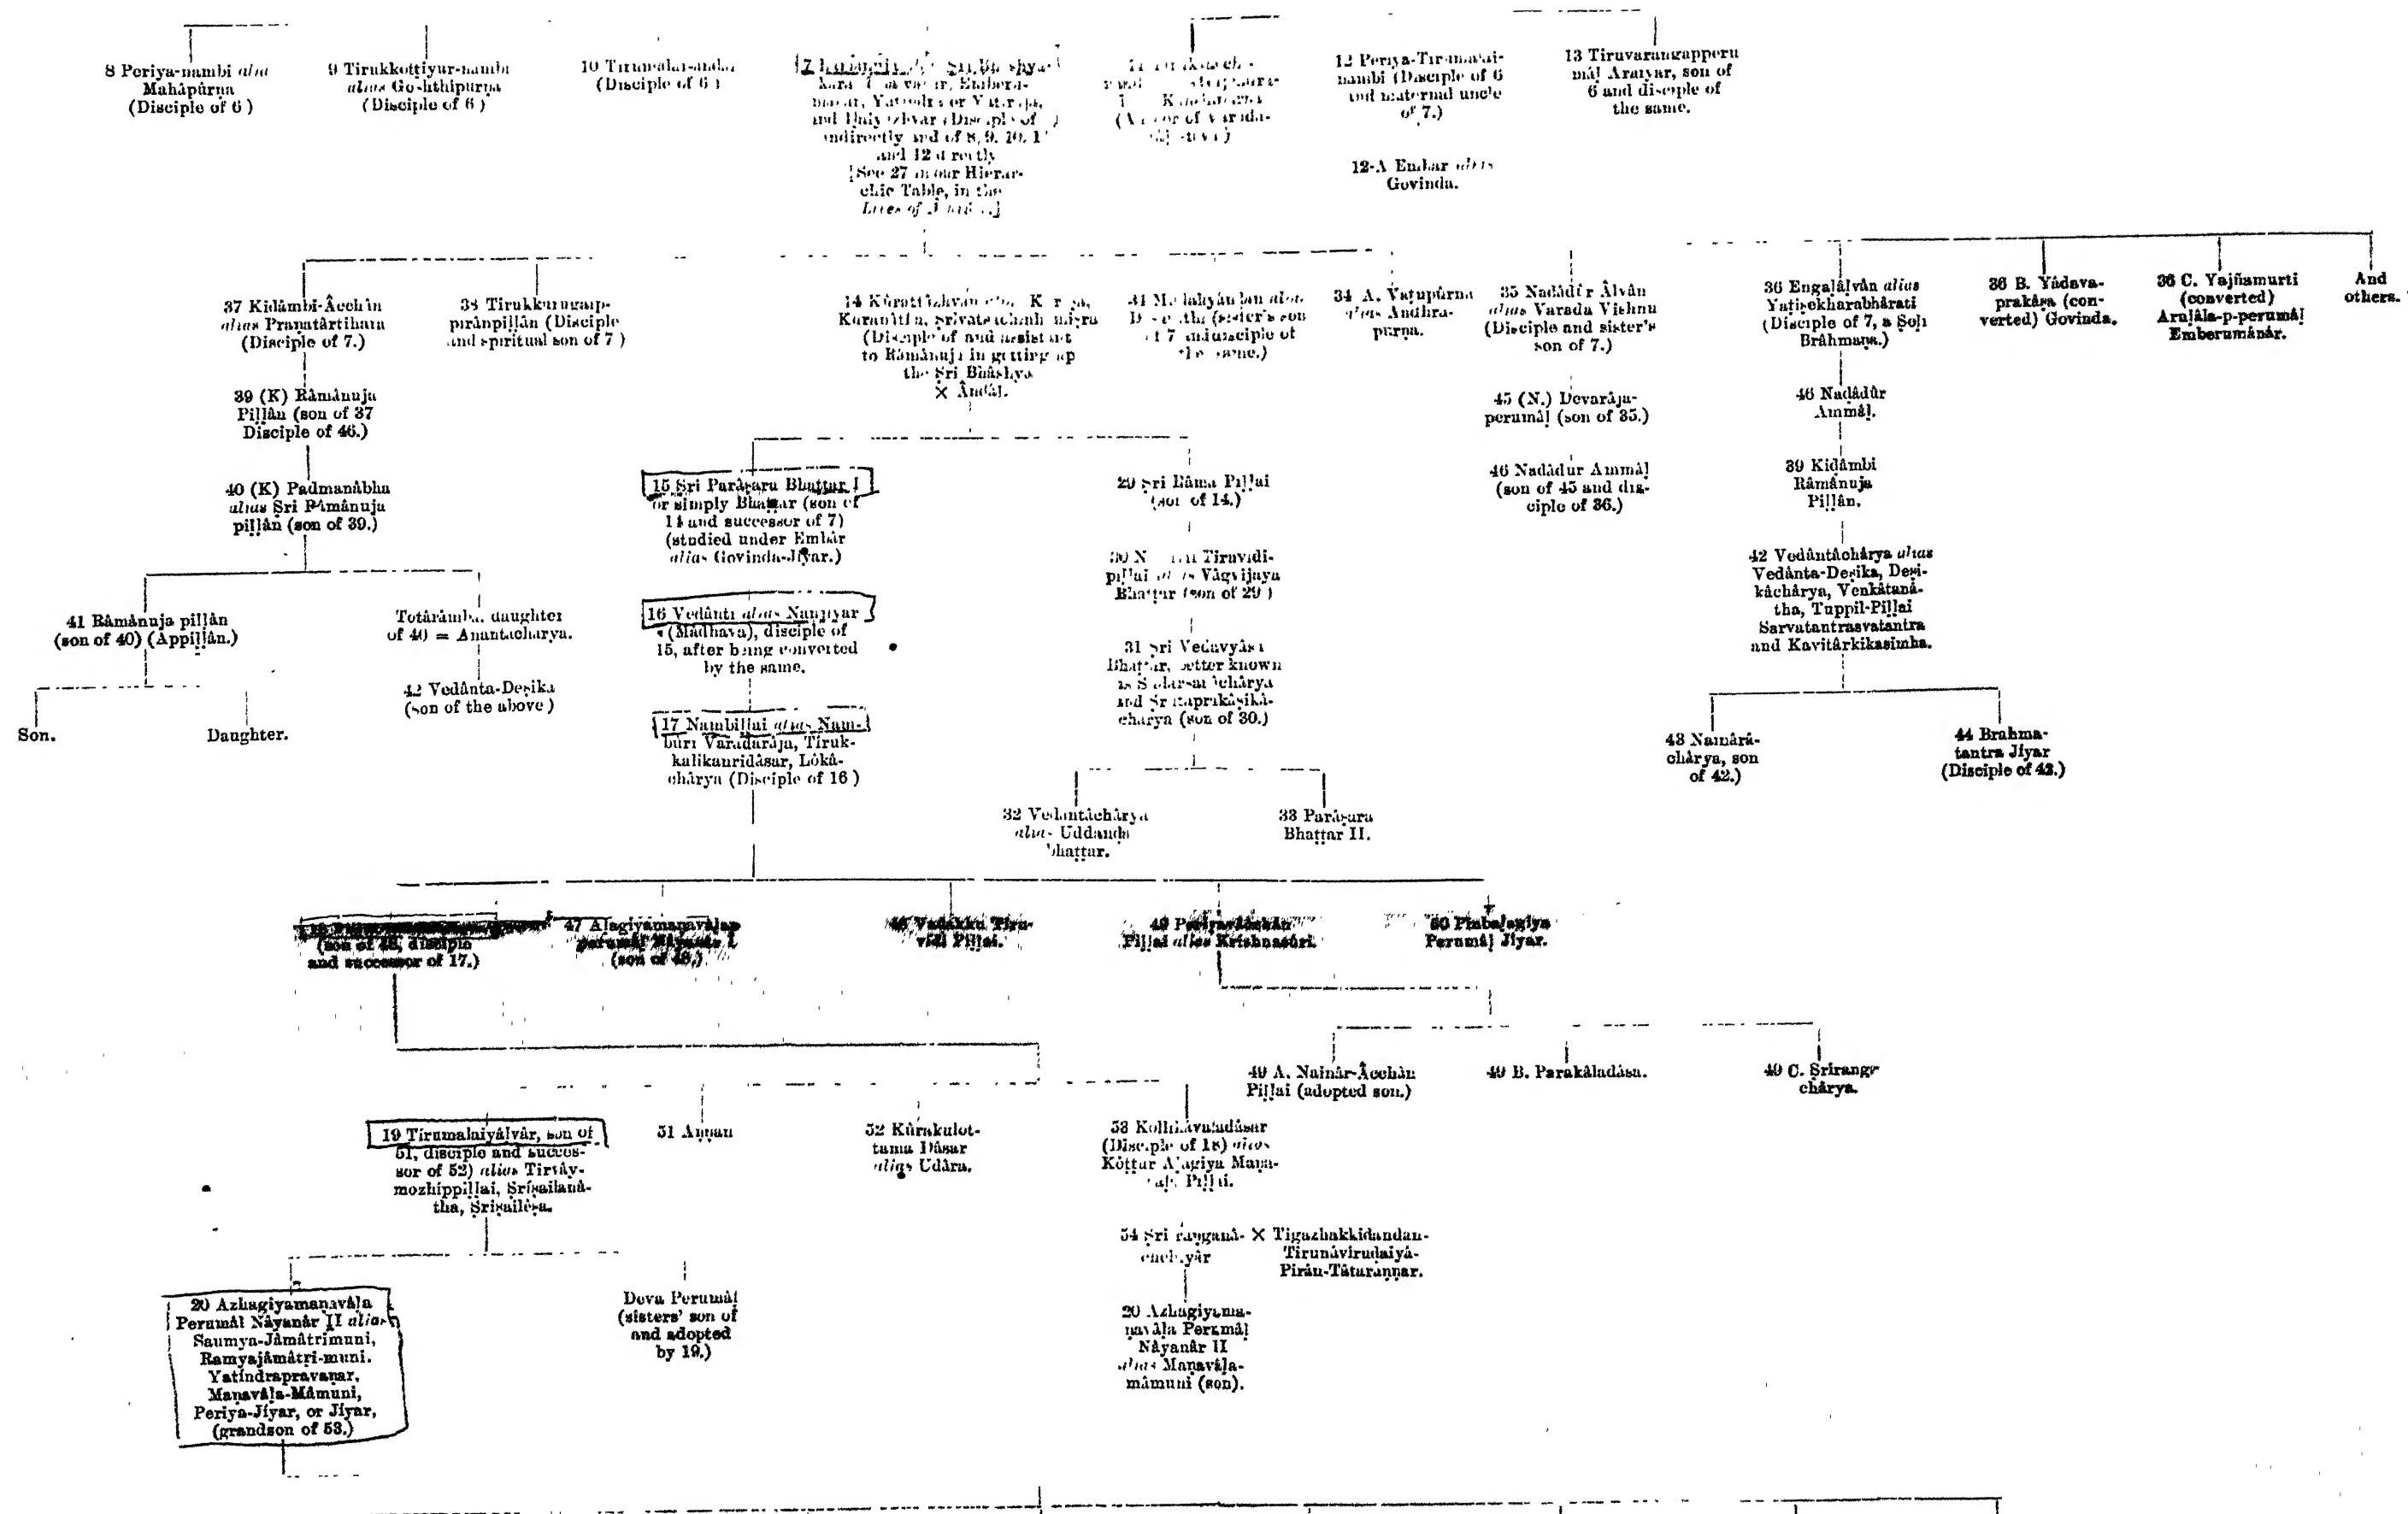

- 1 The Life of Vēdānta Desikāchārya
- 2 The Life of Manavāla Mahāmuni
- 3 Nāyāna or the Universal Religion

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100. 101. 102. 103. 104. 105. 106. 107. 108. 109. 110. 111. 112. 113. 114. 115. 116. 117. 118. 119. 120. 121. 122. 123. 124. 125. 126. 127. 128. 129. 130. 131. 132. 133. 134. 135. 136. 137. 138. 139. 140. 141. 142. 143. 144. 145. 146. 147. 148. 149. 150. 151. 152. 153. 154. 155. 156. 157. 158. 159. 160. 161. 162. 163. 164. 165. 166. 167. 168. 169. 170. 171. 172. 173. 174. 175. 176. 177. 178. 179. 180. 181. 182. 183. 184. 185. 186. 187. 188. 189. 190. 191. 192. 193. 194. 195. 196. 197. 198. 199. 200. 201. 202. 203. 204. 205. 206. 207. 208. 209. 210. 211. 212. 213. 214. 215. 216. 217. 218. 219. 220. 221. 222. 223. 224. 225. 226. 227. 228. 229. 230. 231. 232. 233. 234. 235. 236. 237. 238. 239. 240. 241. 242. 243. 244. 245. 246. 247. 248. 249. 250. 251. 252. 253. 254. 255. 256. 257. 258. 259. 260. 261. 262. 263. 264. 265. 266. 267. 268. 269. 270. 271. 272. 273. 274. 275. 276. 277. 278. 279. 280. 281. 282. 283. 284. 285. 286. 287. 288. 289. 290. 291. 292. 293. 294. 295. 296. 297. 298. 299. 300. 301. 302. 303. 304. 305. 306. 307. 308. 309. 310. 311. 312. 313. 314. 315. 316. 317. 318. 319. 320. 321. 322. 323. 324. 325. 326. 327. 328. 329. 330. 331. 332. 333. 334. 335. 336. 337. 338. 339. 340. 341. 342. 343. 344. 345. 346. 347. 348. 349. 350. 351. 352. 353. 354. 355. 356. 357. 358. 359. 360. 361. 362. 363. 364. 365. 366. 367. 368. 369. 370. 371. 372. 373. 374. 375. 376. 377. 378. 379. 380. 381. 382. 383. 384. 385. 386. 387. 388. 389. 390. 391. 392. 393. 394. 395. 396. 397. 398. 399. 400. 401. 402. 403. 404. 405. 406. 407. 408. 409. 410. 411. 412. 413. 414. 415. 416. 417. 418. 419. 420. 421. 422. 423. 424. 425. 426. 427. 428. 429. 430. 431. 432. 433. 434. 435. 436. 437. 438. 439. 440. 441. 442. 443. 444. 445. 446. 447. 448. 449. 450. 451. 452. 453. 454. 455. 456. 457. 458. 459. 460. 461. 462. 463. 464. 465. 466. 467. 468. 469. 470. 471. 472. 473. 474. 475. 476. 477. 478. 479. 480. 481. 482. 483. 484. 485. 486. 487. 488. 489. 490. 491. 492. 493. 494. 495. 496. 497. 498. 499. 500. 501. 502. 503. 504. 505. 506. 507. 508. 509. 510. 511. 512. 513. 514. 515. 516. 517. 518. 519. 520. 521. 522. 523. 524. 525. 526. 527. 528. 529. 530. 531. 532. 533. 534. 535. 536. 537. 538. 539. 540. 541. 542. 543. 544. 545. 546. 547. 548. 549. 550. 551. 552. 553. 554. 555. 556. 557. 558. 559. 560. 561. 562. 563. 564. 565. 566. 567. 568. 569. 570. 571. 572. 573. 574. 575. 576. 577. 578. 579. 580. 581. 582. 583. 584. 585. 586. 587. 588. 589. 590. 591. 592. 593. 594. 595. 596. 597. 598. 599. 600. 601. 602. 603. 604. 605. 606. 607. 608. 609. 610. 611. 612. 613. 614. 615. 616. 617. 618. 619. 620. 621. 622. 623. 624. 625. 626. 627. 628. 629. 630. 631. 632. 633. 634. 635. 636. 637. 638. 639. 640. 641. 642. 643. 644. 645. 646. 647. 648. 649. 650. 651. 652. 653. 654. 655. 656. 657. 658. 659. 660. 661. 662. 663. 664. 665. 666. 667. 668. 669. 670. 671. 672. 673. 674. 675. 676. 677. 678. 679. 680. 681. 682. 683. 684. 685. 686. 687. 688. 689. 690. 691. 692. 693. 694. 695. 696. 697. 698. 699. 700. 701. 702. 703. 704. 705. 706. 707. 708. 709. 710. 711. 712. 713. 714. 715. 716. 717. 718. 719. 720. 721. 722. 723. 724. 725. 726. 727. 728. 729. 730. 731. 732. 733. 734. 735. 736. 737. 738. 739. 740. 741. 742. 743. 744. 745. 746. 747. 748. 749. 750. 751. 752. 753. 754. 755. 756. 757. 758. 759. 760. 761. 762. 763. 764. 765. 766. 767. 768. 769. 770. 771. 772. 773. 774. 775. 776. 777. 778. 779. 780. 781. 782. 783. 784. 785. 786. 787. 788. 789. 790. 791. 792. 793. 794. 795. 796. 797. 798. 799. 800. 801. 802. 803. 804. 805. 806. 807. 808. 809. 810. 811. 812. 813. 814. 815. 816. 817. 818. 819. 820. 821. 822. 823. 824. 825. 826. 827. 828. 829. 830. 831. 832. 833. 834. 835. 836. 837. 838. 839. 840. 84

22

The Holy Lives of Thiravida

Saints (Mazhvars.)

Table of Saints and Sages from God downwards—
Table of all Holy shrines sacred to the Vishnavaitans.

